Garner Sees Farley; Both To Go Before Convention

Rivals Decide To Offer Names Unconditionally, Friends Indicate

The names of Postmaster General James A. Farley and Vice President John Nance Garner will be presented to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago unconditionally.

This was indicated again last night in responsible quarters following a 90-minute luncheon conference between Farley and Garner in the Vice President's offices at the Capitol.

Neither Farley nor Garner, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Democratic National Committee and the only Democratic Presidential possibilities who have never officially attached an "if" to their candidacies, would comment following the conference.

But it was pointed out by friends that both have assumed from the start that the President will not run for reelection, and have never had reason to change that view.

Nor have Garner managers altered their original announcement that Garner's name will be presented to the convention regardless of whether the President's is.

E. B. Germany, cochairman of the national Garner campaign committee, stressed last night that the recent agreement not to oppose Roosevelt "means absolutely nothing at all so far as the Garner campaign either in Texas or throughout the Nation is concerned."

No 'Stop Roosevelt' Drive

"The stipulations in the so-called (Roosevelt - Garner) agreement merely restate the basis of the Garner movement from its inception," said Germany following a late afternoon talk with the Vice President. "It has never been a 'stop Roosevelt movement' either in Texas or elsewhere. We are merely for John Garner and against no one."

Postmaster General Farley, who has emphatically announced, without any qualifications, that his name will go before the convention, has said nothing to the contrary since, friends remarked.

Farley has never publicly opposed a third term; neither has he declared for one. Wherever he has spoken he has lauded President Roosevelt and the achievements of the New Deal. But privately he has opposed a third term unless some unforeseen urgency develops.

Farley's luncheon conference with Garner yesterday was the second talk they have had in two days, it was learned. Particular interest centered on their long Capitol conversation since these two have been more independent than any other Democratic candidates in striking out for the nomination in the expectation that their chief doesn't want it.

Farley, Hull Linked

Farley's name has been mentioned in combination with virtually every other candidate, usually in the Vice Presidential role. It has been linked more frequently of late with that of Secretary of State Hull, who repeatedly disclaims any Presidential ambitions. Formerly a Garner-Farley ticket had been much discussed.

Both men are said privately to oppose Attorney General Robert H. Jackson for either first or second place on the ticket. Yet Jackson's stock, highly favored by the President, has risen steadily in New Deal speculation.

One motive frequently advanced for the ever-widening "draft Roosevelt" drive is to give the President, who already has enough strength for his own nomination, a control of the convention sufficient to enable him to name Jackson or some other New Deal candidate to the left of the party's middle-road.

Embarrasses Farley, Who Expected 500; 4,800 Came Instead

Democratic women—all of them willing and anxious to come to the aid of their party—stormed Washington yesterday in numbers that startled leaders at Democratic national headquarters.

Whereas in reply to invitations sent over the country for a National Institute of Government about 500 acceptances were expected, there were actually 4,800 enthusiastic workers here last night. Every State was represented and two women came from Puerto Rico.

Grandmothers, debutantes, spinsters, housewives, most of whom plan to spend the summer in the party trenches, overran hotels, filled Capitol corridors, crowded into available auditoriums. They ran members of Congress ragged.

Bewildered, James A. Farley did his best with words of advice. Mrs. Roosevelt's voice teacher taught them platform manners—no crossed legs, no squeaky voices, no sloppy platform postures, no sitting in "easy chairs."

Breckinridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, told a forum on foreign policy and national defense that the primary policy of the United States was to keep out of the war in Europe.

White House Party Today

Institute sessions continue today. In addition there will be a White House lawn party that threatens to give the Executive Mansion grounds a workout rivaling the Easter egg rolling. When tickets for Mrs. Roosevelt's 4:30 p. m. reception were given out at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday it was the season's most strenuous bargain counter rush.

Dempsey Asks Recount On Hatch Bill

Declares Majority On Committee Said They Were Against Pigeon-Holing It

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Accuracy of the secret count by which the House Judiciary Committee pigeonholed the Hatch "clean politics" bill was challenged in the House yesterday by Representative John J. Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico.

Dempsey asked a recount. He said 14 of the 26 Judiciary Committee men had informed him and others that they voted against tabling the bill, but the committee's announced vote showed the secret ballot 14 to 10 for pigeonholing.

The New Mexico Democrat, conducting a one-man crusade to force House action on the Senate-passed measure, said he conceded an "honest mistake" had been made and called on the committee to reconsider.

He won quick support from Representative Abe Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, who fought the almost unprecedented secret ballot procedure in the committee and cast one of the known votes against tabling.

Murdock said he would move at the next meeting of the Judiciary Committee to reconsider the official 14 to 10 vote which sidetracked the bill.

Dislikes Secrecy

"I didn't like the secret vote," said Murdock. "It smacks of star chamber and dictatorship proceedings, not of parliamentary government in a representative democracy. But if the committee will reconsider the vote, I am perfectly willing to submit again to a secret ballot."

Members of the Judiciary Committee are Chairman Sumners, of Texas; Celler, of New York; Weaver, of North Carolina; Healey, of Massachusetts; Walter, of Pennsylvania; McLaughlin, of Nebraska; Hobbs, of Alabama; Murdock; Tolan, of California; Creal, of Kentucky; Byrne, of New York; Massingale, of Oklahoma; Satterfield, of Virginia; Barnes, of Illinois; Gibbs, of Georgia, and Kefauver, of Tennessee, all Democrats. Guyer, of Kansas; Hancock, of New York; Michener, of Michigan; Robsion, of Kentucky; Reed, of Illinois; Gwynne, of Iowa; Graham, of Pennsylvania; Monkiewicz, of Connecticut; Springer, of Indiana, and Vreeland, of New Jersey, Republicans.

Dempsey meanwhile prepared two other moves in the House today to blast the bill from the Judiciary Committee's shelf. In the morning he will make what may be a futile effort to persuade the Rules Committee to consider and approve his resolution giving a House green light to the Hatch bill within ten days.

Sumners Silent

Should this fail he will place on the Speaker's rostrum today his petition asking discharge of the Judiciary Committee. If this is signed by a majority (218) of House members, a vote on the bill automatically will be forced in the House.

Dempsey abandoned an alternative plan to discharge the Rules Committee from consideration of his right-of-way resolution, "because we would have to wait seven days under the rules, and we can't afford that delay."

Ranking Democratic Judiciary Committee men continued their silence. Chairman Sumners decided

Inquiry Sees NLRB Letter To Bridges

Edwin Smith And C. I. O. Leader Agreed 'Right Sort Of Man' Was Needed

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Agreement between Harry Bridges and Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, on "the importance of having the right sort of man" try board cases in Hawaii was disclosed yesterday in correspondence spread before House investigators.

A letter to Smith from the West Coast C. I. O. director, placed in the record of the special committee studying the NLRB, urged selection of "a strong man who will be able to resist employer arguments" for the post in Honolulu. Bridges suggested Bertram Edises, acting regional director in San Francisco, or Elwin J. Eagen, regional director at Seattle.

Smith Letter Exhibited

Smith, in a letter dated January 11, 1938, informed Bridges the board was keeping "very much in mind" the necessity of choosing the right man for Hawaii, but had not been able to send Edises because of the pressure of business in the San Francisco office.

Bridges asserted in his letter that forces were at work in the San Francisco area which "would be very glad to see Mr. Edises go to Honolulu and have the regional board run smoothly, although possibly not to the very great advantage of the unions nad the workers."

The C. I. O. leader said transfer of Edises to Honolulu would create a "bad situation" in San Francisco, but wrote Smith, "I hope you will do what you can to see that somebody of the type of Mr. Eagen or Mr. Edises can be immediately selected for Hawaii."

Questioned by Committee Counsel Edmund H. Toland, Smith denied the board ever designated attorneys "at the instance and request" of Bridges.

Eagen Was Congratulated

The NLRB official identified a letter written to Eagen three years ago, after the latter had returned from Hawaii, congratulating him on "a job that may have far-reaching consequences."

"As the workers in the East become conscious of rights which are their due," Smith wrote, "the whole aspect of national and international affairs in the Orient should take a turn for the better. The stones you have thrown into the pool at Hawaii may cause ripples that will reach to very distant places."

Earlier yesterday the committee studied evidence that the board ordered reopening of the American Newspaper Guild case against the Detroit Times without consulting the regional attorney who handled the case and against the board officials who had handled the case and despite acceptance by the newspaper and the guild of the original settlement.

The board vacated its order and dismissed the action after Nathan Witt, board secretary, received a letter of protest from Harold A. Cranefield, regional attorney.

Gov. Johnson, Editor Draw Blood in Fight

Jackson, Miss., May 2 (AP).—Gov. Paul Johnson and Maj. Frederick Sullens, editor of the anti-Administration Jackson Daily News, tonight engaged in a fight in the lobby of a downtown hotel. Both drew blood.

Sullens was hurried to a doctor's office by his wife and daughter for an X-ray examination of a head wound. Johnson was reported "resting in bed" at the executive mansion.

Maj. G. W. Buck, a close friend of the Governor, was talking with Johnson, when the latter suddenly noted Sullens.

"He (Gov. Johnson) jumped over me so fast I didn't know what was happening until blood was shooting every which way from Sunday," Buck related.

An Old Debt Is Settled

Thrice-Vetoed War Claim Bill Made Law by Senate, 76 to 3

Before Congress many years, thrice passed and thrice vetoed, a bill yesterday was enacted into law despite Presidential disapproval.

The Senate voted, 76 to 3, to override Roosevelt's latest veto and thereby wrote into law legislation to grant travel pay and food allowances for officers and men held in service in the Philippines after the War with Spain.

The first two vetoes—in 1935 and 1938—were sustained by Congress.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, urging the latest veto be overridden, told the Senate the legislation involved between 7,000 and 8,000 claims totaling about $3,200,000.

The President had contended that the payments would amount to about $7,000,000 for 15,800 men, "a gratuity to each of the officers and men concerned." He added that it would be "a benefit utterly without warrant, since each individual has already received transportation and subsistence at Government expense for the journey performed, in addition to full pay for the entire time."

Burke asserted "it would not be a gratuity at all," and added that the men involved were entitled to be mustered out of service when the peace treaty with Spain was ratified April 11, 1899.

He said that the Philippine insurrection had assumed major proportions, and that the troops had been retained in the islands to quell it.

He said that the men had a right to the travel and food allowances, but that legal technicalities had prevented them from exercising it, and Congress had a "moral obligation" to make the payments.

Nazis Hint Action in Sweden As Allies Quit Lower Norway, Speed Battle Fleet to Egypt

Chamberlain Warns Lightning Thrust Is Possible Even Against England

By the Associated Press

London, May 2.—Great Britain abandoned her struggle in lower Norway today and, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons, snatched her battle-tired troops from Andalsnes from under the very bomb sights of the German air force that they may live to fight another day for Norway and for England.

His face etched with the lines of anxiety and fatigue, Chamberlain gave Commons a precise, if incomplete accounting of the first phase of the Norwegian campaign, now 23 days old, and then faced suddenly south to brandish the whip of Allied naval power in the direction of Italy.

After proudly asserting that the Royal Navy's feats in the north had "altered the entire balance of naval power" he disclosed that a strong British and French battle fleet was steaming through the eastern basin of the Mediterranean, toward Alexandria, where it can keep its eyes on Italy.

Spoke to Packed House

Chamberlain told the listeners who packed the benches and steep balconies of the House that the Allies intend to fight on in Norway, to "seize every chance to inflict damage on the enemy" from their land concentrations above Trondheim and in the Arctic region and by air and sea.

Although Chamberlain refused to disclose the course of future operations in Norway, now that the campaign from south of Trondheim has been scrapped, it was learned the Allies almost certainly will fling a line across the country above Trondheim from the coast to the Swedish frontier.

This would provide favorable bases for counter-attacks on the Germans and protect "mopping up" operations at Arctic Narvik, where the Allies are moving slowly but steadily in on the Germans who occupy the port.

Aim Blow at Trondheim

Although Chamberlain said Norway was not to become "a sideshow," he warned his homeland as well as the neutrals in the West of Europe and in the Southeast that they must be ready for new German lightning strokes. Germany, he added, could not trap the Allies into dispersing their forces and weakening "the vital center."

The Germans, he said, may even make a lightning swoop "on this country."

Chamberlain insisted it was too early to strike a true "balance sheet" in Norway, despite his frank

Weapon Carrier Seized at Station As King Returns

By International News Service

London, May 2.—A man about 25 years old was arrested tonight at a railroad station where King George and Queen Elizabeth arrived from a northern tour.

The arrest occurred shortly after Their Majesties arrived and the man arrested and taken to a cloakroom for a thorough search, was charged with possession of an offensive weapon.

Few persons in the Euston railroad station were aware ofthe incident and the King and Queen apparently knew nothing of it until after the man, who showed no resistance, was taken from the station in a police car.

British Radio Warns Rumania

London, May 2 (U.P.).—The British Broadcasting Corporation's nightly Rumanian bulletin tonight urgently appealed to Rumania not to delay a request for Allied aid.

"In Palestine, Syria and Egypt great armies of England and France are massing," the broadcast said. "Hitler understands nothing but force and the Allies have enough force in the Near East to smash utterly any Balkan adventure Hitler may undertake."

Stockholm, May 2.—King Haakon VII of Norway, the royal family and the Nygaardsvold government have fled from the port of Molde, only 28 miles from German-occupied Andalsnes, and are en route to "an unknown destination" in the north, a Norwegian spokesman announced tonight.

Ciano Limited Peace Pledge, Italians Say

Assurances Given To U. S. Good Only Ten Days, Is Report

By Richard G. Massock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, May 2.—United States Ambassador William Phillips has received only limited assurances of Italy's peaceful intentions from Foreign Minister Count Ciano, reliable political circles reported tonight, as official Italians expressed indifference at Allied precautionary measures in tthe Mediterranean, including the dispatch of a battle fleet to Egypt.

(The United Press reported that Phillips was understood to have told Mussolini that if Italy entered the European war American shipping would be withdrawn from the Mediterranean in accordance with the United States Neutrality Act, hampering Italian economy considerably.)

Phillips was reassured today by Ciano only that Italy contemplates no warlike moves within the next ten days, it was reported.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement that the British and French battle fleets are in the eastern Mediterranean were reinforced by extraordinary defense measures in Egypt.

Diplomatic circles interpreted these developments as an emphatic warning that Britain and her Allies are prepared to combat any Italian attempt to profit from the Allied setback in Scandinavia.

Declare English Are in 'Wild Flight' From Lower Norway

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 2.—German troops hoisted the Nazi war flag today at Andalsnes, on Norway's rugged west coast, and the Reich hailed with undiluted joy what it called the "wild flight" of the British from lower Norway.

A high command communique tonight said the German flag was hosted at 3 p. m. in the landing port abandoned by the British after German troops had tirelessly pursued their enemies to the sea.

Government spokesmen said they were not surprised at this action, foreshadowed by the announcement of British withdrawal by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

"Head Over Heels"

Chamberlain's statement came as Germans learned from the high command that an Allied "head over heels" retreat had delivered virtually all of southern and central Norway into Nazi hands and that German bombers had rained new destruction on British sea forces.

"We look soon to the complete abandonment of Norway by the Allies," declared one authorized commentator.

Twice today the high command told of severe aerial blows to British warships in Norwegian waters, including two aircraft carriers and a cruiser.

War Department Eyes Opened

Nazi Aircraft Make U. S. Planes Obsolete, Senators Hear

Germany's fighting airplanes in the European war have rendered obsolete even the newest planes produced in the United States, a Senate committee was told yesterday.

Coming on the heels of Secretary of the Navy Edison's declaration yesterday that bombing, particularly as developed by Germany, has made necessary revision of defense structure of American warships, today's evidence revealed modernization of American planes also is essential to national defense, committee members declared.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, asserted after lengthy testimony by Brig. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, that American aircraft "could not stand up" to German planes in the field of air combat because of these three features developed by Germany:

1. Self-sealing gasoline tanks.
2. Protective armor for pilots and crews.
3. Large-calibre guns, sufficient to crash enemy craft.

"The German planes have opened the eyes of the War Department," Thomas said. "They have rendered obsolete even our latest planes, though some of our planes now under order will be so equipped.

"In the purely combat field, we do not today have planes that could stand up against the German fighters. In the field of fighting airplanes, we are just beginning. There must be a complete replanning and reconstruction of the straight combat planes in the United States Air Corps."

Norse Continuing Resistance in East; Fight Held Likely Above Trondheim

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, May 2.—The first phase of the war in Norway—the blitzkrieg phase, if not the war itself—came to an end today when the Allies bowing to their defeat at the Dovre railroad, evacuated Andalsnes and other southern landing bases, and therewith surrendered all of Norway south of Steinkjer to the victorious German troops. The swastika banner rose over Andalsnes at 3 p. m. today.

[The Associated Press reported early today from Stockholm that German troops from the Oslo district began flooding northward toward Trondheim and a possible battle with Allied forces north of that big port. The Germans were reported already advancing quickly to recapture such points as Roros and Tynset in the Glomma River valley which they abandoned Tuesday.]

Battles are still raging near the Dovre Railroad, but on the Allied side they are being fought only by die-hard Norwegians and doomed battalions that covered the last stages of the Allied retreat. For the Germans, these battles are merely mopping-up operations to crush the last centers of resistance.

These centers are believed to be in the Storen district and along the mountain roads leading from Opdal to Sunndal, where the British established a landing base only a few days ago, presumably to rescue the troops concentrated at Hjerkinn and adjacent places.

Occupation in Doubt

Whether these troops will really manage to escape or whether, as some fear, a considerable number of them will fall into German hands, remains to be seen. But that the German control of the Dovre Railroad is not yet quite complete, is indicated by the fact that, after announcing possession of that railroad from Trondheim to Opdal several days ago, the German army communique today announces its possession from Dombas to Ulsberg, leaving the Storen section in doubt.

[Peter C. Rhodes, United Press staff writer, reported from Stockholm that Norwegian spokesmen complained tonight that the Allied withdrawal from southern Norway had left Norwegian troops in a Nazi trap, and predicted that Germany might serve an ultimatum on Sweden or perhaps extend the war to Swedish soil in some lightning blow.

[German quarters, this dispatch continued, said the brunt of the war may now be shifted northward to the Narvik region, and admitted that Germany might possibly be compelled to "take action in Sweden" in order to protect deliveries of Swedish iron ore.]

Resistance in the East

There are also some centers of Norwegian resistance in the east, principally around Roros and Trysil. But the Germans are already advancing to retake Roros with stronger forces than before and, though the Norwegians are trying to stop them at Os, where a skirmish is now under way, there is little hope of success. And the chances around Trysil are no greater.

The Germans are losing no time in completing their domination of the country they have conquered. According to German announcements, the German landing force at Bergen has established contact with the German troops advancing up the Halling valley along the Oslo-

A. E. F. WITH WINGS?

WARMONGERS? When I was a city editor I discovered that a gruesome murder story on Page 1 often brought a burst of phone calls and letters of protest.

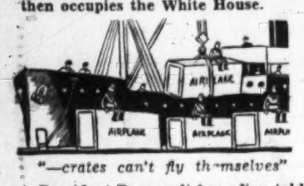
U. S. WAR PILOTS: Talk of sending American airplane pilots overseas is becoming so frequent here that it can scarcely be ignored.

It comes from men who have regular access to the White House, men who have been called intimates of the president, men who often know what the Government is thinking long before thoughts are translated to action.

* * * *

Such talk also comes from opposition men who are far from being intimates of the President, but who would probably be intimates of his successor. So their speculations are significant for 1941, no matter who then occupies the White House.



"—crates can't fly themselves"

President Roosevelt has often told his close advisers that he will never send an American Army overseas. But he has never said that he will never send American warships or air squadrons overseas.

* * * *

Today the realization is sharper that it takes almost two years to train a young man to fly a 400-mile-an-hour pursuit plane or a big bombing plane effectively, and that the Allies will soon be running short of pilots to fly the American planes they are buying.

* * * *

Pilots for the Royal Flying Corps whose training began in Canada since the war started won't be ready to fight until the summer of 1941, by this reckoning. Perhaps half who begin to train can't make the grade. Courage alone isn't enough; landing a plane at 80 m.p.h requires special qualities.

* * * *

Such figures as our Army and Navy are willing to release show that the Army now has 2,818 pilots (including 785 reserve officers) and the Navy has 5,124 pilots, including 491 Marine Corps fliers, or a grand total of 7,942 pilots. By the summer of 1941 the total will probably reach 10,000.

* * * *

How many of these could be spared, even if public opinion tolerated sending some of them overseas, is dubious. Certainly not more than 1,000. There is some purely unofficial talk of sending only pilots who volunteer for overseas service.

* * * *

In addition, there are 33,188 licensed civilian pilots. The CAA's civilian training schools have turned out 712 pilots. Most of these would need at least a year's additional training. There are now 32,819 enrolled in the CAA schools.

* * * *

This talk is so far merely talk; no one has quoted Mr. Roosevelt as discussing the sending of pilots; and no one knows whether the country would stand for it even if the Allies were desperate.

COBWEBS AT HQ.: An almost comical stalemate prevails in the Democratic high command as the 1940 Presidential campaign gets under way. Devoted to Franklin Roosevelt, but loyal also to his boss, Jim Farley, the director of publicity, venerable, seasoned, shrewd old Charlie Michelson, devotes himself largely to fatherly, kindly, humorous scoffing at Tom Dewey in his brief weekly essays.

* * * *

Every day the G. O. P. blasts at the Democrats with tons of speeches, statements and press releases. But they remain mostly unanswered, because the headquarters doesn't know whether it must fight for or against a third term. Every hour or so messenger boys bring fat envelopes filled with new GOP sallies; but the lads in uniform bring little or nothing from the Democratic medicine men.

* * * *

Aside from Mr. Michelson, who seems fairly neutral, the top men at Democratic headquarters are Farley men, though they don't exactly flaunt any disrespect toward the White House. They rely on the 3½ months after July 15 as long enough for a campaign. But some of the New Dealers with ants in their pants want to toss some brickbats back at the GOP during the next 75 days, and the missiles would have a rich third-term aroma.

Allies Defend U. S. Ideals, Chamber Told

Democracy Depends On Their Victory Lewis Douglas Says

Lewis Douglas, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York and President Roosevelt's first budget director, declared last night that continuance of democracy as the United States has known it depends on Allied victory in the European war.

His speech, delivered at a banquet at the Willard Hotel, brought to a close the twenty-eighth annual meeting here of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber, at its final business session yesterday morning, adopted an emphatic National defense resolution but declared that "Congress should reaffirm its determination to keep the United States out of war, unless our Nation is endangered."

Favors Independent FCC

Stressed the need for "positive steps" toward a balanced budget by cutting expenditures;

Opposed a further increase in the debt limit;

Assailed the Administration's "easy money" policy;

Suggested changes in the securities acts to remove business deterrents;

Asked that tax laws be overhauled;

Attacked Federal encroachments on States' rights;

Proposed repeal of the Wage-Hour Act;

Supported the Walter-Logan bill to curb administrative agencies;

Kemper Named President

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, was reelected treasurer.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, addressing a luncheon meeting of chamber delegates, said that, in the present world situation, "it may well come to pass" that the 5-5-3 naval ratio, whereby this country would have parity with Great Britain, would be no longer sufficient to protect the Nation on both oceans.

"We must look to our own naval strength, and that alone," he declared.

"All signs," he said, point to the possibility that the wars in Europe and Asia would become a "general conflagration."

Douglas, who broke with the President over his fiscal policies, declared that the country must face the world situation for what it is. It cannot "preserve the essential elements of the American experiment," he said, by crawling into a political and economic cyclone cellar and drawing "the trap door after us."

"Can't Escape Consequences"

To do that, he argued, ultimately would mean the "establishment of a totalitarian state at home."

On the other hand, he said, if England and France are crushed by Hitlerism, the United States, in self-defense, would have to resort to totalitarian devices in "more temperate and more human form" and thus be "pushed into the same type of life so repugnant to the ideals of our country."

"This is not merely another European war," he declared. "This is a struggle between two wholly contradictory, two clashing ways of life. We cannot escape the consequences of its outcome. Should the lands of Rousseau and Burke succeed, it will be difficult enough to reconstruct a peaceful world. It will be impossible should they fail."

Douglas declared that both Government and business would have to put its house in order.

He called on businessmen "to demonstrate that we possess a capacity to resolve conflicts in terms of the national good at the expense, if need be, of our pocketbooks."

"If we would enjoy freedom," he declared, "we must prove that we have earned it."

"Honest Inquest" Urged

Businessmen, he said, "must turn the searching light of an honest inquest" on their practices and problems, and must modify what cannot be sincerely defended."

"We must root out of our procedure," he declared, "those practices which impinge on a free market, for private monopoly leads with an almost grim inevitability to public monopoly. As between the two, in principle there is little difference.

"Both are depressants on employment. Both have the effect of corrupting a government of limited powers, and both impair, at least, freedom of inquiry and liberty of expression."

Princeton, N. J., May 2.—The largest defection in Democratic Party sentiment since 1936, with corresponding Republican gains, has taken place in states of the Mid-West and Great Lakes region, judging by the results of national soundings of public sentiment by the American Institute.

DR. GALLUP

While the Democratic party has a slight edge over the G. O. P. throughout the nation in these studies, the gain in Republican sentiment ranges as high as 20 to 25 percentage points in some States. The greatest shift has come in North Dakota, where Democratic strength is 25 points below 1936, and in Wisconsin, where the defection has been 23 points.

Gain In 17 States

In 17 States, the study shows, there has been a gain of 10 points or more in Republican strength, and a corresponding loss for Democrats. Another 12 States show Democratic losses of 5 to 10 points, while in 9 States the shift has been 5 or less.

In the remaining 10 States—all of them in the South—the Democrats have made gains, ranging from one to four points.

The study is based on the answers of a cross-section of voters in all States to the question:

Defeat Revised Norton Bill, Author Urges

15 New Amendments Exempt 2 Million From Pay-Hour Law

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In a series of some 15 new amendments to the Norton bill, the House yesterday tentatively recorded its approval of withdrawing an estimated 2,000,000 workers from protection of the wage-hour law.

Denouncing the bill which bears her name as a "disgrace to the country" in its present form, Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee, urged repudiation of the measure. She thus followed the precedent set some 48 hours previously when Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, disowned his wage-hour bill after it, too, had been "loaded down" with amendments.

Fate of the Norton bill, which will be finally decided today, was in doubt, but it appeared last night that the long list of amendments and exemptions had not helped its chance of passage. Most urban Representatives are now dead set against the measure; and the farm group has not forgotten that it needs city votes for parity payments next week.

Ramspeck Opposes Bill

Representative Ramspeck, Georgia Democrat who favors some alteration of the present law, declared last night that he would now work for defeat of the entire group of amendments known as the Norton bill, inasmuch as when the deciding vote comes, they will have to be approved or disapproved as a whole. He said that if these amendments were defeated—as the Barden bill was defeated Tuesday—he hoped the House would then adopt the original bill introduced last March, which would make a few Administration-approved changes in the present act.

Most sweeping of all the amendments approved yesterday was a proposal by Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, that protection of both wage and hour provisions of the law be taken from all employes—irrespective of whether they work near or far from the farm—who are engaged in canning, freezing and processing perishable fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. Norton quoted Labor Department figures showing that this amendment, which was adopted by a vote of 52 to 40, would exempt approximately 1,000,000 workers from the wage-hour act.

Blizzard of Amendments

An estimated 200,000 employes are taken "out from under" the wage and hour provisions by the Buck amendment, which was adopted Wednesday and reaffirmed yesterday when the House turned down, 45 to 103, an attempt of Representative Welch (Republican), of California, to modify it.

In a blizzard of other amendments approved yesterday—most of them by voice vote, the House eased or removed restrictions on such varied activities as forest firefighting, storing of fruits and vegetables and handling of potatoes.

Exemptions were granted to small newspapers, to wholesale grocers and to persons earning a guaranteed annual salary of $1,500 or more. The present law was altered to knock out the controversial "areas of production" phrase. This amendment, it was believed, would exempt many thousands of workers.

"No One Knows"

Another amendment would permit a flexible work week for employes over a 6 or 12 month period, as long as the week did not average more than 40 hours.

The measure was in such a state shortly before the House quit for the day that Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, shouted on the floor that that "no one knows just what this legislation contains—and I don't think you are able to intelligently vote on this bill."

However, his motion to kill the entire measure was snowed under by a vote of 53 to 113. At the end of the day, Mrs. Norton put into the Congressional Record a letter from Secretary Perkins analyzing and attacking the Buck amendment to the pending bill.

According to the Secretary, this provision not only removes more than 200,000 workers from the wage-hour law, but also wipes out the child-labor restrictions in respect to this group. She pointed out that the persons affected by the Buck amendment would be largely migrant workers.

Commerce Aides' Appointment Follows Plea for Southerner

J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce since 1935, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Johnson, a native of Marion, S. C., who will be 62 next Sunday, was named to fill out the unexpired term of M. M. Caskie, of Alabama, who resigned. The term expires December 31, 1941.

Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, said that more than 15 Senators had urged the President to name to the commission a Southerner who was familiar with the South's transportation problems. He said the Chief Executive felt he had obtained in Johnson a man with "a very good working knowledge of railroad problems" and one who is familiar with the South's troubles.

Hinckley May Get Job

At the same time the appointment was interpreted in some circles as something of a countermove against those seeking to block the President's order transferring the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department. These circles pointed out that Johnson had jurisdiction over the old aviation board at the time it came under such heavy Congressional fire that the CAA was created. The same circles cited reports that Mr. Roosevelt was planning to name CAA Chairman Robert Hinckley as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. In this post Hinckley would be responsible for successful operation of the CAA if it should be transferred to the Commerce Department.

Independence Sought

Chairman Hinckley, meanwhile, said that he has asked Attorney General Jackson for an opinion to "nail down" the CAA's independence from outside interference once it becomes a unit of the Commerce Department. He revealed the maneuver after an hour's conference with President Roosevelt.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, author of the CAA Act, said yesterday he has obtained an agreement whereby the Senate may vote next week on his resolution to kill the reorganization order. A similar resolution has been introduced in the House by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California.

Wallace Asks Aid for Farm Migrants

Long-Range Program For Rural Rebuilding Urged by Secretary

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday called on Congress to solve the migratory farm worker problem by sponsoring a long-range program of rural reconstruction.

Idle men and money could be put to work for ten years rebuilding the land, "we have wasted shamefully for generations," he told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, opening an inquiry into the farm migrant picture.

"In the South alone," he said, "thousands of men could find useful work for more than a decade, rebuilding the forests, controlling the floods and restoring eroded land.

"Every penny spent on a rehabilitation program would be a wise investment in capital assets, and unless something is done the country will be creating new migrants and be building a new backlog of poverty."

He suggested as a means to reduce farm tenancy, that renting farmers be given assistance to become owners and that debt-ridden owners be aided to lift the burden.

"This army of uprooted, homeless families," Wallace said, "may lay its troubles to problems which have afflicted American agriculture for many years.

"They arise directly out of the waste and exhaustion of our soil, which has gone unchecked for more than a century, years of ruinous farm prices, the disappearance of foreign markets, unsound systems of tenure, an alarming increase in farm tenancy, the development of types of agriculture unsuited to the soil and climate, the growing surplus of farm population, and the rapid development of a large scale industrialized type of agriculture."

Conferees Agree On $110,000,000 Rivers, Harbors Bill

By the Associated Press

A Senate-House conference committee agreed yesterday on a rivers and harbors bill authorizing expenditures of $110,035,450. Before doing so, however, it struck out a $34,509,000 project for East River Harbor, off New York City.

The Senate-House group also eliminated a $3,960,000 Florida project on the Caloosanatchee River and Lake Okeechobee drainage areas and restored a $3,700,000 project on the Guadalupe River in Texas.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Senate Commerce Committee, said House conferees objected to the New York project "on the basis that it was a national defense item rather than navigation and because of a letter from President Roosevelt saying that while the project might be done some day it was not necessary now."

Apple Blossom Queen Cheered At Coronation

By Scott Hart
A Staff Correspondent

Winchester, Va., May 2.—Miss Lillian Somoza, 18 years old tomorrow and daughter of the Nicaraguan President, walked down the long white carpet to a stiff-backed gilded throne today to become the seventeenth sovereign of Virginia's Shenandoah Valley apple lands.

The gravity, deep in her face under her dark eyes, dissolved when she reached the base of the long flight of steps leading to her throne. The applause of a controversial number of spectators had poured up and she smiled school-girlishly, her eyes sweeping the panorama of faces and town and far off hills.

Whatever the number of these spectators—they braved a constant threat of rain to see the coronation, highspot of the opening day of the seventeenth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival that citizens of Winchester gave $10,000 this year to stage.

How many persons were here to engage in the manifold activities is impossible to know. Newspaper reporters at the coronation estimated the crowd at 5,000. An official of the festival announced that 40,000 were present. The festival officials had predicted a host of 50,000 persons for today in the city—which has a normal population of about 12,000. The estimate appeared to have been overly optimistic.

However, Miss Somoza received her silvery crown from the hands of frock-coated Henry F. Grady, assistant secretary of state, before as many persons as the big Handley High School lawn could satisfactorily accommodate. Her slightly accented acceptance of so fleeting a sovereignty and her promise to "Pray for God's blessing upon the apples" was carried by loud speakers to the crowds that sat in chairs and on the wet ground in an elevated semicircle about the school front.

Her coronation began to the tune of trumpet notes at 3 p. m. Then a group of Massanutten millitary cadets, in gray uniform and carrying flags, appeared at the top of the tall steps. Then more cadets came down the sides of the steps with lovely princesses on their arms. Then the queen came out, solemn in her responsibilities and in a white flowing satin gown. At a throne on the base of the steps facing the crowd she took the obligation from Grady, then walked with him down the white carpet to the more glittery throne, to sit there on a white satin pillow facing the steps where 1,000 Handley students in a billowing of bright costumes performed the "Quest of Beauty" pageant in her honor.

Notables Are Present

Overhead a scattering of tiny red and blue balloons went up, to become lost in the dark sky. The pageant moved, swiftly, against the rain threat.

Here, officially to witness the coronation of the Nicaraguan girl, who studies at Gunston Hall in Washington, were Leon DeBayle, Minister of Nicaragua and Mrs. DeBayle, and Dr. Nestor Portocarrero, consul general of Nicaragua in New York and Mrs. Portocarrero. They were seated close to the throne when the tropics-bred girl through Yankee fanfare became in a brief magical 15 minutes the queen of approximately 6,000,000 apple trees in this limestone land. Miss Somoza joined everybody else in enjoying it.

So Winchester spent its day, looking forward to tomorrow when the 99 units of the trail of the apple blossoms parade will march down the streets, through the drippings of apple blossom petals from the floats. A ball in honor of the queen will be given at 9 p. m., in the blossom ballroom.

Both the blossoms and the weather betrayed the festival, to date. The sky is expected to continue overcast tomorrow and there is no immediate prospect for the blossoms. The farmers here say that warm nights are required to bring out the blossoms and there have been none. The landscape where the orchards lie won't color until another week, they say.

Miss Somoza was dressed in white tulle over an empire gown of creamy satin with long court train for the regal ceremonies. More than 30 princesses in flowered organdie and large leghorn hats flanked her path down the broad stairway. After receiving the crown from Dr. Grady, she was presented with the scepter and golden apple.

Covetousness Caused War, Pius Declares

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, May 2.—Pope Pius XII blamed "excessive human covetousness and thirst for power" for the war raging in Europe in speaking briefly at St. Peter's today at the canonization of two saints.

Men, blinded by these passions, have "repudiated the laws of God" in loosing the horrors of war, he said.

In approving the canonization of the two saints, the Pope appealed to them to intercede with God on behalf of mankind for the restoration of unity and concord.

A French nun and a humble Italian girl—the first persons to be canonized by Pope Pius XII—attained sainthood at the solemn ceremonies in St. Peter's.

The sainted women were Marie Euphrasia Pelletier, who was noted for her reported stigmas, or marks corresponding to the wounds of Christ on the cross.

The canonizations preceded a series of beatifications, preliminary steps toward sainthood, for five other persons which will take place during the next two months.

Recall Taylor, Methodists Ask Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., May 2. The General Conference of the Methodist Church today formally asked President Roosevelt to recall Myron C. Taylor, his personal envoy to the Vatican.

"His appointment," the official pronouncement read, "has created a spirit of uneasiness and resentment in the minds of a great number of people, and, instead of promoting peace, has engendered discord and strife, which seems calamitous at this time when there is imperative need for harmonious united action on the part of all those who fear God and love righteousness."

This statement, approved with only a few hands among 776 conference delegates raised in apposition, was drafted by the Methodist Church's committee on interdenominational relations, headed by Dr. James. W. Moore, of Newport News, Va.

It passed over vigorous protests by several delegates who protested "this is no time to stir up religious hatreds."

Love of Mimi and You-You Rivaled Classics, Jury Hears

By William Tyree
United Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles, May 2.—The love of Mimi and You-You might have been as famed as that of Orpheus and Eurydice, but turned out to be merely another myth because of a wealthy widow's charms, Mrs. Marie (Mimi) Urban testified today.

Mrs. Urban, demanded $100,000 from the widowed Mrs. Edith Gaines for the purportedly stolen love of Braheen Abdo Urban, 39-year-old actor, explained the Mimi-You-You business to a jury which was still puzzling about the difference between a negligee and a teagown.

"Not long after our marriage in 1533" she related, "I became 'Mimi' to my husband and he became 'You-You' to me. It started by his singing an aria from the opera la Boheme to me. That aria, sung to the dressmaker in the opera, became the theme song of our love. He started calling me 'Mimi' and because that sounded like 'Me-Me' I started calling him 'You-You.'"

For four years, Mrs. Urban recalled, she and her husband drank from a "loving cup" at each meal and Urban "showered" her with kisses, and their love was in the realm of classic bliss. It reached a kind of peak when Urban took up offering "prayers" and asking her "blessing" before going to bed, she testified.

"Our love was so powerful," Mrs. Urban said, "that it might have become as famous as the love of Orpheus and Eurydice."

The jury was left to guess that Orpheus was a mythical Thracian lyre player, by Apollo out of Calliope, and Eurydice was his wife. Eurydice died and went to Hades and Orpheus followed, strumming his lyre so charmingly that Pluto said Eurydice could go back to earth with him if he did not look back until he reached the upper world. They set out, but Orpheus looked back and Eurydice returned to Hades. After that Orpheus was torn limb from limb by some Thracian Bassarids. Bassarids are Maenads.

Mrs. Urban's lyric love had a tragic end, too, she testified. She came to Hollywood from New York, she said, and discovered that her husband had a pass key to Mrs. Gaines' apartment and spent a lot of time there, she said. Mrs. Urban once had them arrested on a morals charge but a jury acquitted them.

Mrs. Gaines has described her friendship with Urban as "platonic," though admitting that they occupied an apartment as "Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Norman."

It was Mrs. Gaines who explained to the jury that she wore a teagown, not a negligee, when she entertained Urban.

Mexico Plants Own Source Of Quinine

Health Chief Tells Of Move to Get Supply If Indies Are Cut Off

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Just a quarter century ago a troop of Mexican federals, led by one Gen. Jose Siurob, defeated the bandit Pancho Villa in a decisive battle.

Yesterday the same Gen. Siurob, speaking in his capacity as public health director of Mexico, was in Washington describing how his department is fighting an even more stubborn foe—the malaria mosquito.

Chief of his country's delegation at the Pan American health conference now in progress at the Pan American Union Building, Dr. Siurob said that one of the most important tools being employed against the disease is the domestic cultivation of the cinchona tree.

A Vital Plantation

From the bark of this tree is extracted quinine, the chief drug in treatment of malaria. Virtually all of the world's quinine now comes from the East Indies. Should the war spread to those islands in the South Pacific and paralyze exports, the world would be in a bad way for its quinine.

Dr. Siurob's report yesterday, in which he told how thousands of cinchona trees are thriving on a plantation in the state of Chiapas, raised hopes that the Americas may have an adequate source of quinine in their own backyard in the not so distant future.

For more than a year United States Public Health Service scientists have been working to find a chemical substitute for quinine, in anticipation of a possible cutoff in the East Indian supply.

Brazil's Efforts Praised

Just before adjourning until 9 a. m. today, the Latin American public health directors unanimously adopted a resolution praising Brazil for her efforts in combating the Anopheles gambiae mosquito, which carries the deadliest type of malaria.

Believed to have been brought to South America about a decade ago by ships from Africa, the gambiae mosquito is principally Brazil's problem. But for the preventive measures which that country has taken, however, the species probably would have spread up and down the continent, it was pointed out.

Countries reporting yesterday told how health budgets are being increased, rural dispensaries extended and housing improved. In Uruguay, said Dr. Rafael Schiaffino, tropical diseases are non-existent and recent outbreaks of smallpox and diphtheria were quickly controlled.

Latest advances in blood tests for syphilis were outlined by Dr. R. D. Vonderlehr, United States Public Health Service; Dr. John A. Kolmer, Temple University; Dr. Benjamine Kline, Dr. Harry Eagle, and Dr. Reuben L. Kahn.

Manufacturers, Farmers Defend Chains at Hearing

The House subcommittee considering the Patman chain store tax bill heard testimony from a group of manufacturers and farmers yesterday that the chains aided them by taking merchandise off their hands quickly and in large quantities, and increased consumption by keeping retail prices low.

"The chains," said Lloyd C. Gardner, president of the Ohio Beekeepers Association, "are paying us practically 1 cent per pound more for bulk or bakery honey than the current market price."

N. J. Nelson, of Peoria, Ill., president of a creamery with 35,000 farmer patrons, said that a chain which buys 70 per cent of the creamery's output paid a small premium over the Chicago market for its type of butter.

Walter W. Moyer, underwear manufacturer of Ephrata, Pa., said the chains took 94 per cent of his production, and that he had no selling costs, bad accounts, advertising costs or unjust claims on this merchandise. These savings, he said, were passed on to the consumer who got for 49 cents a garment which otherwise would cost 69 cents.

First Lady Presents Acre of Virginia Land, Ham, 2 Jobs for Others

New York, May 2 (AP).—For the "outstanding portrayal by an American actor" during the present New York season, Dorothy Stickney, star of "Life With Father," today was awarded an acre of land on a mountainside near Abingdon, Va., a Virginia ham and two jobs for young actors at the Barter Theater in Abingdon.

All those things were in the Barter award presented to Miss Stickney, a native of Dickinson, N. Dak., by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at a luncheon in the Town Hall Club. The Barter Theatre got its name by its plan of accepting produce to the equivalent of 40 cents at the box office for admission.

Presiding at the luncheon, Bob Porterfield, the theater's founder, announced he had been authorized by the State of Virginia to establish the first State theater in the country.

French Hope Italy's Envoy Was Impressed By White House Talk

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 2.—Diplomatic circles expressed a slight feeling of optimism tonight as a result of what they believed to be determined efforts by President Roosevelt to keep the European war from spreading to the Mediterranean.

Poltical observers said the White House visit today by Prince Colonna, the Italian envoy to Washington, created a profound impression in Paris and raised hopes that Italy would respond favorably.

The general tendency among French observers, however, was to take at strictly face value Premier Mussolini's reported assurance to United States Ambassador William Phillips that Italy does not intend to change her position right away.

"This is worth nothing except for the present hour, and the future remains completely uncertain," the newspaper Le Temps commented.

The French meanwhile announced the loss of a patrol boat and serious damage to a destroyer in a North Sea battle, but said a French submarine squared accounts by sinking a Nazi U-boat.

The high command's laconic communique failed to say when the action took place, but it is understood to have been within the last 48 hours.

Of activity on the Western Front, tonight's communique said:

Whelchel Wins Dismissal Of 2 Charges

Congressman Begins Fight for Acquittal On 6 Other Counts

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Ga., May 2.—Representative B. Frank Whelchel (Democrat), of Georgia, won dismissal in Federal court today of two counts charging sale of a rural postmastership, and began a fight for acquittal on six remaining counts.

Counsel for the north Georgia Congressman promised the jury they would refute each prosecution charge and prove, instead, that Whelchel repeatedly rejected offers of financial aid.

Paul Carpenter, defense attorney, said his client would not deny having received $2,700 from three persons, two of whom subsequently received postal appointments, but would show this money came to him as bona-fide campaign contributions.

Tells of Refusal

Roy Redd, erstwhile assistant cashier of a Cumming, Ga., bank, told how he transmitted an offer of $750 in campaign assistance from a prospective postmaster and declared Whelchel refused, saying:

"Hell, no. I don't accept contributions."

W. H. Warren, Baptist preacher at Cumming, told of a similar experience, quoting Whelchel as insisting "I pay my own way." Eventually, however, the Congressman added he saw "'nothing wrong with it if some of my friends want to take money and use it for me.'" Warren said.

On cross-examination, Warren told of offering Whelchel a $750 "contribution" from T. Lester Harris, who wished appointment as postmaster at Ball Ground, Ga. Asked why the money was tendered, Warren replied Harris "seemed to think that it might influence Mr. Whelchel."

Opposing defense motion for a directed acquittal, Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge declared there is "no magic in the phrase 'campaign contributions,'" and added:

"There is no question these contributions were made for postal appointments."

Dies Appears Before Jurors

Representative Martin S. Dies (Democrat), Texas, appeared yesterday before the District grand jury which is investigating spurious letters purporting to connect him with the Silver Shirt movement headed by William Dudley Pelley.

Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of Labor's Nonpartisan League, has asserted that one of his aides, Harold Weisberg, bought the letters for $105. After having been placed in the Congressional Record, the letters were found to be spurious and were expunged.

A previous grand jury investigated and failed to return any indictments. Jackson then demanded a new inquiry, which is being conducted by District Attorney Edward M. Curran, John W. Fihelly, chief of the civil division, and Assistant District Attorney Evan T. Davis.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A. E. F. WITH WINGS?

WARMONGERS? When I was a city editor I discovered that a gruesome murder story on Page 1 often brought a burst of phone calls and letters of protest.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

In blaming the city editor for the tale of the murder, some readers blamed him for the murder itself. Today a columnist who warns of the drift toward war is called a warmonger, blamed for bringing war nearer.

They always want to shoot the piano player.

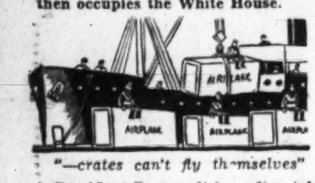
* * * *

U. S. WAR PILOTS: Talk of sending American airplane pilots overseas is becoming so frequent here that it can scarcely be ignored.

It comes from men who have regular access to the White House, men who have been called intimates of the president, men who often know what the Government is thinking long before thoughts are translated to action.

* * * *

Such talk also comes from opposition men who are far from being intimates of the President, but who would probably be intimates of his successor. So their speculations are significant for 1941, no matter who then occupies the White House.



"—crates can't fly themselves"

President Roosevelt has often told his close advisers that he will never send an American Army overseas. But he has never said that he will never send American warships or air squadrons overseas.

* * * *

Today the realization is sharper that it takes almost two years to train a young man to fly a 400-mile-an-hour pursuit plane or a big bombing plane effectively, and that the Allies will soon be running short of pilots to fly the American planes they are buying.

* * * *

Pilots for the Royal Flying Corps whose training began in Canada since the war started won't be ready to fight until the summer of 1941, by this reckoning. Perhaps half who begin to train can't make the grade. Courage alone isn't enough; landing a plane at 80 m.p.h requires special qualities.

* * * *

Such figures as our Army and Navy are willing to release show that the Army now has 2,818 pilots (including 785 reserve officers) and the Navy has 5,124 pilots, including 491 Marine Corps fliers, or a grand total of 7,942 pilots. By the summer of 1941 the total will probably reach 10,000.

* * * *

How many of these could be spared, even if public opinion tolerated sending some of them overseas, is dubious. Certainly not more than 1,000. There is some purely unofficial talk of sending only pilots who volunteer for overseas service.

* * * *

In addition, there are 33,188 licensed civilian pilots. The CAA's civilian training schools have turned out 712 pilots. Most of these would need at least a year's additional training. There are now 32,319 enrolled in the CAA schools.

* * * *

This talk is so far merely talk; no one has quoted Mr. Roosevelt as discussing the sending of pilots; and no one knows whether the country would stand for it even if the Allies were desperate.

COBWEBS AT HQ.: An almost comical stalemate prevails in the Democratic high command as the 1940 Presidential campaign gets under way. Devoted to Franklin Roosevelt, but loyal also to his boss, Jim Farley, the director of publicity, venerable, seasoned, shrewd old Charlie Michelson, devotes himself largely to fatherly, kindly, humorous scoffing at Tom Dewey in his brief weekly essays.

* * * *

Every day the G. O. P. blasts at the Democrats with tons of speeches, statements and press releases. But they remain mostly unanswered, because the headquarters doesn't know whether it must fight for or against a third term. Every hour or so messenger boys bring fat envelopes filled with new GOP sallies; but the lads in uniform, bring little or nothing from the Democratic medicine men.

* * * *

Aside from Mr. Michelson, who seems fairly neutral, the top men at Democratic headquarters are Farley men, though they don't exactly flaunt any disrespect toward the White House. They rely on the 3½ months after July 15 as long enough for a campaign. But some of the New Dealers with ants in their pants want to toss some brickbats back at the GOP during the next 75 days, and the missiles would have a rich third-term aroma.

Allies Defend U. S. Ideals, Chamber Told

Democracy Depends On Their Victory Lewis Douglas Says

Lewis Douglas, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York and President Roosevelt's first budget director, declared last night that continuance of democracy as the United States has known it depends on Allied victory in the European war.

His speech, delivered at a banquet at the Willard Hotel, brought to a close the twenty-eighth annual meeting here of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber, at its final business session yesterday morning, adopted an emphatic National defense resolution but declared that "Congress should reaffirm its determination to keep the United States out of war, unless our Nation is endangered."

Favors Independent FCC

In the field of domestic policies, the chamber:

Favored continued independence for the Civil Aeronautics Authority;

Stressed the need for "positive steps" toward a balanced budget by cutting expenditures;

Opposed a further increase in the debt limit;

Assailed the Administration's "easy money" policy;

Suggested changes in the securities acts to remove business deterrents;

Asked that tax laws be overhauled;

Attacked Federal encroachments on States' rights;

Proposed repeal of the Wage-Hour Act;

Supported the Walter-Logan bill to curb administrative agencies;

Kemper Named President

James Scott Kemper, of Chicago, president of the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Co., was elected president by the chamber's new board of directors, chosen at the closing business meeting.

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, was reelected treasurer.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, addressing a luncheon meeting of chamber delegates, said that, in the present world situation, "it may well come to pass" that the 5-5-3 naval ratio, whereby this country would have parity with Great Britain, would be no longer sufficient to protect the Nation on both oceans.

"We must look to our own naval strength, and that alone," he declared.

"All signs," he said, point to the possibility that the wars in Europe and Asia would become a "general conflagration."

Douglas, who broke with the President over his fiscal policies, declared that the country must face the world situation for what it is. It cannot "preserve the essential elements of the American experiment," he said, by crawling into a political and economic cyclone cellar and drawing "the trap door after us."

"Can't Escape Consequences"

To do that, he argued, ultimately would mean the "establishment of a totalitarian state at home."

On the other hand, he said, if England and France are crushed by Hitlerism, the United States, in self-defense, would have to resort to totalitarian devices in "more temperate and more human form" and thus be "pushed into the same type of life so repugnant to the ideals of our country."

"This is not merely another European war," he declared. "This is a struggle between two wholly contradictory, two clashing ways of life. We cannot escape the consequences of its outcome. Should the lands of Rousseau and Burke succeed, it will be difficult enough to reconstruct a peaceful world. It will be impossible should they fail."

Douglas declared that both Government and business would have to put its house in order.

He called on businessmen "to demonstrate that we possess a capacity to resolve conflicts in terms of the national good at the expense, if need be, of our pocketbooks."

"If we would enjoy freedom," he declared, "we must prove that we have earned it."

"Honest Inquest" Urged

Businessmen, he said, "must turn the searching light of an honest inquest" on their practices and problems, and must modify what cannot be sincerely defended."

"We must root out of our procedure," he declared, "those practices which impinge on a free market, for private monopoly leads with an almost grim inevitability to public monopoly. As between the two, in principle there is little difference.

"Both are depressants on employment. Both have the effect of corrupting a government of limited powers, and both impair, at least, freedom of inquiry and liberty of expression."

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 2.—The largest defection in Democratic Party sentiment since 1936, with corresponding Republican gains, has taken place in states of the Mid-West and Great Lakes region, judging by the results of national soundings of public sentiment by the American Institute.

DR. GALLUP

While the Democratic party has a slight edge over the G. O. P. throughout the nation in these studies, the gain in Republican sentiment ranges as high as 20 to 25 percentage points in some States. The greatest shift has come in North Dakota, where Democratic strength is 25 points below 1936, and in Wisconsin, where the defection has been 23 points.

Gain In 17 States

In 17 States, the study shows, there has been a gain of 10 points or more in Republican strength, and a corresponding loss for Democrats. Another 12 States show Democratic losses of 5 to 10 points, while in 9 States the shift has been 5 or less.

In the remaining 10 States—all of them in the South—the Democrats have made gains, ranging from one to four points.

The study is based on the answers of a cross-section of voters in all States to the question:

Defeat Revised Norton Bill, Author Urges

15 New Amendments Exempt 2 Million From Pay-Hour Law

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

In a series of some 15 new amendments to the Norton bill, the House yesterday tentatively recorded its approval of withdrawing an estimated 2,000,000 workers from protection of the wage-hour law.

Denouncing the bill which bears her name as a "disgrace to the country" in its present form, Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee, urged repudiation of the measure. She thus followed the precedent set some 48 hours previously when Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, disowned his wage-hour bill after it, too, had been "loaded down" with amendments.

Fate of the Norton bill, which will be finally decided today, was in doubt, but it appeared last night that the long list of amendments and exemptions had not helped its chance of passage. Most urban Representatives are now dead set against the measure; and the farm group has not forgotten that it needs city votes for parity payments next week.

Ramspeck Opposes Bill

Representative Ramspeck, Georgia Democrat who favors some alteration of the present law, declared last night that he would now work for defeat of the entire group of amendments known as the Norton bill, inasmuch as when the deciding vote comes, they will have to be approved or disapproved as a whole. He said that if these amendments were defeated—as the Barden bill was defeated Tuesday—he hoped the House would then adopt the original bill introduced last March, which would make a few Administration-approved changes in the present act.

Most sweeping of all the amendments approved yesterday was a proposal by Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, that protection of both wage and hour provisions of the law be taken from all employes—irrespective of whether they work near or far from the farm—who are engaged in canning, freezing and processing perishable fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. Norton quoted Labor Department figures showing that this amendment, which was adopted by a vote of 52 to 40, would exempt approximately 1,000,000 workers from the wage-hour act.

Blizzard of Amendments

An estimated 200,000 employes are taken "out from under" the wage and hour provisions by the Buck amendment, which was adopted Wednesday and reaffirmed yesterday when the House turned down, 45 to 103, an attempt of Representative Welch (Republican), of California, to modify it.

In a blizzard of other amendments approved yesterday—most of them by voice vote, the House eased or removed restrictions on such varied activities as forest firefighting, storing of fruits and vegetables and handling of potatoes.

Exemptions were granted to small newspapers, to wholesale grocers and to persons earning a guaranteed annual salary of $1,500 or more. The present law was altered to knock out the controversial "areas of production" phrase. This amendment, it was believed, would exempt many thousands of workers.

"No One Knows"

Another amendment would permit a flexible work week for employes over a 6 or 12 month period, as long as the week did not average more than 40 hours.

The measure was in such a state shortly before the House quit for the day that Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, shouted on the floor that that "no one knows just what this legislation contains—and I don't think you are able to intelligently vote on this bill."

However, his motion to kill the entire measure was snowed under by a vote of 53 to 113. At the end of the day, Mrs. Norton put into the Congressional Record a letter from Secretary Perkins analyzing and attacking the Buck amendment to the pending bill.

According to the Secretary, this provision not only removes more than 200,000 workers from the wage-hour law, but also wipes out the child-labor restrictions in respect to this group. She pointed out that the persons affected by the Buck amendment would be largely migrant workers.

Commerce Aides' Appointment Follows Plea for Southerner

J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce since 1935, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Johnson, a native of Marion, S. C., who will be 62 next Sunday, was named to fill out the unexpired term of M. M. Caskie, of Alabama, who resigned. The term expires December 31, 1941.

Stephen T. Early, White House press secretary, said that more than 15 Senators had urged the President to name to the commission a Southerner who was familiar with the South's transportation problems. He said the Chief Executive felt he had obtained in Johnson a man with "a very good working knowledge of railroad problems" and one who is familiar with the South's troubles.

Hinckley May Get Job

At the same time the appointment was interpreted in some circles as something of a countermove against those seeking to block the President's order transferring the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department. These circles pointed out that Johnson had jurisdiction over the old aviation board at the time it came under such heavy Congressional fire that the CAA was created. The same circles cited reports that Mr. Roosevelt was planning to name CAA Chairman Robert Hinckley as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. In this post Hinckley would be responsible for successful operation of the CAA if it should be transferred to the Commerce Department.

Independence Sought

Chairman Hinckley, meanwhile, said that he has asked Attorney General Jackson for an opinion to "nail down" the CAA's independence from outside interference once it becomes a unit of the Commerce Department. He revealed the maneuver after an hour's conference with President Roosevelt.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, author of the CAA Act, said yesterday he has obtained an agreement whereby the Senate may vote next week on his resolution to kill the reorganization order. A similar resolution has been introduced in the House by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California.

Wallace Asks Aid for Farm Migrants

Long-Range Program For Rural Rebuilding Urged by Secretary

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday called on Congress to solve the migratory farm worker problem by sponsoring a long-range program of rural reconstruction.

Idle men and money could be put to work for ten years rebuilding the land "we have wasted shamefully for generations," he told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, opening an inquiry into the farm migrant picture.

"In the South alone," he said, "thousands of men could find useful work for more than a decade, rebuilding the forests, controlling the floods and restoring eroded land.

"Every penny spent on a rehabilitation program would be a wise investment in capital assets, and unless something is done the country will be creating new migrants and be building a new backlog of poverty."

He suggested as a means to reduce farm tenancy, that renting farmers be given assistance to become owners and that debt-ridden owners be aided to lift the burden.

"This army of uprooted, homeless families," Wallace said, "may lay its troubles to problems which have afflicted American agriculture for many years.

"They arise directly out of the waste and exhaustion of our soil, which has gone unchecked for more than a century, years of ruinous farm prices, the disappearance of foreign markets, unsound systems of tenure, an alarming increase in farm tenancy, the development of types of agriculture unsuited to the soil and climate, the growing surplus of farm population, and the rapid development of a large scale industrialized type of agriculture."

Conferees Agree On $110,000,000 Rivers & Harbors Bill

By the Associated Press

A Senate-House conference committee agreed yesterday on a rivers and harbors bill authorizing expenditures of $110,035,450. Before doing so, however, it struck out a $34,509,000 project for East River Harbor, off New York City.

The Senate-House group also eliminated a $3,960,000 Florida project on the Caloosanatchee River and Lake Okeechobee drainage areas and restored a $3,700,000 project on the Guadalupe River in Texas.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the Senate Commerce Committee, said House conferees objected to the New York project "on the basis that it was a national defense item rather than navigation and because of a letter from President Roosevelt saying that while the project might be done some day it was not necessary now."

Apple Blossom Queen Cheered At Coronation

By Scott Hart
A Staff Correspondent

Winchester, Va., May 2.—Miss Lillian Somoza, 18 years old tomorrow and daughter of the Nicaraguan President, walked down the long white carpet to a stiff-backed gilded throne today to become the seventeenth sovereign of Virginia's Shenandoah Valley apple lands.

The gravity, deep in her face under her dark eyes, dissolved when she reached the base of the long flight of steps leading to her throne. The applause of a controversial number of spectators had poured up and she smiled school-girlishly, her eyes sweeping the panorama of faces and town and far off hills.

Whatever the number of these spectators—they braved a constant threat of rain to see the coronation, highspot of the opening day of the seventeenth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival that citizens of Winchester gave $10,000 this year to stage.

How many persons were here to engage in the manifold activities is impossible to know. Newspaper reporters at the coronation estimated the crowd at 5,000. An official of the festival announced that 40,000 were present. The festival officials had predicted a host of 50,000 persons for today in the city—which has a normal population of about 12,000. The estimate appeared to have been overly optimistic.

However, Miss Somoza received her silvery crown from the hands of frock-coated Henry F. Grady, assistant secretary of state, before as many persons as the big Handley High School lawn could satisfactorily accommodate. Her slightly accented acceptance of so fleeting a sovereignty and her promise to "Pray for God's blessing upon the apples" was carried by loud speakers to the crowds that sat in chairs and on the wet ground in an elevated semicircle about the school front.

See FETE, Page 13, Column 2.

Her coronation began to the tune of trumpet notes at 3 p. m. Then a group of Massanutten millitary cadets, in gray uniform and carrying flags, appeared at the top of the tall steps. Then more cadets came down the sides of the steps with lovely princesses on their arms. Then the queen came out, solemn in her responsibilities and in a white flowing satin gown. At a throne on the base of the steps facing the crowd she took the obligation from Grady, then walked with him down the white carpet to the more glittery throne, to sit there on a white satin pillow facing the steps where 1,000 Handley students in a billowing of bright costumes performed the "Quest of Beauty" pageant in her honor.

Notables Are Present

Overhead a scattering of tiny red and blue balloons went up, to become lost in the dark sky. The pageant moved, swiftly, against the rain threat.

Here, officially to witness the coronation of the Nicaraguan girl, who studies at Gunston Hall in Washington, were Leon DeBayle, Minister of Nicaragua and Mrs. DeBayle, and Dr. Nestor Portocarrero, consul general of Nicaragua in New York and Mrs. Portocarrero. They were seated close to the throne when the tropics-bred girl through Yankee fanfare became in a brief magical 15 minutes the queen of approximately 6,000,000 apple trees in this limestone land. Miss Somoza joined everybody else in enjoying it.

So Winchester spent its day, looking forward to tomorrow when the 99 units of the trail of the apple blossoms parade will march down the streets, through the drippings of apple blossom petals from the floats. A ball in honor of the queen will be given at 9 p. m., in the blossom ballroom.

Both the blossoms and the weather betrayed the festival, to date. The sky is expected to continue overcast tomorrow and there is no immediate prospect for the blossoms. The farmers here say that warm nights are required to bring out the blossoms and there have been none. The landscape where the orchards lie won't color until another week, they say.

Miss Somoza was dressed in white tulle over an empire gown of creamy satin with long court train for the regal ceremonies. More than 30 princesses in flowered organdie and large leghorn hats flanked her path down the broad stairway. After receiving the crown from Dr. Grady, she was presented with the scepter and golden apple.

Covetousness Caused War, Pius Declares

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, May 2.—Pope Pius XII blamed "excessive human covetousness and thirst for power" for the war raging in Europe in speaking briefly at St. Peter's today at the canonization of two saints.

Men, blinded by these passions, have "repudiated the laws of God" in loosing the horrors of war, he said.

In approving the canonization of the two saints, the Pope appealed to them to intercede with God on behalf of mankind for the restoration of unity and concord.

A French nun and a humble Italian girl—the first persons to be canonized by Pope Pius XII—attained sainthood at the solemn ceremonies in St. Peter's.

The sainted women were Marie Euphrasia Pelletier, who was noted for her reported stigmas, or marks corresponding to the wounds of Christ on the cross.

The canonizations preceded a series of beatifications, preliminary steps toward sainthood, for five other persons which will take place during the next two months.

Recall Taylor, Methodists Ask Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., May 2. The General Conference of the Methodist Church today formally asked President Roosevelt to recall Myron C. Taylor, his personal envoy to the Vatican.

"His appointment," the official pronouncement read, "has created a spirit of uneasiness and resentment in the minds of a great number of people, and, instead of promoting peace, has engendered discord and strife, which seems calamitous at this time when there is imperative need for harmonious united action on the part of all those who fear God and love righteousness."

This statement, approved with only a few hands among 776 conference delegates raised in apposition, was drafted by the Methodist Church's committee on interdenominational relations, headed by Dr. James. W. Moore, of Newport News, Va.

It passed over vigorous protests by several delegates who protested "this is no time to stir up religious hatreds."

Love of Mimi and You-You Rivaled Classics, Jury Hears

By William Tyree
United Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles, May 2.—The love of Mimi and You-You might have been as famed as that of Orpheus and Eurydice, but turned out to be merely another myth because of a wealthy widow's charms, Mrs. Marie (Mimi) Urban testified today.

Mrs. Urban, demanded $100,000 from the widowed Mrs. Edith Gaines for the purportedly stolen love of Braheen Abdo Urban, 39-year-old actor, explained the Mimi-You-You business to a jury which was still puzzling about the difference between a negligee and a teagown.

"Not long after our marriage in 1933," she related, "I became 'Mimi' to my husband and he became 'You-You' to me. It started by his singing an aria from the opera la Boheme to me. That aria, sung to the dressmaker in the opera, became the theme song of our love. He started calling me 'Mimi' and because that sounded like 'Me-Me' I started calling him 'You-You.'"

For four years, Mrs. Urban recalled, she and her husband drank from a "loving cup" at each meal and Urban "showered" her with kisses, and their love was in the realm of classic bliss. It reached a kind of peak when Urban took up offering "prayers" and asking her "blessing" before going to bed, she testified.

"Our love was so powerful," Mrs. Urban said, "that it might have become as famous as the love of Orpheus and Eurydice."

The jury was left to guess that Orpheus was a mythical Thracian lyre player, by Apollo out of Calliope, and Eurydice was his wife. Eurydice died and went to Hades and Orpheus followed, strumming his lyre so charmingly that Pluto said Eurydice could go back to earth with him if he did not look back until he reached the upper world. They set out, but Orpheus looked back and Eurydice returned to Hades. After that Orpheus was torn limb from limb by some Thracian Bassarids. Bassarids are Maenads.

Mrs. Urban's lyric love had a tragic end, too, she testified. She came to Hollywood from New York, she said, and discovered that her husband had a pass key to Mrs. Gaines' apartment and spent a lot of time there, she said. Mrs. Urban once had them arrested on a morals charge but a jury acquitted them.

Mrs. Gaines has described her friendship with Urban as "platonic," though admitting that they occupied an apartment as "Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Norman."

It was Mrs. Gaines who explained to the jury that she wore a teagown, not a negligee, when she entertained Urban.

Mexico Plants Own Source Of Quinine

Health Chief Tells Of Move to Get Supply If Indies Are Cut Off

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Just a quarter century ago a troop of Mexican federals, led by one Gen. Jose Siurob, defeated the bandit Pancho Villa in a decisive battle.

Yesterday the same Gen. Siurob, speaking in his capacity as public health director of Mexico, was in Washington describing how his department is fighting an even more stubborn foe—the malaria mosquito.

Chief of his country's delegation at the Pan American health conference now in progress at the Pan American Union Building, Dr. Siurob said that one of the most important tools being employed against the disease is the domestic cultivation of the cinchona tree.

A Vital Plantation

From the bark of this tree is extracted quinine, the chief drug in treatment of malaria. Virtually all of the world's quinine now comes from the East Indies. Should the war spread to those islands in the South Pacific and paralyze exports, the world would be in a bad way for its quinine.

Dr. Siurob's report yesterday, in which he told how thousands of cinchona trees are thriving on a plantation in the state of Chiapas, raised hopes that the Americas may have an adequate source of quinine in their own backyard in the not so distant future.

For more than a year United States Public Health Service scientists have been working to find a chemical substitute for quinine, in anticipation of a possible cutoff in the East Indian supply.

Brazil's Efforts Praised

Just before adjourning until 9 a. m. today, the Latin American public health directors unanimously adopted a resolution praising Brazil for her efforts in combating the Anopheles gambiae mosquito, which carries the deadliest type of malaria.

Believed to have been brought to South America about a decade ago by ships from Africa, the gambiae mosquito is principally Brazil's problem. But for the preventive measures which that country has taken, however, the species probably would have spread up and down the continent, it was pointed out.

Countries reporting yesterday told how health budgets are being increased, rural dispensaries extended and housing improved. In Uruguay, said Dr. Rafael Schiaffino, tropical diseases are non-existent and recent outbreaks of smallpox and diphtheria were quickly controlled.

Latest advances in blood tests for syphilis were outlined by Dr. R. D. Vonderlehr, United States Public Health Service; Dr. John A. Kolmer, Temple University; Dr. Benjamine Kline, Dr. Harry Eagle, and Dr. Reuben L. Kahn.

Manufacturers, Farmers Defend Chains at Hearing

The House subcommittee considering the Patman chain store tax bill heard testimony from a group of manufacturers and farmers yesterday that the chains aided them by taking merchandise off their hands quickly and in large quantities, and increased consumption by keeping retail prices low.

"The chains," said Lloyd C. Gardner, president of the Ohio Beekeepers Association, "are paying us practically 1 cent per pound more for bulk or bakery honey than the current market price."

N. J. Nelson, of Peoria, Ill., president of a creamery with 35,000 farmer patrons, said that a chain which buys 70 per cent of the creamery's output paid a small premium over the Chicago market for its type of butter.

Walter W. Moyer, underwear manufacturer of Ephrata, Pa., said the chains took 94 per cent of his production, and that he had no selling costs, bad accounts, advertising costs or unjust claims on this merchandise. These savings, he said, were passed on to the consumer who got for 49 cents a garment which otherwise would cost 69 cents.

Star of 'Life With Father' Wins Barter Theater Award

First Lady Presents Acre of Virginia Land, Ham, 2 Jobs for Others

New York, May 2 (AP).—For the "outstanding portrayal by an American actor" during the present New York season, Dorothy Stickney, star of "Life With Father," today was awarded an acre of land on a mountainside near Abingdon, Va., a Virginia ham and two jobs for young actors at the Barter Theater in Abingdon.

All those things were in the Barter award presented to Miss Stickney, a native of Dickinson, N. Dak., by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at a luncheon in the Town Hall Club. The Barter Theatre got its name by its plan of accepting produce to the equivalent of 40 cents at the box office for admission.

Presiding at the luncheon, Bob Porterfield, the theater's founder, announced he had been authorized by the State of Virginia to establish the first State theater in the country.

U. S. Efforts To Curb War Comfort Paris

French Hope Italy's Envoy Was Impressed By White House Talk

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 2.—Diplomatic circles expressed a slight feeling of optimism tonight as a result of what they believed to be determined efforts by President Roosevelt to keep the European war from spreading to the Mediterranean.

Political observers said the White House visit today by Prince Colonna, the Italian envoy to Washington, created a profound impression in Paris and raised hopes that Italy would respond favorably.

The general tendency among French observers, however, was to take at strictly face value Premier Mussolini's reported assurance to United States Ambassador William Phillips that Italy does not intend to change her position right away.

"This is worth nothing except for the present hour, and the future remains completely uncertain," the newspaper Le Temps commented.

The French meanwhile announced the loss of a patrol boat and serious damage to a destroyer in a North Sea battle, but said a French submarine squared accounts by sinking a Nazi U-boat.

The high command's laconic communique failed to say when the action took place, but it is understood to have been within the last 48 hours.

Of activity on the Western Front, tonight's communique said:

"Activity of contact units. An encounter between patrols in the Vosges turned to our advantage."

The meeting of "Americans Over 40" has been called off for tonight, Dr. William Downs, president, said yesterday. The quarterly business meeting will be held next Friday night.

Whelchel Wins Dismissal Of 2 Charges

Congressman Begins Fight for Acquittal On 6 Other Counts

By the Associated Press

Gainesville, Ga., May 2.—Representative B. Frank Whelchel (Democrat), of Georgia, won dismissal in Federal court today of two counts charging sale of a rural postmastership, and began a fight for acquittal on six remaining counts.

Counsel for the north Georgia Congressman promised the jury they would refute each prosecution charge and prove, instead, that Whelchel repeatedly rejected offers of financial aid.

Paul Carpenter, defense attorney, said his client would not deny having received $2,700 from three persons, two of whom subsequently received postal appointments, but would show this money came to him as bona-fide campaign contributions.

Tells of Refusal

Roy Redd, erstwhile assistant cashier of a Cumming, Ga., bank, told how he transmitted an offer of $750 in campaign assistance from a prospective postmaster and declared Whelchel refused, saying:

"Hell, no. I don't accept contributions."

W. H. Warren, Baptist preacher at Cumming, told of a similar experience, quoting Whelchel as insisting "I pay my own way." Eventually, however, the Congressman added he saw "'nothing wrong with it if some of my friends want to take money and use it for me.'" Warren said.

On cross-examination, Warren told of offering Whelchel a $750 "contribution" from T. Lester Harris, who wished appointment as postmaster at Ball Ground, Ga. Asked why the money was tendered, Warren replied Harris "seemed to think that it might influence Mr. Whelchel."

Opposing defense motion for a directed acquittal, Assistant Attorney General O. John Rogge declared there is "no magic in the phrase 'campaign contributions,'" and added:

"There is no question these contributions were made for postal appointments."

Dies Appears Before Jurors

Representative Martin S. Dies (Democrat), Texas, appeared yesterday before the District grand jury which is investigating spurious letters purporting to connect him with the Silver Shirt movement headed by William Dudley Pelley.

Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of Labor's Nonpartisan League, has asserted that one of his aides, Harold Weisberg, bought the letters for $105. After having been placed in the Congressional Record, the letters were found to be spurious and were expunged.

A previous grand jury investigated and failed to return any indictments. Jackson then demanded a new inquiry, which is being conducted by District Attorney Edward M. Curran, John W. Fihelly, chief of the civil division, and Assistant District Attorney Evan T. Davis.

Haakon Flees As Nazis Take Andalsnes

Norwegian King, Family Reported On Way Northward

to be somewhere in northern Norway, above Trondheim, after escaping from repeated German aerial bombardments of Molde.

"They have successfully embarked for an unknown destination," the Norwegian spokesman said.

Molde is just across Moldefjord on the Nerwegian west coast from the abandoned Allied landing base of Andalsnes which German troops occupied at 3 p. m. today.

Refuge Is His Fourth

Once again Haakon VII, first King of modern Norway, has been forced by the fortunes of an uninvited war to fly with his family and his government before lightning invasion.

Meager reports last night were that the Norwegian King, already driven from a succession of capitals, has moved on to a fourth. In Stockholm, a "Norwegian spokesman" said Haakon was still in his own country. Berlin announced his refuge was Sweden.

April 13, when British warships were racing into Narvik harbor to attack the Germans, Haakon made a statement.

"My ministers," he said, "can visit Sweden; my people can evacuate to Sweden.

"I will have to stay in my country as long as there remains a single inch of Norwegian soil."

If German reports are true, that brave challenge is empty already of all but words; the briefest dynasty in Europe is at an end.

Haakon's reign, first of an independent King of Norway in 500 years, began in 1905, when he was crowned at Trondheim with his Queen, youngest daughter of Edward VII of England. Until then, Norway shared its crown with other Scandinavian countries: its King remained away from Norwegian soil and was neither Norwegian nor one of Norway's choice.

From 1450 until 1814, Norway was ruled jointly with Denmark by a Danish King. From 1814 until 1905 Norway was united with Sweden under the house of Bernadotte, only dynasty established by Napoleon to survive the First Empire. In 1905 the Norwegians declared their independence of Sweden and sought a King without success from the house of Bernadotte. The crown then was offered to Crown Prince Carl of Denmark who accepted and, as Haakon VII, ascended the throne.

Haakon was born August 3, 1872, and lived the placidly formal life of a Scandinavian court until he fell in love with his cousin, Maud of England, whose marriage to Haakon was strongly opposed by the young prince's mother, Crown Princess Louise. Their life at the Danish court after their marriage July 22, 1896, was harried and tempestuous and Maud spent much of her time in England.

Lives Country's Life

As King and Queen of Norway, the couple lived simply at Oslo with a small court. Though Haakon preferred a quiet game of bridge to strenuous outdoor sports, he pleased his new subjects by adopting their customs; he learned the delicate art of skiing on Norway's formidable hills, he learned to skate, he taught himself to handle a high Norwegian sled, steering it adroitly with a 12-foot pole. Every Sunday his devout people saw their King and their royal family in church.

With the exception of his own brother, Christian X of Denmark, Haakon is the tallest monarch in Europe, standing 6 feet 4 inches. Thoroughly democratic, he has consistently disdained a personal guard and his great height has been a matter for grave concern to the secret police of countries he has visited.

Crown Prince Olav, only son of Haakon and Maud, was born July 3, 1903, at Appleton House, Sandringham, England, and was christened Alexander. His name, like Carl's own, was changed when his father ascended the Norwegian throne in 1905. In 1939 he married Princess Martha, daughter of the King of Sweden.

The crown prince and his princess visited the United States last spring and summer, arriving in New York in April and sailing for home in July. They came to Washington June 28, made a whirlwind job of seeing the city, and left July 1.

Dedicating the Norwegian pavilion at the New York World's Fair exactly a year ago yesterday, Olav spoke gloomily of the state of things in Europe. "Unhappily," he said, "there is no sign of the probability of eternal peace within the reach of the world of tomorrow . . ." Twenty years before, at school in Norway, he spoke what may have been a prophetic sentence:

"I am going to study civil engineering; then I will have something to fall back on if I get the gate."

To Prince Olav and Princess Martha were born three children, who were reported to have escaped with their mother to Sweden some time ago. They are Princesses Ragnhild, 10, and Astrid, 8, and Prince Harald, 3.

War Holds Secret of Norse Royal Family's Fate

British Quit Fight in South Of Norway

Chamberlain Warns Commons 'Lightning Thrust' Is Likely

declaration that Britain has had to abandon the campaign to assault Trondheim from the south and has taken its troops below Trondheim "elsewhere."

Still Claims Advantage

It is safe to say, he went on, that "the balance of advantage lies up to the present with the Allied forces."

He explained it this way: The British loss of life in Norway has been small in proportion to the scale of the engagement; German losses on land, sea, and in the air "must have amounted to many thousands;" Germany has lost two or three capital ships damaged, four cruisers, 11 destroyers and 5 U-boats sunk and 30 or 40 transports as compared with British losses of 4 destroyers, 3 submarines, a sloop, 5 trawlers and a store-ship; as a result, Britain has been able to divert part of its fleet to the Mediterranean.

Soon after the prime minister had told of the withdrawal of "the whole of our forces from Andalsnes (100 miles southwest of Trondheim) without, as far as I am aware, losing a single man," the war office chronicled the withdrawal as the result of "ever-increasing enemy strength."

Reinforced German troops, moving up from Oslo, had forced the Allies back from Dombas, a main railway junction for Trondheim, toward Andalsnes. Norwegian troops it was indicated tonight, covered their withdrawal action.

The war office also said there was "nothing to report" from the Namsos area, where some thought the Andalsnes troops might be used to reinforce strongly entrenched British units and French Alpine Chasseurs.

At Narvik, far in the north, the Germans still held the iron-ore port, but the British surrounding it were stated to have been in "contact with the enemy."

His Voice Rasps

Acknowledging Germany's "central position" on the eve of the eighth-month anniversary of the declaration of war by the Allies, Chamberlain's old voice took on a metallic rasp.

The Nazis, he declared, may now attack "with lightning rapidity the Netherlands, Belgium, or both; the Balkans, on the Western Front, or Britain herself."

Strong, almost frenzied cheers accompanied his declaration: "We must seize every chance, as we have done and shall continue to do in Norway, to inflict damage on the enemy."

His speech followed new Royal Air Force blows against Nazi air bases at Stavanger and Fornebu, Norway, and Aalborg, Denmark, bases which Chamberlain declared had given Germany the "local air superiority" which made the British southern campaign a failure.

Raids Total 27

They have made a total of 27 raids on these bases. The planes returned today unscathed and shot down one German seaplane.

Both the opposition leaders, Clement R. Attlee for Labor and Sir Archibald Sinclair for the Opposition Liberals, agreed to Chamberlain's suggestion that they make no comment and ask no questions pending the further statement and debate which he promised for next Tuesday.

Chamberlain preceded his announcement of the Andalsnes retreat with a lengthy explanation of why the British were "forestalled," as he put it, in Norway. He blamed "long-planned, carefully elaborated treachery against an unsuspecting and almost unarmed people."

He recalled evidence, months ago, of Nazi troop practice in getting on and off ships in Baltic ports (stories which reached Europe's neutrals as early as November), but said it was impossible to tell beforehand which country was intended for invasion and that, at any rate, Britain could not move without the cooperation of Norway and Sweden, which it did not get.

Allies' Retreat Costs Prestige

Bergen Railroad, while the German forces that marched up the Aur Valley have reached the Sogne Fjord, which means that Laerdal has likewise been evacuated by the British. There is a reason, therefore, for the German claim that the remaining Norwegian forces in the south are willing to surrender.

Control Bulk of Norway

Thus the bulk and heart of Norway, containing most of its population, all its important towns and centers of industry and almost all its railroads, are in German hands. What is left consists, for the most part of barren and mountainous wastes, that stretch northward from Steinkjer and Namsos to far beyond the Arctic Circle—a region traversed by only one mountain road and sparsely settled by isolated farmers and fishermen whose most important city, barring the ruins that were Namsos, is now the inaccessible Narvik that also is still in German hands.

In some Norwegian and neutral quarters it is believed that, having been unable to use Scandinavia for a thrust into the German flank from the north, the Allies will now try to establish a "North Wall" north of Steinkjer, from behind which, with the support of Norwegian guerrillas in the south, they will be able to harass the Germans and not only continue to drain their meager resources, but, above all, prevent them from so establishing themselves in Norway that they can use it as a base for the long-projected German air attack on Britain.

Through such a policy, in line with the "long-time strategy" suggested by Prime Minister Chamberlain today, Norway would become in the war against Adolf Hitler what Spain was in the war against Napoleon—an open wound designed solely to bleed them to death. The reports about feverish activity behind the Allied Steinkjer front and the continued Allied attacks on the German air bases in Scandinavia are taken as an indication that this policy has already begun.

Project Is Difficult

But military observers are fully aware how difficult such a project is. For if the Allies determine to make a stand on the Steinkjer Line, the Germans may be expected to hurl against it their entire force in Norway and whether, considering the short time afforded for its preparations, the Allies could withstand such an assault is considered an open question. In regard to air warfare, it is pointed out that the Germans hold all Norwegian airports, and that the territory held by the Allies is scarcely suitable for building new airports except perhaps at two places.

For that reason many believe that the Allies will abandon the Steinkjer Line and evacuate Namsos as well, confining themselves to the conquest of Narvik, in which the German position appears hopeless. And Allied control of that town, through which must pass the German iron ore imports for more than half a year, remains a spear pointed against Germany.

SHOREHAM "COLLEGE NIGHT." Thirty-odd of the prettiest girls from Washington colleges, high schools and seminaries will parade in sports and beach togs in the Shoreham Blue Room this evening in the "College Night Style Show." The collegiate beauties will show off play suits, bathing suits and tricky beach hats and wraps at 9:30 before the regular Blue Room revue . . . The strobolite effects used in Francita's Tahitian number transform her from a blonde to an ebony-skinned dancer in the bat of an eyelash. Onlookers go tense with fascination, can't relax until Garfield Swift begins to carol "Leanin' On the Old Top Rail." P. S. Amusement Manager Max Lowe is relaxing after moving into his new home on Garfield street near Chevy Chase Circle. His next big chore will come when the Shoreham Terrace opens around June 1.

Peggy Lee and Johnny Russell, vocalists with Don Bestor's orchestra opening in the Metronome Room tonight

BENNY'S PAL, BESTOR. When Don Bestor and his band arrive on the Metronome Room bandstand tonight, lots of people will automatically look around for Jack Benny. Don played for the Benny broadcast for so long that Benny and Bestor still seem linked names. Since then Bestor has been around so much that a list of his engagements looks like a roster of the country's top spots.

GALA SATURDAY LUNCHEONS. Between being off from school or away from the office, all the lasses in Washington set aside Saturday luncheon sessions as real parties. Here are some of the places where your luncheon can start a big afternoon.

Flag Ship. Sam Korman's dance music from 2 to 5. Every other cocktail is half price. Lots of collegiates. Last Saturday the Georgetown collegiates were out in force at the twenty-first birthday party of Florence O'Brien, one of our town's loveliest models.

Versailles. Marvelous French cookery. You'll think you're in Paree, probably linger for hours. Last time John Hays Hammond, jr., had lunch at Versailles, he stayed right on for dinner.

Mayflower Lounge. Harp and violin music by Jack Minovich and Alfred Manning at luncheon. Don't worry about prices. There's a tony luncheon for $1 and you can get a plate of hors d'oeuvres for 80 cents.

Mayfair. You'll have a grand time here—if you can get in. Linger around a while and Lyle Smith's Trio and Singer Helen Wright will be along. You can enjoy their melodizing before you catch your afternoon movie.

Hi Hat. Beautiful music by Ray Harts' Diplomats from 1 to 3. Those dreamy violin solos by Frank Ramon will put you in the proper week-end mood. Ditto for Tommy Charmichael's wicked parody on "Thanks for the Memory."

Cafe-Caprice. The Rhythm Boys will serve up smart tempos and novelty songs from 1 to 3. Caprice is one of the prettiest spots in town and the food is of a deliciousness.

Casino Royal. Special Saturday luncheon revue at 1:30. The lissome Dancing Darlings, the singing and fun-making Reeves Sisters and Morrison, dancers Ruth Stevens and Valerie Wardell. A big diversion value.

Glen Echo. It would be a wonderful idea to drive out to Glen Echo, have luncheon in the new indoor cafe or on the roof garden, then spend the afternoon having fun around the park.

MAXINE SULLIVAN, top-flight swing nightingale, will be the guest artist on Bill Gottlieb's (Post "Swing Sessions") first broadcast over WRC tomorrow eve between 9:30 and 10. Here's where you'll get the low-down on syncopation.

CHIFFON IS QUEEN in the new Lotus "Fashionettes Revue." The so chic Fashionettes first whirl out in lavender and petunia chiffon with tiny hats of petunia ostrich. Dancer Ethel Lynn wears gray and violet chiffon with a necklace of violets. Dancer Andree waltzes in a chiffon that holds all colors of the rainbow. Yes, chiffon is the mode for May dancing.

ED SULLIVAN is almost making his home in the Troika. He's been there three times this week already, is due again tomorrow night when a special performance of "Sharmanca" will be presented for him. You can get the depth of his Troika-infatuation by the fact that practically all his column in the Tuesday New York Daily News was given over to Troika and La Helen Hamilton.

ABOUT CANARIES. Loraine Roberts, the Florida honey-pie now singing at the Robin Hood, has never seen snow. She came to Washington without a coat, nearly froze to death until she added to her wardrobe. . . . Baby-faced Claire Martin who carols with Arthur Duffy's band at Shar-Zad, is no baby in musical ability. She's sung with Russ Morgan, Bob Zurke and Hal Kemp, also made records for Victor . . . Peggy Wood of the King Cole Room is a graduate of the University of North Carolina, sang with bands while she was still in college. Last winter she sang at the Royal Victoria in Nassau, the Drum in Miami . . . Anchor Room's Eileen George never bothers to shop for dresses. At her favorite shop they know exactly what will please her in frocks, just send them to her, sight unseen.

Earline King, now at the Neptune Room, has sung in "Going Native" revues, with Phil Lampkin at the Baltimore Hippodrome and with Jo Lombardi's orchestra at the Earle Theater.

NEW DEALS are always being concluded in the Harrington Tavern. The Harrington Hotel is headquarters for many wholesalers in town, and they and their customers naturally gravitate to the Tavern after a sample viewing session.

BANDSMEN'S DOINGS. Art Humes of the Lounge Riviera has completed arrangements on the slick tunes from "Buck Benny Rides Again" . . . Maestro Angelo di Bella of the Lido used to be a professional dancer. He was associated with Velez and Yolanda . . . George Stein, River Bend's leader, is a gadget-fancier. Every automobile gadget ever made is attached to George's new Buick . . . Eddie Chase of Burt's Trans-Lux is making extra-sweet harmony on a new $750 accordion . . . One member of Milton Davis' Rainbow Room orchestra is a practicing attorney. He doesn't want his name used. So you'll have to guess which musician to tell about your legal troubles . . . Bill Downer and his Nightingale orchestra will be in the Metronome Room Monday eve to bend ears to Don Bestor's rhythms.

'Aerosphere' Gives U.S. Edge In Warplanes

Performance Figures On Planes of Other Powers Scaled Down

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 2.—The United States is given a definite edge over other world powers in the performance of its warplanes by a publication called "Aerosphere," edited by Glenn D. Angle, consulting engineer and engine designer. It went on the bookstands yesterday.

This work, the most comprehensive book in its field ever prepared, contains a good many surprises. The widely-publicized German single-motored fighter, the Messerschmitt "109," is credited by Angle with a top speed of only 310 miles an hour.

That is slightly under the speed of a standard American pursuit which was delivered in volume to the United States Army Corps two years ago.

The German Heinkel "112" pursuit is rated at 317 top speed, but no figures are given on the Messerschmitt "110," a bi-motored fighter. The comparable plane made in this country has exceeded 400 miles an hour with the secret Air Corps supercharger.

Supercharger Not Exported

The same plane released for export to the Allies is not equipped with the supercharger.

Bi-motored bombers: German Dornier, 310 miles per hour; German Junkers "86," 242; British Handley-Page Harrow, 200; the Handley-Page Hampden, 217; French Amiot bomber, 189, and the Italian Caproni, 273. A single-motor Kawaski bomber made in Japan is rated at 161.

Pursuits, all single-motored: British Hawker Hurricane, 335; French Moraine, 298; French Caudron, based on the fundamental design of a racer which outstripped the field at the National Air Races a few years ago, 261; an unnamed Japanese plane, 261; the Italian "A. P. 1," 217, and an unnamed Russian pursuit, 248.

The sensational speed of 310 miles per hour is credited to a Russian bi-motored bomber listed as the "T. B. 6."

Performance Figures Scaled Down

All in all, "Aerosphere's" first edition scales down considerably widely publicized performance figures on the planes of other world powers. For comparison, America's standard 4-motored bomber is rated in excess of 250 miles per hour; two medium-weight bombers in excess of 300, and at least three different types of pursuits, in excess of 350 miles per hour.

The British military flying boats of the "Sunderland" class are given a top speed of 145 miles per hour, which is less than the cruising speed of the American transatlantic flying boats.

Angle, who received his engineering education at the University of Michigan, and at one time was in charge of engine design for the United States Army Service, in a statement accompanying publication of the book, said in part:

"This country need not fear that its military aviation secrets may be stolen. It is not mere possession of those secrets that makes the United States supreme in world aeronautics, but the ever-expanding ingenuity and enterprise of the American people, plus our unmatched facilities for mass production."

Noel Coward, the Sun Dodger, Gives Design for Blackouts

Bottle of Gin, Pack Of Cards, Pillows Useful in Shelter

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer.

New York, May 2.—The imagination staggers under the picture of Noel Coward, the international man about town, clothed, fed, in his right mind and behind a desk at each and every 9 a. m. It staggers Coward, too.

"But I do it," said the British author, actor and playwright today as he discussed his wartime duties in the propaganda division of the British government offices in Paris.

"The curtain goes up at 9 a. m., and there I am, center front, a substantial citizen and a solid business man behind a desk. On the whole," the world-famous sun-dodger said rather critically, "I think I give a good performance. Occasionally I don't come to until the middle of the first act, but there I am, nonetheless, going through the business."

"Open and Close Cold"

"Even on the opening day, no one cried, 'Author, author,'" he said. "And at the end of a day, it's no good hanging around for a curtain call or a bit of applause to send me home happy. I open and close cold."

Coward has been in Paris since the third day after the declaration of war. He has just arrived in New York for a bit of a holiday from "blackouts"—having saved all his days-off and leaves of absence for this treat because "I have had greatest nostalgia to see America again and my friends here."

Coward, at a New York hotel, refused point-blank to discuss the war or his part in it. But his admirers, on whom the sun never sets, will be happy to learn that his attitude toward the current conflict is as witty, as flawlessly casual as that of any proper, well-regulated character in a Coward drawing-room comedy.

Gin Useful in Shelter

As befits a man of his originality, he has even devised his own air-raid precautions, prominently featuring a bottle of gin.

"Probably because I have a touch of claustrophobia," he said, "I dislike intensely the idea of slowly smothering in an air-raid shelter underground. I am fortunate enough to live in an old house in the Place Vendome which has been quite nicely reinforced with concrete. It also has an excellent stone staircase.

"When the air-raid warning sounds I gather up some pillows, a pack of cards and a bottle of gin, tuck myself beneath the stairs and do very nicely with the consolations of drink and solitaire until 'all clear' sounds."

He Even Looks Sunburned

From all of which it can be seen that Dear Noel is in the pink and at the peak of his form. He even managed to look slightly sunburned, due, doubtless to his unaccustomed exposure to daylight.

Or it may have been the reflection of his pinkish beige shirt, worn with a double-breasted blue suit which proved that the hands of London's tailors, preoccupied with uniforms, have not yet lost their civilian skill.

"Tell me," said Coward suddenly, "was it really freezing in Palm Beach this past winter? I hear the suffering was terrible."

I tried to inform him of the scioness who discovered that in all her 70-room mansion, she had only one fireplace to keep her warm.

Hangs Around With Lunts

"Don't tell me any more!" cried Coward. "God, it goes through me like a knife!"

The bon vivant who is a polished London edition of the Man Who Came to Dinner, only more on the alkaline side, said that during his first 48 hours in town he had not been invited to dine by any of the Mesdames Vanderbilts in the Social Register.

"I have been hanging around with those Lunts" (Alfred and Lynn Fontaine, who are friends), he said darkly, "when I should have been improving my social opportunities."

However, at that moment came gladsome tidings that Marlene Dietrich was trying to get him on the long-distance phone from Hollywood, and he was temporarily cheered about his social prospects. He intends to go to the movie capitol while in America, lured there by recollections of a bar which dispenses a lotion known as the Missionary's Downfall.

Dutch Fishing Ship Sunk, Crew Jailed As Spies by Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Amsterdam, May 2.—Another case of a ruthless German attack on Dutch fishermen is reported by the crew of the Scheveningen trawler Bep.

While the Bep was fishing in the North Sea some hundred miles north of the Netherlands coast on April 12 at 6 a. m., intensive machinegun and gunfire opened on the vessel from a mysterious trawler bearing no distinguishing mark.

Although the Bep flew the Dutch flag and bore "Holland" and Dutch colors painted on the sides, the fishermen immediately hoisted another Dutch flag, whereupon the mystery ship ceased firing and came alongside, revealing itself to be a German auxiliary craft.

The German commander ordered the Dutchmen to come aboard immediately, then turned his guns on the Bep and sank her. He told the Dutchmen he suspected them of being spies, although he had taken no steps to search their ship.

The fishermen were taken to Wesermuende, imprisoned and repeatedly questioned by the Gestapo. When the German police were finally satisfied two weeks later, the Dutchmen were allowed to leave on a Netherlands coasting vessel.

New U. S.-Japan Talks to Iron Out Grievances Likely

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, May 1.—The outlook for a renewal of United States-Japanese conversations aiming at clearing up American grievances resulting from the war in China has improved, and Joseph C. Grew, the United States Ambassador, has abandoned plans for a vacation in the United States.

Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador, also has given up a scheduled trip, and both Ambassadors expect to remain in Japan all summer.

Uncertainties of the European war and the knowledge that Germans are ceaselessly and subtly working with pro-Nazi elements here forced the British Ambassador to give up his vacation. Grew is less directly concerned with that aspect, but feels the world position is so perilous the Ambassador to a key power cannot leave his post. Japan's recent trial balloon on the Netherlands Indies showed how suddenly a question as vitally important to the United States as Pacific power can arise from the European situation.

Senate Unit Votes $250,000 for Byrd

By the Associated Press

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved Wednesday $250,000 to maintain the Byrd expedition in the Antarctic for another year after hearing that President Roosevelt and the State Department were anxious to establish claims of the United States to Little America.

The House had refused to provide additional funds.

Lieut. Comdr. Robert A. J. English, secretary of the committee set up by the President to direct the polar expedition, told the Senators that the expedition was being kept in Little America for two seasons because the summer was so short that little could be accomplished in one season.

This Is How The Norwegians Pronounce Them

By the Associated Press

It's a safe bet to stress the first syllable of Norwegian place names.

Some of those most in the news are pronounced:

Oslo—Ohss'lo; Bergen—Bair'-gen; Narvik—Nahr'-veek; Trondheim—Tronn'-heeim; Steinkjer — Stane'-share; Andalsnes—Awn'-dahlss-ness; Namsos — Nahm'-sohss; Stavanger—-Stah-vahng'-er.

Suffixes, sometimes used as separate words, usually contain the key to meanings of geographic words in Norway. For instance, the Gudbrandsdal or Gudbrandsdalen is the Gudbrands Valley and Trondheim Fjord is Trondheim Bay.

Other such suffixes are:

Senate Group Raises Interior Bill $15,000,000

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved Wednesday an annual appropriation bill for the Interior Department of about $134,000,000, or more than $15,000,000 above the amount voted by the House.

Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, in charge of the bill, reported these major increases by the Senate committee: $11,825,000 for reclamation projects; $1,200,000 for the Bituminous Coal Commission, $1,000,000 for the Bonneville Power Administration, $1,166,980 for the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and $250,000 for the Byrd Expedition to the South Pole.

Hayden said he expected the Senate to begin consideration of the bill today.

Bombs Make Namsos Black Ruins

By Edmund deMaitre.
Copyright by New York Times

Namsos, Norway, May 2.—Four-fifths of Namsos has been literally wiped out by aerial bombardment.

The center of the town, adjoining the dock, is nothing but a pile of bricks and burnt wood, and only a few houses on the edge further from the fjord remain standing. The dock itself has been repeatedly bombed and is strewn with debris and supplies. But the dock somehow has escaped.

I have seen Chapel, Madrid, Abo and Rovaniemi after attacks from the air. I know what bombing is. But the completeness of the destruction at Namsos, a fortnight ago a peaceful and prosperous little Norwegian fishing town, exceeded anything I had ever seen.

In other bombed towns I have always found relics of life and labor, such as the tools of a mechanic or the dummy from a modiste shoppe, but in ruined Namsos not even this much was left to tell the story of those who had dwelt in its shattered homes and worked in its vanished shops.

The main parts of Namsos are so completely destroyed that it is impossible to tell where the streets were, in which the fishermen used to gather on summer evenings, impossible to say whether a given pile of bricks was a sawmill, a shop, a house, a bank or a school. The remains of the town are black and unrecognizable.

It was on April 19 at 9 a. m. that the first squadron of nine Heinkels appeared over the fjord. The French expeditionary force had begun to disembark the previous evening. The dock and the station were piled with boxes containing all sorts of supplies excepting munitions. The munitions had been taken to a safe place, for convoys had been attacked at sea and a bombardment was expected at Namsos. The civil population had left the town and taken refuge in forests and neighboring villages.

For seven hours waves of German bombing planes came over the town, transforming it into a blazing furnace. As everywhere in the North, most of the buildings were of wood, and the fires set by incendiary bombs quickly spread along the shore of the fjord. Unable to quench the fire, the French soldiers tried to check it by saving the houses nearest to docks. In doing this four French and one British soldier lost their lives.

The first building to collapse was the bank standing near the Grand Hotel which, before the arrival of the French troops, served as the headquarters of the British. It was in this hotel, of which not a brick is left, that Capt. Blake, of the British navy, was killed.

The four walls of the church remain standing, their blackened and cracked mass dominating the town. A 1,000-pound bomb fell upon the railway tracks and left them spreading around an immense crater. There are many such craters in the town. The snow filled them and then melted and ducks were soon swimming in the lakes thus created.

For three days there was a rain of fire and steel upon the town and the banks of the fjord. Sometimes as many as 40 bombers discharged their cargoes upon Namsos. The waves of planes ceased on the fourth day, after it was obvious that little was left of the town.

Garand Rifle Test Asked by Senators

The Senate military appropriations subcommittee has called upon the Army to stage a test near here next week of its new semi-automatic rifle in competition with other weapons.

Disturbed by criticisms of the Garand rifle, which is now replacing the 1903 Springfield as the basic Army weapon, the subcommittee has asked that a demonstration be held to compare it with the Johnson rifle and any others which inventors may desire to submit for test.

The tests will be held at a nearby Army post, possibly Fort Myer, so that members of Congress and others may attend, committeemen said.

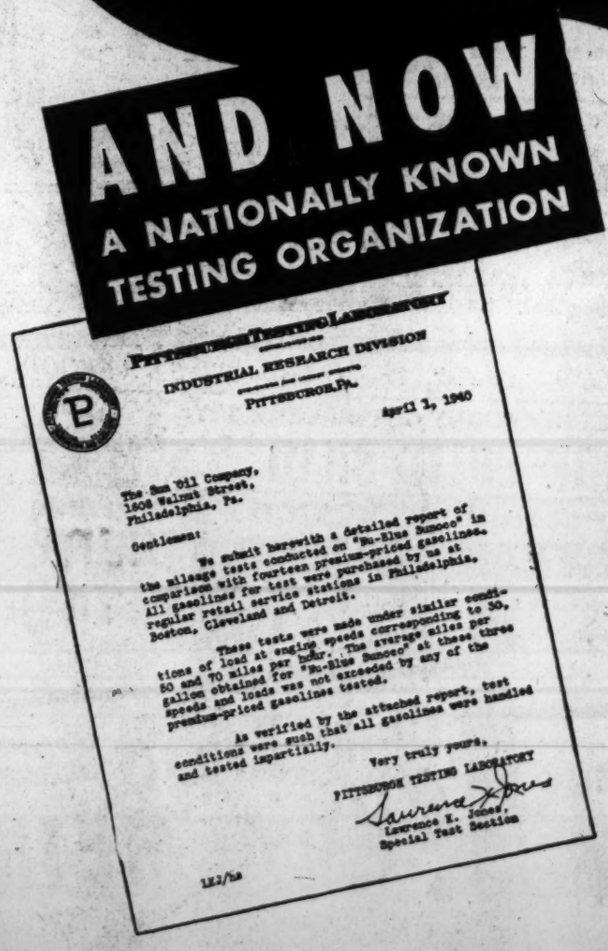
AND NOW A NATIONALLY KNOWN TESTING ORGANIZATION



PITTSBURGH TESTING LABORATORY
INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH DIVISION
PITTSBURGH, PA.
April 2, 1940

The Sun Oil Company,
1608 Walnut Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Gentlemen:

We submit herewith a detailed report of the mileage tests conducted on "Nu-Blue Sunoco" in comparison with fourteen premium-priced gasolines. All gasolines for test were purchased by us at regular retail service stations in Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland and Detroit.

These tests were made under similar conditions of load at engine speeds corresponding to 30, 50 and 70 miles per hour. The average miles per gallon obtained for "Nu-Blue Sunoco" at these three speeds and loads was not exceeded by any of the premium-priced gasolines tested.

As verified by the attached report, test conditions were such that all gasolines were handled and tested impartially.

Very truly yours,
Lawrence K. Jones,
Special Test Section

LKJ/ks

...proves Nu-Blue Sunoco

in scientific tests against 14 leading extra priced gasolines

These tests, completed March 27, 1940, by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory, were made to cover different driving speeds: low, medium and high. Regardless of speed, Nu-Blue Sunoco was unsurpassed in miles per gallon; and since it sells at regular gas price, Nu-Blue Sunoco gave more miles per dollar.

To make a fair test, don't dilute Nu-Blue Sunoco with other gasoline. Instead—for best results—let your tank run practically empty. Then put in Nu-Blue Sunoco. Compare it against any gasoline at any price, and particularly against extra priced fuels. ...We'll rest our case on your findings.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

"Wild Western Rodeo" To Divert Kids and Dads

Annual Fathers and Sons Banquet, May 12; Actors Fund Benefit Stars to Be Feted; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT MAY NOT BE "PROFESSIONAL THEATER" in the strict sense, but it is, at least, the biggest show of the year for a large number of Washington youngsters and the kids, at heart, who are their fathers.

It is, of course, to the seventeenth annual Fathers and Sons Banquet of the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood, to be held in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel on Sunday evening, May 12, that reference is made. By virtue of the talent involved and the number of celebrities invariably present, this, like "Uncle" Daniel Frohman's Actor Fund Benefit, becomes one of the events of the year.

BELL

The Fathers and Sons Banquet, this time, will take the form of a "Wild West Rodeo," with its wild and woolly aspects beginning as early at 5 p. m. Later on, star acts from the Capitol and Earle Theaters, imported stars, athletic figures of note—George Marshall and Ray Flaherty of the Redskins, players from Prexy Griffith's Nationals, boxers, wrestlers and whatnot—will participate in the mile-long program. Gene Autrey, No. 1 "Western" film star, is among the invited guests.

Every son of an attending father will receive a prize of one sort or another—tickets to the local theaters, to the ball games at Griffith Stadium, awards for meritorious behavior and achievement during the year, and the like.

General arrangements, as has been the case for years on end, are under the chairmanship of Sidney B. Lust, local independent theater owner and motion picture exhibitor, and Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, one of the best in the business—if that is what it is—will be master of ceremonies, as he was in 1939.

More important, it seems to me, than the purely gala aspects of these father-and-son evenings is their display of filial devotion and paternal pride. They are characterized by a spirit of camaraderie that is more impressive to the thoughtful observer than all the whoop-la of the stage and floor entertainments combined.

Broadway has blossomed out this week with a bouquet of new spring productions which it is hoped will not prove to be "bloomers." The critical "Death Watch" was called out Monday night by Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," with the Lunts; Wednesday night, by Brock Pemberton's production of "Out From Under," with Ruth Weston; last night by William Saroyan's "Love's Old Sweet Song," starring Walter Huston and Jessie Royce Landis, and tonight will attend the American stage debut of Oscar Homolka, in "Grey Farm," by Hector Bolitho and Terence Rattigan. Mr. Homolka was born in Vienna and earned his place among Europe's most distinguished actors. He was seen first on the American screen as "Oom Paul" Kruger, with Walter Huston in "Cecil Rhodes —Empire Builder" and later in "Ebb Tide," in which Barry Fitzgerald also had a prominent character part. Mr. Homolka has not been seen before on the boards in this country.

The long list of stage, screen and night club stars who will appear in Sunday night's Actors Fund benefit will have a gay time in Washington. They will be guests, before the performance at the National, at a dinner party and will be feted afterward at Helen Hamilton's Troika. The Troika's current revue will feature the night club finale of the benefit performance's first act. The master of ceremonies for Sabbath evening's goings-on, incidentally, will be that veteran expert at such things, Taylor Holmes, not seen on a local rostrum since he supported George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right," in which he was a droll Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

On Monday morning, May 6, Abe Lichtman's Lincoln Theater will present a special performance of Walt Disney's "Pinocchio" for crippled and handicapped Negro children, preceding the picture's regular engagement at the same house later in the week.

If you have forgotten what John Barrymore's profile looks like; or care to refresh your memory of Carole Lombard's first notable comedy portrayal on the screen, the Mount Vernon drive-in theater, down ferninst Alexandria on the Richmond highway, is showing "Twentieth Century" on its giant screen through tomorrow. The only person I can think of who wouldn't get a bang out of this picture is the volatile Elaine.

Hollywood talent scouts will be on hand tonight and tomorrow night when Rose Robison Cohen's Children's Studios of Speech and Dramatic Art present Barrie's "Peter Pan," at Wardman Park, for the benefit of the Children's Convalescent Home of the Christ Child Society.

Palace

That crowded little sailboat will countinue to carry its odd assortment of derelicts from the penal island to the mainland—somewhere down there in the Guianas—through a second week at Loew's Palace.

With action tinctured by the lowest instincts of man, a rough-and-ready love story, between the toughest of the escaping prisoners and an outlawed dancehall girl, and a slightly bewildering interjection of mysticism and Christlike omniscience, "Strange Cargo," nevertheless, has so caught the fancy of the Washington public that it opens its second week on F street this morning. With an all-male cast, save only for the presence of Joan Crawford in a role that does little to ameliorate the picture's brutality and frank exposition of human degradation, this stormy subject encompasses everything penal-colony films customarily contain plus a few exquisite tortures of its own. Clark Gable is the desperate Verne, opposite Miss Crawford's Julie.

In supporting roles, Ian Hunter, Albert Dekker, Paul Lukas, Eduardo Ciannelli, Peter Lorre and J. Edward Bromberg contribute excellent portrayals of despicable characters.

The accompanying short subjects also are being retained for a second week, together with a new issue of the "News of the Day."

Columbia

With Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine and Judith Anderson in the principal roles, David O. Selznick's picturization of Daphne du Maurier's novel of "Rebecca" today begins a repeat engagement on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater, after two successful earlier weeks at the Palace.

The story, as readers of the book are aware, is a none too cheerful recital of the experiences of a young bride, who attempts to preside as chatelaine of a great estate over which the spirit and the personality of her husband's first wife still rules indomitably and ruthlessly. The film adheres to the incidents of the novel with unusual fidelity, save in its final sequences, where the tragic death of the first wife is solved in a manner not quite so clear or so conclusive as originally contrived by Miss du Maurier.

Laurence Olivier contributes the cast's outstanding performance, closely seconded by Judith Anderson, who, if anything, is a little too grim in her devotion to the memory of her first mistress. C. Aubrey Smith and many others of note appear in roles of lesser importance. The production and direction are beyond reproach.

Selected short subjects and a new "News of the Day" release will augment the feature.

Infant Prodigy

Maureen O'Hara, the new Irish "find" currently scoring in "A Bill of Divorcement," began acting at the age of 7, wrote and produced her own plays at 10, was a featured radio performer when 12 and a member of the Abbey Players at 14.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 2.

It was a big night for Jeanette MacDonald at the final concert of her season's tour at the Philharmonic. The audience was with her all the way. She looked stunning in pink chiffon, and no one was more thrilled than Jeanette when Gene Raymond shared in her applause after she sang his song, "Let Me Always Sing" . . . Charles Wagner, who has managed the biggest singers including John McCormack and Mary Garden, said he'd never worked with anyone more cooperative. She's done 30 concerts, broken records everywhere.

HOPPER

Funniest incident occurred in Toledo, Ohio, where they pulled in at six a. m. Standing on the platform was a woman who came down to get a look at Jeanette. After she looked, she exclaimed, "Good Heavens! I've got to hand it to you, I wouldnt have believed anyone could look so pretty at this ungodly hour."

It's spring and anything can happen. And it will. In Holland, Michigan, during the annual Tulip Festival, Dorothy Lamour will share the same air wave with former husband Herbie Kay—on his program, too.

That picture "Episode", which has a musical score including works of Wagner, Bach, and Offenbach, is really a hotbed of swing. Between takes, the Bro-deisky String Ensemble cuts loose with jive, Eddie Albert swings a violin, and Jane Wyman sings "torchy"—I mean torrid, but not good.

If you hear de Mille bellowing "Romeo!" on the set of "North West Mounted Police," he isn't reciting Shakespeare, but calling his technical adviser, a Cree Indian named Romeo Farrell.

Jimmy Stewart and Olivia de Havilland have dined practically every night for three weeks at Dave Chasen's. Jimmy, who's a home-loving boy, has an odd way of traveling. His home is a block from where he keeps his plane, so he flies from there to Burbank airport, where Olivia's car picks him up. They dine, drive back to the airport, her chauffeur takes her home, Jimmy flies home. Be so much simpler when they're one.

Bernard Shubert and Mario Silva have the right ideas and stick to 'em. They wrote the story and music for "The Song of Love", which Metro bought, and which will star Robert Donat, Bob Taylor, and Greer Garson. But before it's made into a picture, Metro will produce it as a play in New York. The same authors have written "Rhapsody" which is the life of Liszt. Metro wants to buy it, but the boys won't sell because it isn't yet finished, and they think the idea too important to let anybody else work on it.

What a time Lum and Abner had finding a make-up to suit their air personalities. And what do you suppose saved Lum? The right moustache—chosen by Producer Jack Votion.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 2 (INS).—Here Comes John Steinbeck again! This time with "The Okies of Modern Mexico," a documentary film of the peons, landless and hungry, Steinbeck walks "where angels fear to tread," for Mexico has ever been unwilling to have anything but the most complimentary film versions made of her countrymen. Steinbeck, undaunted, thinks well enough of his new story to script it himself—a thing he didn't even do for "Grapes of Wrath" or "Of Mice and Men," two of his most controversial and most widely discussed novels.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I have an idea that he is financially interested in his Mexican opus. Herbert Kline, who produced "Light Out in Europe" and "The Crisis," made before the Munich Putsch, is already in Mexico making arrangements for the movie to be produced at the Pan-American studios. An independent releasing outlet will be sought.

Priscilla Lane has been suspended by Warner Brothers studio and is now facing the same difficulty that beset Olivia De Havilland for so many weeks. She has just refused to do "Money and the Woman," scheduled to start today with Dennis Morgan in the lead. Jack Warner, who took Priscilla from the Fred Waring band and made her a big name in the last few years, was not only annoyed by so hurt at her refusal to be starred in what he felt would be a good part for her that he promptly took her off the payroll. Based on a magazine story, "Money and the Woman" was to have been directed by William K. Howard. I think that Jack's main grievance is that Priscilla simply walked out of the picture, and announced her intention of doing so in a telegram.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Pandro Bermans have dated the stork for December and couldn't be happier. It will be their second child; Hal Roach, jr., and pretty Mrs. Willis Hunt will marry as soon as she is legally free; Billy Mauch, of the Mauch twins, underwent a serious intestinal operation yesterday at the Hollywood hospital; Richard Greene is still very ill and running a high temperature, so John Payne will be sent east to substitute for him in the Kate Smith broadcast; the many friends of Mecca Graham are sympathizing with him in the death of his mother. She passed away on Tuesday and today Mecca and his father will take her back to their home town, Detroit.

Countess Dorothy Di Frasso planed to San Francisco for a few hours visit with Barbara Hutton von Reventlow; Margaret Ettinger and Helen Ferguson hosted a cocktail party in the American room of the Brown Derby in honor of Ralph Daigh, editor in chief of 52 Fawcett publications; Joyce Hodges, here from Omaha after three months absence; Basil Rathbone, Guy Kibbee, Susan Hayward, Arleen Whelan are a few of the movie players who greeted genial Mr. Daigh.

Judge Joseph Marchetti and Estelle Taylor an interesting Florentine garden twosome; Ken Murray and Lillian Cornell, an Earl Carrol beauty, talking things over at the Brown Derby; Geraldine Fitzgerald's baby is expected any minute; the Dick Foran-Jayne Larkin twosome looks steady. They were at the Tail 'O the Cock again for supper; Loretta Young and Myron Selznick dining and dancing at Perino's sky room; Bruce Cabot devotion itself to Frances Robinson at the Grace Hayes' lodge.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Post-War Federated Europe Urged by Georgetown Speaker

Americans Must Seek Out Causes Of Conflict, He Says

DR. JACQUES MARITAIN

Americans will do well to shun partisan propaganda, yet they owe it to themselves and to humanity to seek an intellectual understanding of the causes of Europe's present war.

In that way, they will be doing their part toward building a permanent world peace, once the guns have ceased firing.

Those are the words of Dr. Jacques Maritain, distinguished French philosopher and author, who addressed the Societe de Jean Labat at Georgetown University last night. He spoke in French.

Delivering his first lecture in Washington since November, 1938, the noted scholar, who is professor of philosophy at the Catholic University of Paris, advocated the post-war establishment of an European federation of states as the most urgent need confronting belligerents and nonbelligerents alike.

Dr. Maritain envisioned a Germany incorporated into this European federation on an economic and cultural basis, a Germany "which would not degenerate into oppressive internal regimentation nor the will of foreign hegemony."

"A federated Europe is unthinkable without a federated Germany and a federated Germany is impossible without a federated Europe," he said. "These two aspects of the federal solution are inseparably linked."

Reserved of manner and soft spoken, the visiting philosopher spoke without malice toward the enemy of his native France. When he branded the cruelties of Nazi and communistic totalitarianism, it was with intellectual detachment rather than emotional bias.

"Now as never before the world needs saints, whose power is stronger than death," said Dr. Maritain. "Europe will need them, Germany will need them, in order to remedy the spiritual disasters caused by the nihilist religion of hatred and enslavement that free peoples are facing today."

Regardless of the outcome of the war, Germanism must be included in any plan to federalize Europe, the speaker declared. Renunciation of part of their sovereighty would be required of the member states and "the German people, liberated from the iron rod of Nazism and Prussian Pan-Germanism, would at last enjoy natural conditions of development and prosperity, of constructive work and progress."

Before the present war, some of "the best" Germans looked with favor upon federalization as "the only way possible for it (the Reich) to fulfill what they considered as its historic mission," Dr. Maritain asserted.

Ethics Binds Politics

Politics is bound to ethics, he went on, and Europeans must accept that premise before a successful political union is possible.

"To found an authentic federation based on true freedom," said Dr. Maritain, "all the peoples of Europe must reconstruct their political philosophy, give up the false political dogmas of the old liberal individualism and of revolutionary totalitarianism in its diverse forms, and must seek in the truths that have formed the Occident that common ideal of political life and civilization without which a veritable federal organization is not permanently realizable.

"This means ultimately that a federated Europe will come into being only if the Christian spirit gives it birth."

The Count de Saint-Quentin, Ambassador from France, entertained Dr. Maritain at luncheon yesterday at the embassy. The philosopher, who arrived in the United States last January, has lectured since in Chicago, Buffalo, New York, Toronto and other cities, principally before university groups.

Mrs. Williams Dies at Her Home Near Potomac, Md.

Mrs. Julia Nannette Williams, 46, wife of Arthur W. Williams, died Wednesday night at her home near Potomac, Md.

Besides her husband, she leaves her mother, Mrs. Laurence A. White, Dickerson, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Julian Bauserman, Washington; a son, Laurence McGill White, Potomac; three sisters, Mrs. Fred A. Jones, Monroe, La.; Mrs. William B. Everett, Marshall, Va., and Miss Evelyn Wardlaw White, Dickerson, and three brothers, Laurence F. White, Flaxcombe, Saskatchewan, Canada; Oliver Belt White, Santa Monica, Calif., and Pinkney McGill White, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The funeral will take place at 2 p. m. tomorrow from St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Poolesville. Burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Bealsville.

Mrs. Williams was a native of Dickerson, Md., and before coming to the Potomac neighborhood four years ago lived in Frederick and Washington. Her father, one of Montgomery County's best-known farmers, for several years was a member of the board of county commissioners.

U. S. Guess Puts Nazi War Fund At 200 Million

Prospects of Reich For Increasing Gold Supply Held Slim

By Lloyd Lehrbas,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Germany's secret "war chest," fortified by acquisition of convertible assets in Denmark and Norway, now totals more than $200,000,000 on the basis of estimates by American officials charting the economics of the European war.

The Federal Reserve bank's have gained in Denmark and Norfigures credit the Reich with only $29,000,000 in gold, but that total has not varied since December, 1937, and officials do not doubt the existence of far greater unreported reserves.

The exact amount of gold and convertible assets Germany may way is not yet known to American economists, at the time of Hitler's lightning thrust into Scandinavia, Norway reported $51,000,000 in gold reserves, and Denmark had $53,000,000.

Sent Gold Abroad

Financial authorities pointed out, however, that both nations reputedly had sent large consignments of gold to London for safekeeping just prior to the German invasion. Norway also shipped $33,000,000 of the metal to the United States during January and February.

President Roosevelt's executive order, meanwhile, has "frozen" Danish and Norwegian assets in this country.

A large part of Germany's gold resources is believed to have come from seizures made when German troops took over Austria and her $48,000,000 in gold reserves, and Czecho-Slovakia, which reported $67,000,000 in gold shortly before the end came.

The Poles managed to spirit their gold stores out of the country barely in time to cheat the conquerors.

Although Germany has shipped only $1,318 in gold to the United States since the war started, The Reich's commercial commitments are reported to have been met promptly.

Students here see poor prospects of Germany's increasing her gold supply. The country's annual gold production amounts to only $650,000, counting in $350,000 from Czecho-Slovakia.

German trade is now virtually on a barter basis, although some cash may trickle through from the Baltic countries, the Balkans, Belgium, and the Netherlands. British blockade measures are believed to have plugged holes through which Germany formerly received sizable amounts of currency from the United States.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 2.

THE WARNER BROTHERS movie adaptation of Somerset Maugham's "The Letter" will be released as "The Sentence." The studio therefore wrote to Farrar & Rinehart, the New York publishers, stating that inasmuch as the title, "The Sentence," is included in the Farrar & Rinehart list, Warner Bros. would like to clear that title in the proper way . . . The publishers disclaimed any knowledge of such a book—but when Warner's assured them it was true, a further checkup was made . . . They discovered that "The Sentence" is a Grammar Pamphlet, written by Prof. Barker, for the freshman class at Williams College. And so the release of a Somerst Maugham movie story is being delayed until clearance is made for the title of a simple, elementary school pamphlet.

LAURENCE A. STEINHARDT, the American Ambassador to Russia, will be en route to his country shortly. . . . Ferenc Molnar, the playwright, is ailing and is receiving medical care in his hotel room. . . . President Vargas of Brazil is assuring visitors to his office that if the United States ever should become involved in warfare, his country immediately would follow suit. . . . Carl Van Doren, whose last work was the Benjamin Franklin biography, is collecting material for his newest book. It will concern the Fifth Column during the American Revolution.

CAPT. WILLIAM A. McHALE, who brought $4,500,000 in gold from Trondheim, Norway, to New York last week, is making a lecture tour . . . Capt. McHale was in Fefe's Monte Carlo Tuesday night, and told of his hiding the gold, when the Nazis invaded Norway. "If the German officers who came aboard had asked me for the gold," said Capt. McHale, "I would've told them that the Norwegians took it. But they didn't ask." . . . He then revealed the plans he had made, in the event of an attack by any of the 40 vessels waiting outside the waters of Trondheim. "Id have gone right back up the fjord I picked out," said Capt. McHale, "and in a spot I selected before leaving—a spot to which I could return after the war—there I'd have dumped that gold."

FRIENDS of Col. Tim McCoy, the movie and circus star, who have just left him in Wyoming, report that he's prepared to make a bid for the United States Senate . . . Gargantua, who likes to drink citrus juice, was cured of his front-paged affliction when John Ringling North served him a huge bowl of this juice, spiked with four bottles of castor oil . . . When Nick Schenck and his colleagues in the anti-trust cases went to Washington to confer with the Department of Justice, they acted like Balkan conspirators—entering backdoors, and registering under other names at the Shoreham.

A PROMINENT socialite, who rebels at ever seeing her name in print, now is busying herself with her newest work—sponsoring the Allied Ball. The lady was anxious to secure publicity in the local columns and so, accompanied by a convenient escort, she went to the Stork Club. . . . "Tell me," she whispered eagerly, to the doorman, "are there any columnists inside?" . . . "No, madame," was the doorman's solicitous assurance, "so come right in—you're perfectly safe."

THE EDITORS of P. M. decided to move their New York York offices to new quarters. After a search through the midtown section they decided that the most suitable place would be in the New York Times Annex Building . . . Negotiations were made, and terms agreed upon. But at the last minute, the deal was canceled by order of Arthur Hays Sulzberger. . . . That's why the Manhattan offices of P. M. will be located in the Longacre Building.

Metropolitan

In days that are filled with anxieties, Columbia Pictures is doing its part in alleviating the general gloom. "Too Many Husbands," already a downtown veteran, reopens this morning at the Metropolitan Theater, where one may expect to hear laughter that is lusty and a trifle shocked.

For "Too Many Husbands" is what our tremulous forefathers would have called naughty. Matter of fact, it is something of a modern miracle just how Jean Arthur's possessive glances toward both her husbands, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas, managed to elude the always-suspicious Hays-Breen combine.

Jean got her two husbands a la Enoch Arden, although the first didn't stay away so long. He did, albeit, stay away long enough for Jean to take unto herself a new mate, a best friend and business partner to boot. To say that these farcicial situations are relished by the three principals is to put it mildly.

Quite in the daft mood of the film, too, is Jean's conversation early in the film with Dorothy Peterson, who served as secretary to both of Jean's husbands. Dot loved both the boys, too, and the conversational fashion in which the two girls live over the two honeymoons makes for rare comedy. Harry Davenport, Melville Cooper, Mary Treen and Tom Dugan are the other principals, but you won't watch them much. You'll be too busy laughing at Jean and "Too Many Husbands."

Italian Envoy Sees Roosevelt And Welles

President Believed To Have Repeated Hope War Will Not Spread

President Roosevelt yesterday received the Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, and Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, for a half-hour conversation during which it was believed he repeated to the Italian envoy the hope of the United States that there shall be no spread of the war.

The visit of Prince Colonna followed a call on Wednesday by William Phillips, American Ambassador to Rome, on Premier Mussolini in the Italian capital. It was reported from Rome that Phillips was told Italy did not intend to enter the European war at the present time.

Today's visit was shrouded in the deepest secrecy both at the White House and the State Department.

Phillips had sent a full report to the department on his conversations, Welles said, but he would not comment on the Rome report that Phillips had been told Italy was not on the verge of entering the war.

However, Welles said categorically that no consideration had been given to the idea of advising Americans to leave Italy, a step that would be taken if there appeared to American officials to be any immediate danger of Italy's entering the war.

Limit Reported On Italian Peace

made anxious by Britain's diversion of shipping from the Mediterranean as a precaution.

Ambassador Phillips, it was learned, called on Count Ciano at the request of the State Department in Washington, and not, as had previously been reported, at the request of Ciano.

It was assumed the Ambassador's second call arose from his conference with Premier Mussolini yesterday.

In yesterday's conference Mussolini indicated he had no war intentions for the present, and today Ciano is understood to have let it be understood Yugoslavia is safe from any Italian action in the near future.

Tonight Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia indicated its opinion that Italy's attitude is none of the United State's business.

"Italy already is in the conflict, from the first day," said the paper, "as for quitting its position of waiting, this is an affair which concerns only him (Mussolini). He has the responsibility of guiding and safeguarding the fortunes of the Italian people."

Dempsey Asks Hatch Bill Recount

against making any formal statement. The committee met briefly on other legislation, but Sumners said no motion was made to revive the Hatch bill.

Representative Creal (Democrat), of Kentucky, who was reported to have offered the committee motion to table the bill, was asked if he would oppose a move for a recount. He said he "had nothing to say—let Dempsey talk."

The bill supplements the original Hatch Act by banning political activity by State employes paid from Federal funds, limits individual campaign contributions to $5,000, but permits Government employes residing in nearby Maryland and Virginia to participate in purely local elections of a nonpartisan nature.

In effect the measure would cripple powerful State machines relying on Federally paid State workers for political aid, just as the original Hatch bill struck a blow at campaign activities by all but a few highly placed Federal Government employes.

Although the bill was passed by the Senate six weeks ago, it had remained since in the Judiciary Committee until it was quietly put to sleep Wednesday. Voting media were slips of paper with "Yes" and "No" typewritten on each. Members tore the slips in two, and turned in the half containing a "Yes" or a "No." There were neither signatures nor handwriting to disclose how any given member voted. Some, like Murdock, retained the other half of the slip as proof of how they had voted.

Not Questioning Integrity

In challenging the accuracy of the count, Dempsey said he did not question the integrity of any member, but believed a mistake had been made.

He told reporters that nine Republican members and five Democrats had told him and others that they voted against tabling. If the votes of these 14 were tabulated correctly he said there would obviously have been a majority against tabling the measure.

Dempsey said he understood that the following Democrats have said that they voted against tabling—Representatives Murdock; Walter, of Pennsylvania; Tolan, of California; Massingale, of Oklahoma, and Gibbs, of Georgia.

Only members to publicly announce that they voted to table have been Guyer (Republican), of Kansas, and Satterfield (Democrat), of Virginia.

Dempsey told the House that the results were "confusing" and asked: "Would it not be in order to have a recount of that vote."

Rush of 4,800 Women to Institute Embarrasses Farley, Who Was Expecting 500

Delegates were cheered at the outset yesterday by Postmaster General Farley who predicted victory for the Democrats in November.

"I have some modest reputation as a prophet," said the Democratic National Committee chairman, "and I say to you that this country is Democratic, and will remain Democratic."

Farley warned the women not to pay too much attention to the Republican press. "Remember 'The Literary Digest' poll in 1936," he said.

He spoke throughout as Democratic Party chairman—not as presidential aspirant. He emphasized the Roosevelt Administration's humanitarian program and its generosity to women political workers.

Defense Needs Explained

Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, and Charles Edison, Secretary of the Navy, described the efforts of their departments to increase the defense of the United States Government on land and sea.

Long, who followed the three Cabinet officials, stressed America's interest in peace, but added "this waiver of the exercise of rights (the rights of American citizens in combat areas) . . . should not be misconstrued by any person as a supine acquiescence in the face of any injury to the American people or as supreme indifference to any threat at the freedom or independence of this or any other American republic."

Since Long's discussion of foreign policy was the first on the subject by a ranking State Department official since the European war reached its present stage, it attracted special attention.

He laid down four points as the basis of the Government's policy in a world at war. This policy, he said is:

"First, to keep out of war.

"Second, to keep alive and preserve all American rights.

"Third, to minimize during its course the evil effects of war upon commerce and industry.

"Fourth, to plan with the hope that after the war conditions will be so stabilized that in peaceful pursuits, established under a broad program of trade agreements, nations will be prosperous, peoples contented and the causes of war reduced to a minimum."

"The Department of State," Long said, "is following the paths of peace and the difficult and tortuous course of neutrality. We want to keep out of the war. We are planning to keep out of it."

300 Study Speaking

For luncheon the women divided into groups for round-table discussions. The groups varied in number, a large one being in honor of women in office.

Three hundred, who probably hope to take to the platform this summer, attended a luncheon-forum on public speaking given by Mrs. Elizabeth Von Hesse, voice teacher of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Von Hesse warned against high-pitched voices, mumbling and monotonous tones. Above all, she advised, "avoid easy chairs on the platform."

"No woman has been created," she said, "who can get out of an easy chair gracefully. "Insist upon a straight chair—any speaker attempting to rise from a comfortable chair would look like she were being lifted by a derrick.

"Be worth looking at. Be worth listening to, and say something worth remembering. But—

"Don't be fussy on the platform. No crossing of legs, no doodling, no fixing."

After lunch the women had a chance to see the Capital's double cherry blossoms, and Capitol Hill.

In bands of two or three hundred at a time they were seated in the House Ways and Means Committee chamber, and several members of the House of Representatives came to greet them.

The women will get off to an early start this morning. Most of them have 8 o'clock breakfast engagements with their Congressmen and their wives. The breakfasts will be state affairs.

Much interest centered last night around the plight of delegations from States with no Democratic representation in Congress. Vermont, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Maine women attending the institute are in the position of being without Democratic Congressmen in Washington.

But they will all be guests at the Congressional breakfast. Senator Ellender of Louisiana, and Mrs. Ellender will be hosts to the delegations from Vermont, New Hampshire and North Dakota—as well as to the single delegate from their own State of Louisiana.

Maine's delegation of 27 women will breakfast with Edward C. Moran, member of the Maritime Commission and former member of Congress, and Mrs. Moran in the North Interior Cafeteria Building. The Wisconsin delegation, which instigated a search for a Democratic Congressional breakfast host as soon as it arrived in Washington Thursday, has been "adopted" as breakfast guests by Arthur Altmeyer, of Wisconsin, chairman of the Social Security Board.

Some Congressmen were shocked yesterday to learn how their breakfast parties had grown. When they volunteered several weeks ago to be hosts they visioned clubby affairs at which they'd breakfast a few enthusiastic workers from back home. But yesterday, the influx of loyal Democrats in skirts, threatened to strain Congress members' budgets.

Later in the day there will be more messages from Cabinet officials. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes will speak in the Department Auditorium on "A Department of Conservation." Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who was scheduled previously to talk on "The Budget and the Debt," will address the women instead on "Gold."

Luncheon will be served in two sections. One group at the Raleigh Hotel will discuss "Equal Representation on Party Committees" with Mrs. James H. Wolfe, former director of the Women's Division of the National Democratic Committee, presiding. The second luncheon will honor precinct leaders. Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division, will preside.

The only public session of the Institute will be held tonight in the Riverside Stadium. Attorney General Robert H. Jackson will speak in a forum on "Business and Government Can Cooperate." For the panel such speakers will be assembled as Senator James Mead, of New York; Henry Harriman, former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, and Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post. Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, will be moderator.

Aiding Machine Politics

The attempt of the House Judiciary Committee to bottle up the Hatch bill has aroused resentment in and out of Congress. Coming on the eve of the 1940 political campaigns, that action must be considered a surrender to machine politics.

If the committee found any compelling objection to the bill, it should have reported its conclusions to the House. The proper procedure in that event is to bring in an adverse report on the legislation. But the committee has made no case against the measure. It has simply voted by secret ballot to withhold the bill from consideration by the entire House. To say the least, that is high-handed legislative procedure.

The country has enthusiastically approved the philosophy of the Hatch Act which now prevents Federal employes (except department heads and those engaged in policy making) from taking an active part in political campaigns or party management. By an overwhelming vote the Senate has approved the present bill to extend this constructive provision to State and municipal employes paid in part by Federal funds. Obviously that measure should become law before the 1940 campaigns get under way.

The argument usually raised against the bill is that it would permit unwarranted Federal interference with State functions. It may be that Congress is exercising too much influence over local governments. But Congress should take up this issue when it makes extensive grants to the States. Assuming that money is to continue to flow from Washington to various State agencies, it becomes imperative for Congress to set up safeguards against use of these funds for political purposes. And that is precisely what the new Hatch bill attempts to do.

In effect, the House Judiciary Committee has secretly voted for continued use of Federal money to support the machines of State politicians. Surely the House as a body will wish to reverse that action before its members ask for a vote of confidence in November.

Ships Vs. Planes

The history of armed conflict has demonstrated that rarely more than a brief interval elapses between the introduction of a new weapon and the development of new instruments of defense.

Thus armor met the challenge created by the lance. The antitank gun followed close on the heels of the tank. And it was not long after the first use of poison gas in modern warfare—on the Western Front in 1915—that the gas mask became a standard article of equipment for troops in the trenches and later for civilians back of the lines as well. These instances can be multiplied a hundredfold.

Ever since the World War, when the airplane first demonstrated its usefulness in combat, a vigorous debate has been raging in the war offices and the admiralties regarding this weapon. Particularly vehement has been the argument as to whether the plane has made the warship obsolete.

So far as most governments are concerned, including those like Germany and Italy, which have built up powerful air forces, this question has been answered in the negative. The fact that every nation has been expanding its fleet to the limit of its capacity shows that the fighting ship is still regarded as a necessary part of any defense system. Nonetheless, tests made in peacetime as well, as the limited experience gained thus far in the European war, suggest that designers of warships cannot afford to ignore the destructive capacity of the bombing planes on sea power.

Secretary of the Navy Edison would seem to be on firm ground when he says that capital ships will have to be redesigned to make them less vulnerable to aerial bombs. For the time being, he believes, aircraft has an advantage over ships. But he is convinced that this advantage "can be neutralized by improved armor and armament of the topside of the vessels."

In taking this view Secretary Edison clearly has history on his side. The airplane is a new weapon whose destructiveness can be sharply reduced by proper defensive measures. High-speed and easily maneuverable fighting planes and antiaircraft guns have already made bombing raids on protected areas rather hazardous. It would be surprising, indeed, if naval experts should fail to perfect new defensive devices for warships.

Just as battleships built after Jutland incorporated in their designs lessons learned in that greatest of sea battles of the World War, so naval vessels of the future will reflect experience gained from the combat now raging in and near the waters of Norway.

A Weak Defense

President Roosevelt's defense of his plan to abolish the Air Safety Board and shift the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce is exceedingly weak. He does not strengthen his case by intimating that opposition to this proposal comes either from uninformed sources or from persons selfishly interested in preservation of the status quo.

Since the air-line pilots and air-line managements are leading the fight against the reorganization order, the opposition is certainly not ignorant. But it undoubtedly has a very immediate interest in the maintenance of a regulatory system that has made an admirable record for prevention of air accidents.

Senator McCarran, who is leading the fight in the Senate for rejection of the proposed changes, effectually demolishes the President's argument that it is essential to give the Civil Aeronautics Authority "representation at the Cabinet table." Mr. McCarran points out that the old Bureau of Air Commerce had more than enough of such direct representation. It had so much, indeed, that Congress passed legislation establishing an independent agency which would no longer be "noticed only at the pleasure of a busy Secretary of Commerce."

The President's suggestion that the CAA needs to be brought into closer relationship with the Weather Bureau and the Coast and Geodetic Survey is hardly a valid excuse for making that agency a subordinate unit of the Department of Commerce. There are many agencies outside of Secretary Hopkins' domain with which the CAA needs close contacts.

It is true that the CAA would continue to exercise its functions of rule making, adjudication and investigation independently of the Secretary of Commerce. But otherwise it would be subject to his control. For the reorganization order states that "the budgeting, accounting, personnel, procurement, and related routine management functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board shall be performed under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce through such facilities as he shall designate or establish." It seems impossible to reconcile the terms of the order with the President's assurance that the board would continue to appoint and control its own personnel and submit its own budget.

The strongest objection to merging the functions of the CAA and the Air Safety Board has been entirely ignored in the President's formal statement. That is the danger of making the agency which promulgates rules for air safety the official investigator of the causes of air accidents. The new set-up, instead of preserving the present independence of accident investigation, would restore the conditions that prevailed under the old Bureau of Air Commerce.

It is reported that one of the major reasons for the proposed changes was a Budget Bureau indictment of "structural inadequacies of the CAA." Rumored friction and jealousy among board members may call for some sort of remedial action. But it certainly would not warrant abandoning an arrangement which has produced excellent results from the viewpoint of the public.

Half A Loaf

After many revisions, the McGehee bill to amend the District Unemployment Compensation Act has finally been approved by the judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee.

The measure does not attempt to make any far-reaching changes in the existing system. It is simply designed to reduce the contributions exacted from local employers to the prevailing national rate of 2.7 per cent. The controversy over the proposed experience rating system, which threatened to prevent action, has been settled by a provision that would defer its introduction to the latter half of 1942.

Reduced levies and exclusion from taxed pay rolls of amounts paid in excess of $3,000 to insured workers would, it is estimated, save local employers about $1,000,000 yearly. At the same time amendments liberalizing benefits would result in additional payments to workers of possibly $1,000,000 during the coming year.

The District collected about $5,000,000 more from employers last year than it paid out in benefits and now has a reserve fund of approximately $17,000,000. If the latest compromise is passed, therefore, the only result will be to retard the rate at which this huge reserve is currently accumulating. Ultimately it is hoped that a system of experience rating will be adopted providing for reduced payments more nearly adjusted to local needs as well as varied with some reference to the stability of employment records in individual cases.

Meantime, the limited tax relief afforded by the bill and the liberalized benefit payments would be of advantage to both employers and employes. Under the circumstances, opposition of certain labor groups to this provisional compromise is extremely shortsighted.

To End A Racket

Now that a compromise bill on the recording of automobile liens is being written it seems incredible that the present racket has been permitted to operate so long. It might have been stopped at least two years ago if politics had not proved stronger than considerations of public welfare in the Capital City.

The bill which the Senate refused to take up last week would have shifted the function of recording automobile liens from the office of the recorder of deeds to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. Under the compromise arrangement the same effect would be achieved by the assignment of a representative of the recorder of deeds to the traffic department. Thus the records of such liens would be kept in the same office where certificates of title indicating ownership of automobiles are issued.

Even more important, the new bill would make it mandatory for the director of traffic to indicate all liens outstanding against an automobile on the certificate of title which he issues. Innocent purchasers of cars would thus be automatically protected against hidden liens by means of which they are now frequently swindled.

Since this compromise appears to have the approval of all interested groups, there should be no further obstacle to its enactment. Having played petty politics with the previous measure through two sessions, Congress is under special obligation to accept the compromise bill without further delay.

Lost Round For Britain

With the loss of Dombas, the railroad junction point where the line from Oslo divides into two branches, one going due north to Trondheim and the other west to Andalsnes, the British force at the latter point was placed in a precarious position.

Under the circumstances it appears to have been a wise move on the part of the British to order the removal of their troops from the Andalsnes area and in so doing to abandon all immediate efforts to take Trondheim from the south. Yet the action underlines the magnitude of the disaster which has befallen the Allies in Norway. For, with the loss of Dombas and the withdrawal from Andalsnes, practically all of southern and central Norway is in German hands.

However, the fight in Norway goes on. Premier Chamberlain has announced that the troops withdrawn from Andalsnes are being transferred elsewhere and that the Allies "have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a side show." But it will take a large number of men and considerable equipment to regain the lost ground, and now as heretofore the sending of supplies and reinforcements will be subjected to the dangers of relentless German attacks from the air.

In a sense, the Allies are beginning all over again in Norway. The disastrous haste which marked their first ventures in that theater of war is now being replaced by greater care in assembling and equipping their expeditionary force. But the time they have lost in getting under way unquestionably puts them at a disadvantage. And they have to face the fact that Germany has now gained the chief objective for which she invaded Norway.

War On Crab Grass

The war may claim the headlines but the biggest news of the day for many harassed homeowners in the District is the announcement that the Office of National Capital Parks is about to undertake extensive tests to learn how best to improve Washington park grass.

Washington is a city where many things flourish — oratory, Presidential booms, the public debt, crime waves—and crab grass. Many a proud owner of a garden plot has carefully spaded the soil, used seeds guaranteed to produce a velvet lawn, spent hours in digging up weeds and dandelions, only to find by September a crazy quilt of brown patches where green grass ought to be. If it's not the heat its the humidity and more often than not it is both. But the results are disheartening.

So every homeowner will give three cheers and three cheers more for Dr. John Monteith, jr., who has been appointed collaborator at large for the National Park Service on this project. May he succeed in growing two blades where only one grew before, each blade standing up like one of the Green Mountain Boys prepared valiantly to do battle with sun and storm and crab grass.

Dr. Monteith has a great opportunity to become a benefactor to District homeowners who have become accustomed to heat and taxes and lack of franchise but continue to hope against hope that someday they may achieve a decent lawn.

Russell's Doctrines

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Defenders of Bertrand Russell who say there is no evidence to show that Russell's teaching has corrupted his pupils should know that, from the nature of the case, it would be impossible to obtain such evidence. A teacher may exercise a bad influence upon his pupils by making covert allusions (which intelligent youths are quick to apprehend), and by veiling perverse teachings by a laugh or a joke, without disturbing the decorum of the class, or exposing himself to the criticism of his pupils; yet all the while he would be subtly corrupting their minds, undermining their morals and exercising an evil influence upon the whole course of their lives.

It is stupid to say that Russell has been hired to teach mathematics, and therefore would not advocate his peculiar moral doctrines in the classroom. When a man of intelligence and learning becomes interested in religion and moral philosophy, and employs his gifts (as Russell has done) in writing upon these subjects, his other interests, whether they be mathematics, medicine, engineering or what not, become subordinated in his mind to these primary interests of religion and morality.

Every man recognizes, consciously or unconsciously, that religion and morality are the most important interests of man; and the glamour of these subjects, and the historical greatness of the men who have been preeminent in treating of them, induce any man who has a gift for the investigation of these branches of knowledge to plume himself more upon the study and treatment of these subjects than upon all other subjects in which he is interested.

In one way or another, Russell would unquestionably inculcate his moral (or amoral or immoral) doctrines upon his pupils.

"Yours Is The Earth"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Men would do well in these times to read and ponder Kipling's "If"—

"If you can wait, and not be tired by waiting,
Or, being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or, being hated, don't give way to hating,
* * * *
Yours is the earth, and everything that's in it."

With this in mind, is it not possible to put aside hatred, and with all our power seek peace by concentrating upon a single high objective? Certainly it is better to seek peace now, before the wastage of war, than after war has decimated the powers of the nations.

The high objective to be sought now is the revival of international trade, by the lowering of tariff barriers and an opportunity to each nation to secure things necessary to the pursuits of peace. This is not a millennial objective—all men desire it. Only hatred, which is another name for war, stands in the way.

Proves Proposition

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To show that the beast dwells in the breast of man, only slightly quelled by what is called civilization, Europe has its dictators, its wars. And to prove the same proposition America has its traffic, its hospital accident wards, its maimed and terror-stricken, its traffic bureaus and its campaigns for alleviation of these conditions which get nowhere.

"Auto-Lien Racket"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Abraham Chaifetz in his letter of April 30 appears not to grasp the "Auto-Lien Racket," notwithstanding his reference to the District of Columbia Code, etc. Therefore let me give you an example, taking an actual case which is a matter of record. Names given are fictitious but the parties are living.

In August, 1939, Mr. Jones bought an automobile from the Doe Motor Co. and traded in his old car and executed a contract and note to pay $650 additional at the rate of $40 per month. Mr. Jones was given a District of Columbia certificate of title and secured District of Columbia tags, the note was discounted "without recourse" to a finance company. Mr. Jones kept his payments up to date, but on February 7, 1940, the car was "snatched" from his possession.

He reported it as stolen to the police and was advised by them that the car had been "repossessed" by the Era Motor Co. of New York City. Investigation disclosed that a conditional sales contract covering the said car had been duly recorded in New York State; that the car had been brought to Washington by an alleged transferee of the original purchaser and "sold" "free and clear of all liens" to a second party who in turn "sold it" to the Doe Motor Co. "free and clear."

In other words, it appears that a District of Columbia certificate of title does not mean much; the Police Department evidently—and evidently justifiably—does not place much credence in the certificate. In the case under discussion the authorities declined to issue a warrant in view of the fact that, as a lawyer learns in school, the vendor can pass no better title than he has.

Mr. Jones is my client; the automobile, as far as he is concerned, was stolen from him. He is a "third party" without knowledge of the prior lien. The lien was not recorded in the District of Columbia. The lien is legal and duly recorded in New York State, where the automobile was taken from here. As one lawyer to another, Mr. Chaifetz, do you still say "They can't do it"?

I think the statement Mr. Chaifetz criticizes, to wit; "Almost every day some motorist discovers that an automobile which he has purchased in good faith has been taken from him because of a hidden lien of which he had no knowledge," is strictly accurate. I also refer him to the metropolitan newspapers of February 9 and 21 for additional details.

Local Suffrage

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two years ago, on April 30, 1938, a referendum was held in 64 public schools throughout the entire District of Columbia. In this referendum two questions were asked, namely: 1. Are you in favor of self-government? 2. Are you in favor of national representation? The people of this city voted overwhelmingly for both. In spite of this, where is our suffrage? We are entitled to it as American citizens.

We, the half-million people of the District of Columbia, constitute the only community in all the expanse of the United States which is denied representation in the National Government and suffrage. I might go further and state that the United States of America is the only nation in the entire world which denies the franchise to the residents of the capital city.

This is the center of the world's greatest democracy but still democracy hasn't reached here yet. All of us hope it will come here, and when Congress gives the District the franchise, then we can say that at last democracy has found the way to the Capital of the United States of America.

The Food-Stamp Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No one could take issue with your frank statement in your editorial of April 19, entitled "A Study in Contrasts," pointing out the miserable relief situation in the District. As an argument for restoration of local suffrage and an increased relief appropriation it certainly should not be challenged. But using that argument to discourage any effort to obtain the food stamp plan for Washington—and the Commissioners have agreed to apply—is an incredible piece of logic.

Because Washington is among "the so-called rich cities of the United States," you maintain that the spectacle of the District "begging for a surplus that poorer communities could use to great advantage" is "unedifying." What good is it to undernourished folks if their richer brethren in this city have enough food?

Isn't it even more "unedifying" to learn that as of June 1, 7,500 "employables" and their families will "fall between the cracks" (to quote Mr. Bondy), because no provision is made for them? And because a member of the family was unfortunate enough to be unable to obtain employment, though certified as able to work? Isn't it "unedifying" to see the families on relief receiving on the average about two-thirds of the skimpy amount considered minimum for a family's subsistence by the Public Assistance Division?

Your editorial concludes on the note of optimism that, if only Congress would improve relief administration in Washington, reliance on Federal funds for surplus foods would be unnecessary. True. We should and will work toward that desirable end. But the immediate problem of feeding those who need relief, the undernourished persons receiving substandard relief, the public assistance clients, and the underpaid WPA workers, is one that is with us now.

Meanwhile, Welfare Director Bondy and the Commissioners, recognizing the inadequacy of the present provision for relief, and that more than 23,000 persons are in serious need of food, have been wise enough to apply for participation in the stamp plan before the July 1 deadline. Prospects for getting the small appropriation to set the food-stamp plan in operation here will be good, if the public rallies wholeheartedly behind the program in support of the Commissioners.

May I point out that your own news columns have repeatedly pointed out the benefits both to relief families and to retail business that have resulted in those cities fortunate enough to have the plan already in operation? The approach to the problem of undernourishment in the District can be as successful as in other cities. Hunger and the way to end it are the same all over the world.

A Citizens Food Stamp Committee has already been formed for the purpose of educating the public on this plan and rallying popular support behind the Commissioners.

Inasmuch as you devoted almost a full-column editorial to your view on this subject, I hope you will see fit to print our position in full.

The Post Impressionist

Humanity in Hiding

It was just a business block, like thousands of other business blocks in hundreds of towns the Nation over. You noticed three theaters, several drug stores, some clothing shops and a book window—nice to see, the first time, but hardly inspiring as invariable scenery for the 9 p. m. promenade.

Moreover, there were too many people on the sidewalks—just people, who came from no place special and were going no place special. They ran together in knots and straggled away in random directions, slowed here and sped up there, formed threes in front of you and impeded your progress, pushed you around in the aimlessly aggressive manner of a crowd, mumuring the while in the disembodied, senseless voice of the populace.

From Fourteenth to Thirteenth, from E to F, from Thirteenth to Fourteenth, and back to Fourteenth and E—with your head down you slogged along, getting your air before lunch and work again.

One night you paused to look in the book window, and a middle-aged couple stopped beside you. They examined Hermann Rauschnigg's "Voice of Destruction."

"Have you read it?" she asked. He grunted a denial. "But you should read it, dear," she insisted. "Everybody is talking about it." You saw the red mount in his face, and you knew just what he was thinking.

These two, of all the mass, you had surprised in a human moment. It set you to meditating. You remembered the insects you had seen when you lay with your face in the grass—how, close to the eye, the ant loomed large with the petal he was carrying home, the wounded bee was a lost giant in a maze, and the grasshopper leered from a many-windowed eye. Humanity, too, could be observed by leaning near; but you must look into the faces, and you must linger to hear the words underneath the roar of the motors and the scream of the streetcar wheels.

So the next night you saw a policeman try his luck in a shooting gallery, and it made you chuckle; you noticed that the pencil peddler had a nearly bald head and a great, blank countenance, and that made you sad.

Soon you began a journal of your imperfect observations:

March 23—Three children running ahead of a harassed woman who shouted not to cross the street without her.

March 26—A gum-chewing blonde in a gray suit who said to her escort, as they strode along: "Augh, shocks . . . Chee wiz!"

April 6—A tall man and a girl looking at a display of the Book of Ballets: ". . . Two weeks later I gave a dance recital. You know those long bars you hold onto in practice? I grabbed hold and started to go up on my toes. Then I found I didn't have on my ballet slippers. Everybody in the hall heard me yell."

April 11—Waited in the book alcove, but few persons came in and none lingered. They were crowding the streets to window-shop—a cherry-blossom throng from out of town, enjoying the spring fashions. The movie theaters each had a queue.

April 13—Streets even more crowded with window shoppers and moviegoers. Chance remark: "I move we adjourn to my apartment." Glimpse: Four barbers primping in a row at four mirrors, behind the partly drawn shade of a tonsorial parlor.

April 14—In the book alcove, a young man squiring two young women: "Whenever you see sunflowers, it's gonna be Van Gogh, you can always bet on it . . . There's one Van Gogh I'd like to see—Thomas Wolfe speaks of it." In a drug store window, written on a map: "Aerial View of Washington, 10 Cents."

April 17—An almost imperceptible drizzle. Rainy nights demonstrate the feminine preponderance in the Washington population. Saw two men sharing umbrellas with women, but more than a dozen pairs of girls walking together under their striped and flowered portable awnings . . . Neon signs make it hard to judge colors, especially when hats and coats are wet and reflect the lights.

April 18—The umbrella situation was reversed tonight. Saw two or three pairs of girls sharing, but a dozen men protecting their lady friends. Perhaps the continued rain impressed the females with the usefulness of having a man around—or furnished the wives and sweethearts a chance to give the other half a good lecture on gentlemanly duties.

April 21—Wind followed the long downpour. The sidewalks were filled with girls holding on their big straw hats. Preferred method was a hand on the crown (elbow out) or a firm grip on the brim.

You haven't varied your route, you see, but you have enjoyed variety, nevertheless. That great, moving blur against the permanent scenery is coming into focus—imperfectly, as yet, but with an outline momentarily clear here and there. It takes training to distinguish humanity in the mass of human beings.

Hungarian Dilemma

By Dorothy Thompson

From A War To A War

Budapest.

HERE in eastern Europe one is constantly struck with the discrepancy between the outward appearance of things and realities. No casual visitor to Budapest, for instance, could read from the aspect of things the terrible strain under which this capital lives.

It is, to my mind, one of the most enchanting cities of Europe. This year the spring has come early. The acacia trees that line the famous Corso along the Danube, that flows through the very center of the city, are leaved in the most delicate green, and the cafe tables, painted green and white and covered with flowered cloths, are already set out under them in front of the big hotels and famous restaurants.

Girls and young men in spring clothes, with the chic, well-groomed look characteristic of Budapest, are drinking coffee with whipped cream and eating white rolls and butter. But perhaps it is not coffee that we are drinking, though it tastes like it. In the shops it costs $8 a pound and is strictly rationed, and the disparity between the cost of coffee in a cup in a cafe and its cost in the bean is another of the things I have been unable to understand.

But the butter and the cream are certainly real, and so are the luscious little iced cakes and the ingredients of a three-course lunch that a neighbor is having served to him under the trees.

"IN VIENNA," says my Hungarian companion casually, "there is no whipped cream, no cake, and the butter ration for a week is just three times the size of this pat here. I was there last week. They are beginning to hate us for all the things we are able to eat here in Hungary—just as they did in the last war, in spite of the fact that we were Allies then of Germany."

She gets up to go. "Now you must come out to the Margit Island and see how wonderfully it has been improved since you were here last."

I'VE KNOWN this country for 20 years—many of them years of sheer tragedy, years in which a nation struggled up from complete frustration to the condition of relative prosperity which it is in today. No nation suffered more cruelly from the last war than Hungary. If there is any country in eastern Europe, whose sympathies would naturally be with the Germans in this war it is Hungary. The treaty of Versailles never began to do to Germany what the peace treaties did to Hungary.

Fall of the Hapsburg monarchy gave place to Count Michael Karolyi's government of men of good will, who believed the 14 points of Woodrow Wilson. They went to Belgrade to receive from the hands of Gen. Franchet d'Esperey a Carthaginian peace that took away two-thirds of the ancient Hungarian kingdom, and as an indirect result delivered the country over, in a few months, to the unspeakable terror of Bela Kun and to the occupation of a looting Rumanian army. From this condition of affairs Hungary was freed by an admiral on horseback, Nicholas Horthy. The Red terror was followed by a white terror, which, like the Red one, was often indiscriminate. Within another year the attempt of the Hapsburg Emperor to regain his throne in Budapest again brought the nation to the very verge of war.

When I went first to Hungary in 1920 there were no more than 500 railroad locomotives in the entire country; there are 10,000 today. The hospitals were crowded then with children suffering from a leprous tuberculosis of the skin that comes from starvation and dirt. Children are relatively healthy children in Hungary today. Suffering does not make people pleasant. Political hatreds went to the length of beastly cruelty. But Hungary became more and more tolerant, until the Nazi example started new intolerances.

Hungary was slowly recovering. She never reached that liberalism which the west preached to her, but she manifested the chief signs of political competence, dignity and sagacity; she kept to the legitimate government and to the traditional form of the state. The position of the crown was held by Admiral Horthy, who became Regent, and kept himself above political strife. Parliamentary government was maintained. During peace, Hungary made what was, under all these circumstances, a truly remarkable comeback, politically, economically and culturally.

A NEW YOUTH was coming on who read the signs of the times. They discussed land reform and the modernization of a society which entered the last war essentially feudal. They had political leaders who were men of western culture, and who in time and thought presented the case of Hungary with a greater brilliance than that commanded by any other national spokesmen. Although they never came to terms with the peace treaties, they showed willingness to postpone the decision while rebuilding the nation.

THIS WAR gives them the chance, perhaps, to force the decision. Will they take it? Germany's victory in Czecho-Slovakia gave them back part of the old kingdom. Are they not grateful to Germany? Would not a victory of Germany against Rumania give them back that province that they most passionately want returned —Transylvania? Is it possible that this mettlesome people, who have long waited for the hour of reckoning, would not welcome the opportunity to snatch, with Germany's assistance, what they sincerely believe belongs to them?

The Hungarians are a dissatisfied nation and they are not of a middle class liberal mentality like the Turks. Is it not obvious that they would welcome the unrolling of the whole question of the treaties and the chance to rewrite them with the assistance of German arms? Would they not, in the nature of things, be pro-Nazi?

These were the questions which were in my mind when I flew from Rumania to Budapest. I did not find a clear answer. I found, instead, a tragic dilemma. It is true that there is more pro-Nazi sentiment in Hungary than I have found in any eastern European nation. It is not sufficient explanation to say that Budapest is, since the conquest of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia, right at the very door of Germany, and that the pressure upon her from the Third Reich is enormous. That is true and I shall write more about this later.

INONU OF TURKEY
The Hungarians do not share his middle class liberal ideology

But it is in the nature of the experience of the last 20 years that Hungary should have more sympathy for the Nazi struggle than any other Danubian nation has. She is the only Danubian nation that has won anything from it so far, and that has the prospect of winning something more.

I believe that if Germany decides to move in eastern Europe and asks for a right of way across Hungary to Rumania she will get that right of way. If Hungary capitulates, however, it will be for more complicated reasons than those which motivated the capitulation of Denmark, namely, the military hopelessness of resistance. Resistance would certainly be in vain; the Hungarian frontier is wide open to Germany. Nor would the Third Reich countenance for a moment its fortification.

But that would not be the only reason why Hungary would not resist. Hungary understands why the Poles made their Quixotic resistance. Leading Hungarians say categorically that the Poles were right. The Hungarian mentality is much akin to the Polish, and is not bourgeois and national. And Hungary did refuse a German request for a right of way when Germany asked for it in September during the campaign against the Poles.

But a campaign against Rumania would be a different kettle of fish. A sacrifice on Hungary's part which would, in any way, amount to a defense of Rumania would be almost impossible for any Hungarian government to ask of the nation.

Actually, the entrance of Germany into Hungary in a move against Rumania would be hailed by thousands of Hungarians. But it would not be hailed by a single responsible figure in Hungary, and I find this a most interesting fact. On the contrary, they looked upon the possibility with ruthless and pessimistic realism. One man, whose opinion is extremely important and who is accustomed to weigh his words, said to me, "I would consider it the greatest catastrophe for Hungary since the invasion and subjugation of Hungary by the Turks."

HUNGARY has a large German minority whose ancestors have lived on excellent terms with their Magyar neighbors for generations. But no country is in love with its German minorities at present, for no one welcomes a Trojan horse. The spirit of Kossuth is very much alive in Hungary, and that spirit resented even the German Hapsburgs, who eventually accepted Hungary as an equal in the dual monarchy. Responsible Hungarian statesmen are under no illusions that the domination of the Danubian and eastern countries by Germany would eventually work out for the benefit of Hungary, however much it might add to her domain at the outset. "We do not want to become larger in order to be enslaved," said one man crisply.

Thus Hungary looks at Norway, and with great sympathy for that northern and western country thanks Heaven that the blow struck there first. Meanwhile, her leaders weigh the pros and cons of a possible German move eastward and pray that their country will regain the territory that it claims, either by their own hands, or, better, by reasonable compromise and with the consent and support of public opinion of the world.

They are realistically distrustful of a gift that may be offered them—the hardest gift in the world to refuse. That is their tragic dilemma.

Fair Enough

Grandiose Hoax

THE NAME of Sanford Jarrell over a small fiction story in the New York Daily News recalls a mischievous exploit of long ago, and prompts me to suggest that the author of the hoax has suffered too much for a feat that the general like of which committed by Edgar Allan Poe has been honored with a place in American literature.

On August 16, 1924, the New York Herald Tribune published in the lead position an exclusive story about a mysterious joy-boat of 15,000 tons which was lying about 15 miles off Fire Island, aboard which Long Island millionaires and pretty playthings of the idle rich were drinking intoxicating beverages and discomporting themselves with the utmost abandon by night. It was an eyewitness story by Sanford Jarrell, who had been assigned to the job on an office tip, and who after two days' search along the coast had confirmed the report.

Describing the ship as "a playground of the rich and fast," Mr. Jarrell went on to say that, although the vessel's name on bow and stern had been painted out, her silverware and linen were marked with the name of the Friedrich der Grosse, a former North German Lloyder.

"A Negro jazz orchestra," said he, "furnishes the music to which millionaires, flappers and chorus girls out of work whirl on a waxed floor with the tang of salt air in their lungs."

THE BAR "was heavily manned," the cuisine was "excellent," drinks of "every conceivable character" were on sale, and yachtsmen from the Hamptons were in the habit of going out there to anchor by and climb aboard for revels which were de luxe.

"This boat," Mr. Jarrell wrote, "is neither rumor nor fiction. The writer passed Thursday night aboard." He admitted, however, that it was "quite a feat to reach the particular spot in the Atlantic" where the "joy-giving" steamship lay, for she was "shifty as an Arab guide," and very often she took a cruise, "generally at the expense of some millionaire."

Mr. Jarrell provided a follow-up story which was rather pallid by comparison, for he had given his all to the original smash, and the day after that the United States Coast Guard, which at that time was as corrupt as the Kansas City Police Department ever was under Tom Pendergast, was assigned to hunt the vessel down.

Meantime, Mr. Jimmy Sinnott, on the Morning Telegraph, had been writing a hilarious satire on the hoax, and after one week the Herald Tribune, with great piety and a tone of outrage, suggesting a D. A. R. who has been called "Toots" by a member of the Workers' Alliance, washed its hands of Mr. Jarrell and his exclusive story.

MR. JULIAN MASON was managing editor and Mr. Dwight Perrin city editor, and both had been basely imposed on by a trusted reporter. Nobody in the Herald Tribune had ascertained from Lloyd's whether there was any ship of 15,000 tons whose whereabouts could not be precisely accounted for. Ships that large do not travel about like tramps.

Mr. Jarrell was dismissed and went his way. He has been wearing that albatross suspended from his neck ever since. He is heard of now here, now there, and the Sanford Jarrell whose little fiction story appeared in the Daily News is living in San Francisco.

May I say that Mr. Jarrell's invention was no mere fake, but something bigger and grander, and call attention to the fact that when a prank of this kind becomes a hoax it acquires a dignity and merit of its own? Mr. Poe's fraud about the balloon which crossed the Atlantic was perpetuated under much less difficult conditions, for there was no instantaneous communication over long distance then, but it is kept in the jewel case of literary journalism as a sort of gem, and the world has thought no less of Poe.

OTHER HOAXES of journalism are preserved and respected, including one about a trip to the moon and another about the escape of all the wild animals from the New York Zoo, but this one, because it occurred in a time when hoaxing was out of fashion and has never been respected, although, as an achievement, considering the difficulties, it was much more worthy. It was historic in New York.

Writing more than 15 years afterward of the failure of the Gallipoli campaign, Mr. Churchill said: "Force and time in this kind of operation amount to almost the same thing." Chamberlain's Stand

Partial Text of Statement

Tells Of Abandoning Andalsnes

London, May 2.—A partial text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's report on the Norwegian campaign, delivered today in Commons, follows:

Some three months ago we had made preparations for the dispatch of an Allied force to the assistance of Finland. The possibility of reaching Finland was dependent upon the collaboration of the governments of Norway and Sweden and, realizing that even their acquiescence in the passage of Allied troops might involve them in an invasion by Germany, we prepared other forces to go to their assistance in that contingency.

It did not escape our attention that in such a case Trondheim and other western ports of Norway, as well as the airdromes at Stavanger, might well be subject of attack by Germany and, accordingly, further forces . . . were made ready to occupy these places. . . . Instructions to the commanders of these forces provided that they were only to proceed to the occupation in one of two conditions, either that they were invited to do so by Norwegian government, or that Norwegian neutrality had already been violated.

Aware of Preparations

. . . Germany was able to forestall us . . . by long planned, carefully elaborated treachery against an unsuspecting and almost unarmed people.

We had been aware for many months that the Germans were accumulating transports and troops in Baltic ports and that these troops were constantly being practiced in embarkation and disembarkation. . . . It was impossible to tell beforehand where the blow would fall.

I cannot today give any details of the fighting which has taken place on both fronts since the landing took place . . .

It became evident to us some days ago that it would be impossible, owing to the German local air superiority, to land the artillery and tanks which would be necessary in order to enable our troops to withstand the enemy drive from the south.

It must be remembered that . . . it has always been possible for the Germans with their usual disregard for life, even of their own people, to send reinforcements to Norway at a much greater rate than would be open to us with the inadequate landing places we have to rely on.

Entire Force Withdrawn

Accordingly, we decided last week that we must abandon any idea of taking Trondheim from the south and that we must therefore withdraw our troops from that area and transfer them elsewhere.

Thanks to the powerful forces which the navy was able to bring to bear and the determination and skillful disposition of Gen. Paget, in command of the British land forces in the area, backed by the splendid courage and tenacity of the troops, we have now withdrawn the whole of our forces from Andalsnes under the very noses of the German airplanes without, as far as I am aware, losing a single man in this operation.

I am satisfied that the balance of advantage lies, up to the present, with the Allied forces.

German naval losses include two capital ships damaged certainly (three, possibly); four cruisers sunk; 11 destroyers sunk, and five U-boats sunk. Thirty transports and storeships have been sunk, scuttled or set on fire with a loss of several thousands of lives. A further 10 transports or storeships have been struck by our torpedoes and probably sunk.

The losses sustained by the Royal Navy in the same period are four destroyers, three submarines, one sloop and five trawlers sunk. Five other warships have been damaged by air attack. One storeship has also been sunk by a U-boat torpedo.

Balance of Sea Power Altered

The injury to the German navy has been so substantial as to alter the entire balance of naval power and to permit an important redistribution of the main Allied fleets. It has been thought possible to revert to the more normal distribution of ships in the Mediterranean which has, for some time, been affected by our requirements in the North Sea.

A British and French battle fleet with cruisers and auxiliary craft is already in the eastern basin of the Mediterranean on its way to Alexandria.

At this moment I would say to any who may be drawing hasty conclusions from the fact that for the present we have not succeeded in taking Trondheim: "It is far too soon to strike the Norwegian balance sheet yet, for the campaign has merely concluded a single phase in which it is safe to say that if we have not achieved our objective, neither have the Germans achieved theirs, while their losses are far greater than ours."

Enemy Holds Central Position

But I would take this opportunity of addressing a warning both to this House and to the country. We have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a sideshow but neither are we going to be trapped into such a dispersal of our forces as would leave us dangerously weak at the vital center.

We know that our enemy holds a central position. They have immense forces always mounted ready for attack and the attack can be launched with lightning rapidity in any one of many fields. We know that they are prepared, and would not scruple, to invade Holland or Belgium or both. Or it may be that their savage hordes will be hurled against their innocent neighbors in the southeast of Europe. They might well do more than one of these things in preparation for an attempt at a large-scale attack on the Western Front or even a lightning swoop on this country.

Operations in Progress

It would be foolish indeed to reveal to the enemy our conception of the strategy best calculated to secure their defeat. But this can be said—for it is obvious—that we must not disperse or tie up our forces so as to weaken our freedom of action in vital emergencies which may at any moment arise.

We must seize every chance, as we have done and shall continue to do in Norway, to inflict damage upon the enemy but we must not allow ourselves to forget the long-term strategy which will win the war.

Certain operations are in progress and we must do nothing which might jeopardize the lives of those engaged in them. I would, therefore, ask the House to defer comment and questions until we can have the debate next week when I anticipate that that particular difficulty will not arise.

The Lesson Of New York

By Ernest Lindley

On Walter-Logan Bill

TWO YEARS AGO there was an interesting sequence of events in New York which may be illuminating to both the advocates and the opponents of the Walter-Logan bill.

The New York Constitutional Convention—controlled by the Republicans—adopted an amendment providing that decisions of State and municipal administrative agencies should be subjected to review in the State courts, not only as to law, but as to facts. The argument for it, like that for the Walter-Logan bill in the House of Representatives, was largely hue and cry about checking "rampant bureaucracy" and guaranteeing "a government of laws, not of men."

The New York amendment was much milder than the Walter-Logan bill. It made, or seemed to make, however, one serious breach in the customary relationship between administrative agencies and the courts. This was in the "substantial evidence" rule. By this practice, the reviewing court goes into the facts only far enough to satisfy itself that the administrative agency had "substantial evidence" for its order or decision. It does not attempt to weigh each and every fact and try to reach its own appraisal. It recognizes that the experts in the administrative agencies are better equipped to do this.

The "substantial evidence" rule is supposed to protect the citizen against arbitrary action while enabling the facts to be ascertained in the most efficient way. Whether it always does is another question. The point is that the New York constitutional amendment seemed to breach this rule. The Walter-Logan bill has a somewhat similar provision.

THE NEW YORK amendment also subjected to judicial review a number of administrative decisions which are not now reviewable. Like the Walter-Logan bill, however, it exempted a number of agencies for no reason except that they were able to bring the political pressure to obtain exemptions.

Unlike the Walter-Logan bill, the New York amendment did not provide for judicial review of mere rules and regulations issued by administrative agencies. Nor did it contain other hamstringing features to be found in the Walter-Logan bill.

Mild as it was, this is what happened to the New York amendment:

Both candidates for Governor opposed it. Thomas E. Dewey said "it would permit a judge to interfere with and delay the effective administration of the laws of the State."

Both candidates for United States Senator opposed it. Edward Corsi, the Republican candidate, called it "vicious."

Frederick Crane, a Republican, at that time chief judge of the New York Court of Appeals—for years the most distinguished judicial body in the United States next to the Supreme Court—opposed it. Other eminent jurists opposed it.

Mayor LaGuardia said: "It is the most outrageous, disgraceful thing ever done. This is a real threat. In Germany they do it with a brown shirt, but here they are doing it with a black robe. It is a vicious threat to orderly administrative government."

THE ASSOCIATION of the Bar of the City of New York opposed it. (It has also condemned the Walter-Logan bill.) Among the leaders of the New York bar who opposed the constitutional amendment were John Foster Dulles, of Sullivan & Cromwell; Thomas Thacher, former Federal judge and Solicitor General of the United States; Arthur A. Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, and many other Republicans—not to mention Democrats.

The New York Times attacked the amendment on the ground that the courts were in danger of superseding administrative agencies, a role for which they were not fitted.

The State Federation of Labor condemned it as "utterly and completely vicious."

When this amendment was explained to the people of the State, the mild case of hysteria whipped up at the constitutional convention was dissipated. At the polls, in November, the judiciary amendment was defeated more overwhelmingly than any other proposed amendment to the constitution. The vote was 1,362,424 to 574,299. (There were other parts to this amendment, but the controversy centered on the judicial review section.)

IF THE NEW YORK amendment was a vicious menace to orderly government, the Walter-Logan bill is several times worse. It was put through the House by hue and cry with very little regard for its practical effects.

There was a sequel to the New York controversy. It focused attention on the need for changes in administrative procedure to assure the citizen protection against arbitrary action. This need was recognized by many opponents of the amendment, just as it is by many critics of the Walter-Logan bill. Governor Lehman appointed a commissioner to investigate the problem. This investigation parallels that now being made for the Federal Government by an Attorney General's Committee, under the chairmanship of Dean G. Acheson, a distinguished leader of the bar.

The Acheson committee will submit a full report in the fall. Whether or not it agrees with all the recommendations, Congress will then have the factual basis for legislation.

If the Senate does not fall prey to hysteria, the Walter-Logan bill will be beaten or pigeon-holed. Judging from the New York experience, the overwhelming majority of the members of Congress who feel that reforms in this field are necessary should have no difficulty in explaining to their constituents why it is wise to wait until the problem can be dealt with intelligently and carefully.

Lost Opportunity?

By Barnet Nover

The Allies Reform Their Lines

"TIME was the dominating factor," wrote Winston Churchill of the Gallipoli campaign in his book, "The World Crisis." A week lost was about the same as a division. Three divisions in February could have occupied the Gallipoli Peninsula with little fighting. Five could have captured it after March 18. Seven were insufficient at the end of April, but nine might just have done it. Eleven might have sufficed at the beginning of July. Fourteen were to prove insufficient on August 7."

Is history repeating itself? Is there, as some are already suggesting, an ominous parallel between what occurred in the Dardanelles a quarter of a century ago and what has been taking place on the Norwegian peninsula during the past three weeks?

CHAMBERLAIN
To be forewarned was not to be forearmed

On this question no one can speak with certainty. Reports out of Norway have been too confused and too fragmentary to permit of an accurate analysis. But the unavoidable conclusion to be drawn from the facts that are available is that the Allies have very definitely had much the worst of it in the military struggle raging on Norwegian soil.

Trondheim, held at the outset by only a skeleton German force, now appears securely in Germany's grasp. The British, Premier Chamberlain has announced, have had to withdraw from Andalsnes, 100 miles to the south of Trondheim and one of the two principal Allied bases of operation on the Norwegian coast. The Nazis appear to have temporarily abandoned Roros and Tynset, in the Glomma River Valley, with the Norwegians reporting that they have retaken these towns. But the main route between Oslo and Trondheim appears to be largely if not wholly in the hands of the invaders.

HOWEVER, we have Premier Chamberlain's assurance that the Allies "have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a side show." Presumably that means that Great Britain and France are not going to permit Germany's sway over southern and central Norway to go uncontested but intend to consolidate their forces in preparation for a new drive.

These assurances can be taken at their face value. The Allies cannot afford to abandon Norway to its fate. But the effort that will now be required to expel the invaders will obviously be far greater than what would have been necessary had the Allies been able to act more promptly and more forcefully than they did.

IN THE MEANTIME the clouds hanging over Norway are matched by clouds blowing in from the Mediterranean.

Ever since the European war began, last September, Mussolini has been holding up a moistened finger to find whether a favorable wind was beginning to blow in Italy's direction. His people want peace. But he has never regarded peace as an end in itself, only as a period during which diplomatic efforts are made to achieve objectives which, if they cannot be achieved that way, must be won by war.

He cannot wait too long. He cannot afford to let his partner, Hitler, win the war through Germany's unaided efforts. Nor, for that matter, can he afford to sit by and see the war degenerate into an endless see-saw. For this war is exhausting the nonbelligerents no less than the belligerents and Italy was already impoverished at the outset of the struggle. If, as the Duce sees it, it is to Italy's advantage to join Germany when by doing so a German victory becomes likely, it is equally important to do so in a manner that might produce such a victory in a short time.

YET HOWEVER eager Mussolini might be to capitalize the Allied defeat in Norway he cannot afford to ignore the great risks Italy would be taking in joining Germany at this time.

The fact of the matter is that the struggle in Norway has by no means been an unmitigated disaster for the Allies. The losses which they have incurred in the land fighting have, in part at least, been offset by the striking successes they have achieved on the sea. Mr. Chamberlain informed Parliament that the blows which have been dealt to the German fleet have permitted "an important redistribution of the main Allied fleets," for instance, the dispatch of a British-French fleet to Alexandria.

At the same time, Great Britain has ordered British merchant shipping to avoid the Mediterranean route for the longer and more expensive Cape route. All this is tantamount to a warning by the Allies to Mussolini that if he wants a fight he can have it but on terms which may give the Duce pause. For sea power is a factor which a peninsular state like Italy can ignore only at a terrible risk.

IN NORWAY the Allies let precious time slip through their fingers. Mr. Chamberlain insists that the British government knew of Germany's plan to invade Norway weeks before it occurred. But being forwarned apparently did not mean being forearmed.

In the Mediterranean, however the Allies are letting no grass grow under their feet or barnacles accumulate on their warships. They are showing their own hands in advance of any action by Italy. For this once, at least, they are not permitting a dictator to take the initiative but have taken the initiative themselves. And the results may well be salutary.

Citizens Ask Dupont, Scott Underpasses

Connecticut Ave. Group Urges Projects as Soon As 'Practicable'

Construction of an underpass at Scott Circle and at Dupont Circle "as soon thereafter as may be practicable" was urged last night in a resolution adopted by the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association at its final meeting of the season.

Approval of the Thomas Circle underpass was expressed in the same resolution adopted by the group of nearly 50 attending the meeting.

Other resolutions adopted by the group included requests for additional policemen and firemen in the District government; and a request for the repairing of Garfield street between Twenty seventh street and Connecticut avenue northwest. The National Symphony Orchestra campaign fund voted $10, and $25 was voted to the Central Union Mission.

A resolution by C. L. Curtis requesting newspapers "to discontinue the publication day after day of pictures of the various columnists and space writers, as these faces become very tiresome to most readers," was adopted after objections by David Babp, secretary of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

"It's a mighty hard job to get a column written for the paper day after day," said Babp, "and if a person can do it, I think he deserves to get his picture in the paper."

Northeast Conference

Admission of the Benning Citizens Association to membership in the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, raising the number of active units to 12, was marked last night at a meeting of the civic body at Twelfth Precinct station.

Delegates reporting from the new member organization were Stephen Balcerowicz and J. G. Pasco.

In the business session the conference went on record urging the addition of 100 patrolmen to the Metropolitan police force, as a measure to bulwark crime control in the District.

Simultaneously approved was a resolution for a District public defender to represent indigent persons in criminal trials, now represented by a court-appointed lawyer. Both resolutions were offered by John P. Cahill, delegate from Dahlgren Terrace Association.

The conference also passed a resolution asking the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to take steps to abate the nuisance of dense smoke along its tracks running through Northeast. Sponsors of the motion were the new delegates from Benning, as well as those from Burroughs, Brookland and Dahlgren Terrace.

In other action completion was urged of the trunk sewer running along South Dakota avenue from Chillum Heights to Michigan Park. Delegate Thomas Joy, from Chillum Heights, offered the resolution.

Marvin N. McLean, who was elected president of the Brookland Citizens Association Wednesday for the twentieth successive time, was congratulated by the conference.

Washington Highlands

A House bill to regulate the practice of chiropody in the District was opposed by the Washington Highlands Citizens Association meeting last night at the home of John G. Juergens, 3918 Second street southwest. It was the association's last meeting this season.

It was decided to ask the District engineering department to fill or drain a pool of water on Nichols avenue south of Halley place to end what was described as a menace to health. The association agreed to hold its first fall meeting this year in September instead of October.

Educators Open Parley Here Today

Leading educators of the Nation will gather here today for opening sessions of the twenty-third annual meeting of the American Council on Education at Wardman Park Hotel.

Delegates representing approximately 500 educational institutions and organizations will participate in the two-day meeting, according to Dr. George F. Zook, president of the council. First sessions are scheduled to begin at 10 a. m.

Dr. Mark A. May, director of the Institute of Human Relations, Yale University, will preside at the opening meeting when Dr. Zook delivers his annual report. Today's conference will be devoted to aspects of the council's educational program.

Following preliminary discussions, the meeting will be divided into four conference sections for reports by directors of current programs in four council projects—the American Youth Commission, the Commission on Teacher Education, the Educational Motion Picture project and the Cooperative Study of General Education.

William F. Russell, dean of Teachers College, Columbia University, will lead an afternoon symposium and panal discussion on "The Care and Adjustment of American Youth."

At the annual dinner tonight, Dr. May will speak on "The Education of a Democrat" and Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, will discuss "Who is Responsible for Peace?"

The meeting will close after a series of sessions tomorrow.

Gas Jets on, Nurse Found Unconscious

Miss Bessie Robinson, 35, a registered nurse, was found unconscious yesterday in the kitchen of her apartment at 2122 California street northwest, with three jets on a gas burner open. Miss Robinson was found by her mother, when she revived by the fire rescue squad. Her condition was described as not serious.

Ralph D. Pollio Elected Head Of Lions Club

Keiser, Piers, Myers, Potter and Ward Returned to Offices

Ralph D. Pollio, manager of the Mayflower Hotel, last night was unanimously elected president of the Washington Lions Club. He succeeds Floyd D. Akers.

POLLIO.

Other major officers were re-elected. They are Hugh V. Keiser, first vice president; Bert H. Piers, second vice president; Randolph E. Myers, secretary, and Vergne W. Potter, treasurer. Pollio, Piers, and Myers were named delegates to the international convention in July at Havana. George Ward was reelected lion tamer, and Raymond B. Clifford was elected tail twister.

Retiring President Akers reviewed the civic and charitable work of the organization.

A veteran in the hotel business and manager of the Mayflower for the past 12 years, Pollio is director of the Washington Board of Trade and the Washington Hotel Association, and is a member of the American Hotel Association. He is a fourth degree Knight of Columbus and a member of the Elks Club.

NLRB Cut Opposed

The Pattern Makers' Association of Washington and vicinity, has gone on record as opposed to reduced appropriations for National Labor Relations Board, it was announced yesterday.

Senate Votes Funds for Navy, Marine Statue

The Senate yesterday adopted a last-minute amendment to the Interior Department supply bill carrying a $100,000 appropriation for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial on Columbia Island along the Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard.

The amendment was offered by Senator Danaher (Republican), Connecticut, who explained that the governor of his State had become interested in the unfinished memorial on petition of close to 1,000 citizens of Connecticut who contributed to the $340,000 popular subscription.

Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, who was in charge of the bill, agreed to accept the amendment, but explained that it probably would be eliminated in a conference with the House on the appropriations.

The memorial was brought to Washington by Congress in 1934 and placed on a pedestal furnished by the Government. Congress last year authorized a $100,000 appropriation to complete it after a House committee had recommended $189,000. No appropriation was made, however.

The Interior bill also carries Senate increases for the Thomas Jefferson Memorial of $111,260, to bring it up to the budget estimate, and $40,000 for the construction of a police lodge and comfort station at Watergate, where the summer symphony orchestra concerts are held. The House refused the item.

Stuart G. Gibboney, chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, told the Senate subcommittee that arguments in the House that the memorial landscaping would involve the removal of a considerable number of chery trees was incorrect.

Only 34 cherry trees are involved, he said.

Ascension Day Parade Is Held By Templars

Six Commanderies Join in March Down Massachusetts Ave.

Two hundred strong, six commanderies of the Knights Templar of the District paraded down Massachusetts avenue last night to Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church for Ascension Day services.

The blue uniformed knights marched to the accompaniment of the Almas Temple band, led by their District Grand Commander J. Fred Huber.

At the church the knights raised their swords in salute as they recited the Apostles' Creed. The Rev. John Rustin, pastor, reminded the lodge members they were "charged with high responsibility" in preserving religious and patriotic ideals.

Commanderies in the parade included Washington Commandery No. 1, Columbia Commandery No. 2, Potomac Commandery No. 3, De Molay Commandery No. 4, Orient Commandery No. 5, and Brightwood Commandery No. 6.

Satire on Politics in War Wins College Play Contest

A satire on English politics in the present war was the theme of a student author's winning work in a one-act play contest held at Georgetown University last night in which student dramatic groups from four Jesuit colleges competed.

"The Gentleman from Avalon," by John T. Dugan, Fordham University junior, was selected as the best play by a board of three judges. The play was presented by the Fordham University Mimes and Mummers.

Thomas F. Mullahey, jr., of Georgetown, was judged the best actor in the competing groups. He appeared in the Georgetown University Mask and Baubble Club's presentation of "Dust of the Road," by Kenneth S. Goodman.

The Mask and Rapier Players of Loyola College, Baltimore, put Fritz Karinby's "Refund" on the boards.

The Argus Eyes Play Club of St. Peter's College, Jersey City, presented "Submerged" by H. S. Cottman and LaVergne Shaw.

Thomas J. West, of the cast of "Submerged," won the second prize for acting, and Thomas Crawford, of the cast of "The Gentleman From Avalon," took third place.

Judges were Barry Blake, of Station WJSV; Harry MacArthur, of the Washington Star, and Richard Coe, of The Post.

Katz Attacks McGehee Bill In New Form

Claims Many Losses For Labor as Author Of Plan Points To Worker Benefits

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The latest revision of the McGehee bill to amend the District Unemployment Compensation Act yesterday was attacked by the local C. I. O. as "a mockery and emasculation of unemployment compensation" as another fight over the "compromise" legislation both in the House District Committee and on the House floor was threatened.

Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, released statistical tables to support his statement that unemployed persons actually would receive less in maximum benefits under the McGehee amendments than they now get from the existing law.

These figures were released on the heels of a statement by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, that employes would share equally with the employers in monetary gains from the adoption of his amendments.

McGehee Lists Benefits

While employers would save approximately $1,000,000 through the flat reduction in the pay roll tax from 3 to 2.7 per cent, McGehee said, employes would gain an equal amount by an increase in maximum benefits from the present $15 a week for 16 weeks to $16 a week for 18 weeks; the establishment of a minimum of $6 a week, and a reduction in the amount of earnings necessary for the previous year.

"Employers receive receive a 15 per cent reduction in taxes, which the C. I. O. feels is warranted," said Katz, "while at the same time, according to McGehee's new bill, large sections of workers receive enormous reductions in unemployment compensation benefits.

"Such reductions would range as high as 40 per cent of the unemployment compensation benefits provided in the present law."

Table Shows Losses

Katz in a table attempted to show that the losses would fall hardest on the low-salaried group of employes. A man with a wife and three children earning $15 a week, he said, would get a maximum of $144 under the McGehee bill, as compared with $253.50 under the existing law. He thus would lose $109.50 by the change.

A single man on the same salary, Katz figured, would lose $12, or the difference between $156 and $144.

A married man with three children, earning $25 a week, would lose $156, while his single colleague would drop $26. For $35-a-week employes the respective losses, according to Katz's calculations, would be $102 and $76, respectively.

Eberharter Seeks Change

On the other hand, employes would benefit in every category under the Eberharter plan, Katz said.

Katz also claimed in a second table that the McGehee bill takes away a provision in the existing law which permits an employe to collect benefits in a lock-out and makes no change in the bar against benefits while on a strike.

Eberharter, in an earlier statement, said that he did not see "how friends of labor can support the bill" and stated he would offer amendments at "the proper time."

"The benefits are well balanced in this bill," replied McGehee. "We are trying to put the District on a par with the States."

McGehee said he would make no effort to call up the bill in the House before next District day, May 13, but would report it to the House District Committee on Monday.

Another Hall to Name

Representative Edwin A. Hall (Republican), of New York, yesterday declared he had "kind of run out of names" and was temporarily stumped in selecting a name for his sixth child, a boy born to Mrs. Hall at Sibley Hospital yesterday. The 30-year-old Representative declared he was considering naming the new arrival Dewey, as this would give the child "quite a range" of possibilities in his future career. The Halls' other children are two girls and three boys, ranging from 3 to 10

D. C. Party Chiefs Want 3d Term, Says McConihe

Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic national committeman for the District of Columbia, said yesterday that he had taken a poll of local Democratic leaders and found an overwhelming sentiment for a third term for President Roosevelt.

McConihe, after talking to members of the Democratic central committe, predicted that the six District delegates to the Chicago convention would be pledged to cast their ballots for President Roosevelt.

"Local Democrtas," he said, "began voting for President Roosevelt at national conventions at San Francisco in 1916. That year they started the boom that made him the Vice Presidential nominee. They voted for him again in 1932 and again in 1936."

Christian Unity Asked In Crisis

Cathedral Group Hears Plea of Texas Prelate; Procession Held

A plea for Christian unity in the face of the present world crisis was voiced yesterday by the Right Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, of Dallas, Tex., addressing the annual meeting of the National Cathedral Association at the Washington Cathedral.

Prelate of the Methodist Church, former president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and Cathedral council member, he told hundreds of the Cathedral's supporters that the Christian Church must lead in the development of a higher moral and spiritual standard for the world.

The meeting opened with a colorful procession of the Cathedral clergy and choristers, members of women's committees from several States, students of the National Cathedral School for Girls bearing State emblems, and others.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, presiding over the meeting in place of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, who earlier in the day injured his foot slightly while walking in his garden, reviewed the progress of the College of Preachers, of which he is warden.

Reports of the growing interest in the Cathedral project, came from Walter B. Clarkson, president of the National Cathedral Association, and new business manager of the Cathedral; Miss Mary E. Johnston, chairman of the women's committees of the association, and others.

Earlier in the day, Bishop Freeman conducted the dedication of the Beauvoir School, the Cathedral elementary unit. Following the annual meeting he and Mrs. Freeman received the guests in the bishop's garden.

A choir festival conducted last night by Dr. T. Tertius Noble, famed organist-composer of New York City, climaxed the day's activities. Participating choirs were the Cathedral, St. John's, Georgetown, and St. Stephen's and the Incarnation.

League Hears Greene

Roger Greene of the Rockefeller Foundation, chairman of the American Committee for Non-participation in Japanese Aggression, told the Greater Kensington Civic League Wednesday night that the United States is aiding in the destruction of China by selling metal to Japan. Green spoke at the League's regular meeting in the Kensington Junior High School.

Capital News in Brief

Gun Finder Shot

An automatic pistol, hidden years ago aboard the yacht Tech for safety, came to light yesterday and sent a 16-year-old boy to Providence Hospital with a wound in the side.

The Tech was sold a month ago by Robert Kellogg to William Sedeli, who tied the boat up at the foot of Tenth street southwest. Several years ago Kellogg hid somewhere aboard the boat a .32-caliber automatic pistol left over from his Navy days. On selling the Tech he searched unsuccessfully for his gun and concluded it had been lost overboard.

Yesterday George Boswell, 16, of 469 N street southwest, and Raymond Snadford, 12, of 479 N street, who had permission to go aboard, found the gun and played with it with disastrous results for young Boswell. He was taken by Sedeli to the hospital, where his condition was reported not serious.

WPA Seeks More Leeway From Congress

Asks Restoration Of Theater Projects, End of Cost Limit

By the Associated Press

The WPA has asked Congress, well-informed legislators said yesterday, to give it greater leeway in the size and type of projects which it can undertake with relief funds.

Members of the House Appropriations subcommittee considering President Roosevelt's relief estimates said that the requested revisions include:

Restoration of the Federal theater projects where local sponsorship can be obtained.

Removal of the $52,000 limit on the cost of construction projects.

Elimination of the requirement that local sponsors contribute 25 per cent of the cost of all non-Federal projects.

Reduction from 30 to 15 days of the enforced layoff period for all persons continuously on the WPA rolls for 18 months.

Committee members said WPA Commissioner Harrington, recommending the changes, suggested that if the committee felt a top limit should be fixed for construction projects, it be placed at $100,000.

Members said it had been found that the local contribution requirement denied some poor communities WPA projects of any kind.

Harrington was quoted as saying the furlough provision had caused little hardship.

Members disclosed that the WPA writers' project was criticized earlier this week by Col. Brehon Somervell, New York City WPA administrator, who told the committee he did not regard it as a justifiable one for public support.

He will speak tomorrow night at a dinner sponsored by Friends University, of Wichita. Landon will introduce him.

Jackson Calls Bruce Reference To Black a Resort to Bigotry

Baltimore Mayor Defends Radcliffe Against Allusion to Ku Klux Case; Says Most Senators Upheld Justice

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, May 2.—The case of Hugo Black, one-time member of the Ku Klux Klan, now an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, bobbed up again in the Maryland primary fight tonight.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson accused Howard W. Bruce, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate, of citing the Justice Black case to "arouse antagonism based on race and religious prejudices."

Bruce last night said that had he been in Senator George L. Radcliffe's place in 1937 he would have voted to hold up Black's confirmation in view of the Ku Klux Klan rumors. Radcliffe voted to confirm Black.

Mayor Jackson, in a radio speech tonight, said:

"It is to be regretted that Mr. Bruce has attempted to criticize Senator Radcliffe's votes on the confirmation of Mr. Justice Black to the Supreme Court of the United States.

"The repeated objections made by Mr. Bruce seem to involve an effort to arouse antagonism based on race and religious prejudices. There are several answers which can be made to Mr. Bruce.

"One of them is that if he will read the list of Senators who voted for Mr. Justice Black's confirmation, both in committee and on the floor of the Senate, he will find that Senator Radcliffe was in agreement with an overwhelming majority of the Senators, whose votes proved that neither race nor religion was allowed to play a part in the decision.

Cites His Record

"The second answer is that Senator Radcliffe, by his course of conduct in both public and private affairs all during his life, has proved that he is free from bigotry, from race and religious prejudices, and from intolerance of any kind. Anyone who knows Senator Radcliffe knows what I say is true. Mr. Bruce knows it himself."

Mayor Jackson, after praising Radcliffe's record and also tossing a bouquet or two in Bruce's direction, said that there was "no valid reason" for removing one from the Senate to make way for the other.

"The fact is," Mayor Jackson said, "that Mr. Bruce's ambition to be United States Senator is the sole reason why Senator Radcliffe is being opposed for renomination.

"If it were not for the circumstance that Mr. Bruce wants the office himself, Senator Radcliffe would be renominated practically by acclamation. Perhaps I am mistaken, but I really believe that if Mr. Bruce didn't happen to want the office for himself, he would at this very minute be supporting Senator Radcliffe."

The primary election takes place Monday, and today Bruce invaded hostile territory in quest of votes. He made a handshaking tour of Harford County, bailiwick of Senator Millard E. Tydings, who is backing Radcliffe.

Radcliffe on Shore

Senator Radcliffe meantime was on the Eastern Shore, visiting in Kent County and trying to undo the work of State Senate President Arthur Brice, who is conducting the Bruce campaign there.

The Bruce-Radcliffe fight has thoroughly overshadowed the battle going on for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. In this contest, the candidates are former Gov. Harry W. Nice and former Mayor William F. Broening.

Nice today assured visitors to his law office here that "after I've received the nomination, I'm going to be elected junior Senator of Maryland."

He predicted that Broening would not carry a single county. Looking ahead to the general election in November, he said he foresaw a swing of the pendulum that would put a Republican in the White House and himself in the Senate.

Clayton Act Cited Against D. C. Teamsters

Strike Hampered Third Party, the U. S., Prosecutor Charges

The contention that the Clayton Antitrust Act protects labor unions from criminal punishment for anything they might do was challenged by Special Assistant Attorney General James Hays in the District Court yesterday, in fighting a motion for directed verdict of acquittal in the teamsters union trial.

Hays urged Justice F. Dickinson Letts to require the local teamsters union and four of its officials to defend themselves against the charge of illegally restraining trade in Washington.

Joseph A. Padway, American Federation of Labor general counsel and defense attorney, moved for a direct verdict of acquittal when the Government concluded its evidence yesterday, after five and a half days of trial.

Charges U. S. Was Hampered

Hays and Special Assistant Attorney General Walter R. Hutchinson produced a score of witnesses to support charges that the teamster union hampered $4,000,000 worth of Government building here last year by calling strikes to enforce its right to collect dues from drivers of concrete mixer trucks. These drivers operated under a union contract negotiated by the operating engineers union, also an A. F. L. affiliate.

Three large concrete companies were shown to have been willing to say they would abide by their contract with the engineers and to have suffered several thousand dollars loss each as a result of the teamster strikes.

Padway spoke for three hours, reviewing previous labor cases in an effort to show that the Clayton Act exempted all union activity. Settling jurisdictional disputes, Padway said, was strictly a labor matter and no business of the Government.

Hays retorted that he agreed that such issues were "family matters and ought to be settled there," adding that "it is bad manners to settle family disputes on the street."

Third Party Involved

However, said Hays, when labor unions damaged third parties, not involved in the quarrel, by strikes called to effect a settlement, then the strikes were criminal restraints of trade.

The Government yesterday dismissed charges against Thomas O'Brien, Philadelphia, business agent for the international teamsters union. Counsel agreed that O'Brien had not been connected with the strikes here.

Padway then sought the acquittal order for local 639 of the teamsters and four of its officers, Charles J. Bell, president; Stuart M. Keyser, recording secretary; Linwood A. Trainham, secretary-treasurer, and Aubrey Z. Stream, business agent.

Justice Letts yesterday recessed the trial until Monday, when Hays will conclude his argument.

Balkan Fears Unfounded, Say Reich, Italy

Only Intervention By Allies Will Provoke Nazi Action, States Told

By Edward Kennedy

Associated Press Staff Writer

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 2.—Reassured by Germany and Italy that Balkan fears of aggression were unfounded, but nevertheless aware that the situation may change at any moment, the capitals of southeastern Europe tonight weighed the import of several disturbing developments.

German diplomats officially assured Balkan officials that there was no "real peril" to themselves except some attempted intervention by the Allies which would provoke "German action" as in Norway.

The Germans argued it was to their interest to keep southeastern Europe peaceful and productive.

Italy Marks Time

Italian diplomats said there was no reason to believe that Italy intended in the immediate future to change from her status of a nonbelligerent ally of Germany.

While these quieting words bolstered the assurances reported given United States Ambassador William Phillips in Rome, the news that the British and French war fleets were steaming through the eastern Mediterranean was an upsetting influence.

Greece, aware that an Italian thrust might be aimed from Italian-occupied Albania toward Salonika on the Aegean, suddenly called up ten classes of reserve army officers for active service.

Greece, like Turkey, has received pledges of British and French assistance.

Egypt, another British ally, on guard at the Suez Canal, took emergency measures, canceling army and police leaves and placing every vantage point under strict guard.

Steps were taken to introduce the death penalty for spying.

Along the Danube other countries continued their defense preparations. Among these was Yugoslavia, who a few days ago heard reports of German troop concentrations near her northern frontier, and of Italian precautions at Fiume and Trieste.

Arabian Coalition Likely

The British Ambassador to Turkey traveled to Sofia, Bulgaria, to confer with the British Minister there.

From the Near East came indication that a coalition of Arabian states is being attempted, a step which if successful would unify the whole country east of the Red Sea, a link in the British Empire "lifeline."

It was reported Emir Talal, crown prince of Transjordan, was en route to Sanaa, capital of Yemen, to see the Iman of Yemen, and would be joined there by King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia in discussions.

Blast Hurts Sailors On U. S. Destroyer

San Diego, Calif., May 2 (U.P.).—An explosion aboard the destroyer Crosby damaged the engine room and injured one seaman, it was disclosed tonight when the warship berthed at the North Island naval base.

Killed by Hit-Runner, Escapes Same Charge

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman yesterday nolle prossed a hit-and-run charge against Joseph B. Winston 35, of Landover, Md., because the latter was killed by a hit-and-run driver April 20.

Winston's case, which had been continued several times for jury assignment, was called before Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday. A copy of Winston's death certificate, proving him to be a hit-run victim in Suffolk, Va., was presented to the court.

Inquest Ordered In Traffic Death Of Mrs. Tait

An inquest has been set for tomorrow in the death of Mrs. Ada D. Tait, 51, of 1320 Randolph street northwest, who was declared the District's eighteenth traffic victim following an autopsy yesterday.

Mrs. Tait suffered an injury to her left leg, March 31, when the automobile in which she was riding struck an upright of the Florida avenue viaduct. She was taken home, where she received first aid from a private physician.

Ten days later Mrs. Tait was taken to Georgetown Hospital for treatment and returned home April 30. At 7:15 p. m. Wednesday she became ill suddenly and 30 minutes later was pronounced dead. Her death was due to an embolism.

Raymond P. Lizear, 53, of Silver Spring, Md., driver of the car in which Mrs. Tait was a passenger, will appear at the inquest. Thirty-one persons had been killed in traffic at this time last year.

Hazen's Visitors Find Commissioner Eager for Work

Visitors yesterday found the convalescent Commissioner Hazen well up on District news, and eager to return to his desk. He is at his home, 1829 Sixteenth street northwest, recovering from a heart attack.

Chipper and alert, the 72-year-old chairman of the Board of Commissioners said he probably would rest for a time at his farm in Nokesville, Va., before returning to his office.

He displayed a keen interest in the proposed grade separation at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest. About 20 years ago, as District surveyor, Commissioner Hazen drew up plans for the separation, which were used in designing the present plans.

During his six weeks stay at Doctors Hospital, the Commissioner put on some weight. Visiting him yesterday were Police Chief Ernest W. Brown and Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Man Is Burned Critically While Sleeping in Car

Earl E. Daniels, 39, of Floral Park, Long Island, was near death in Casualty Hospital last night from burns suffered when his clothing caught fire, apparently from a cigarette, while sleeping in an auto parked in front of 214 Massachusetts avenue southeast.

Policeman J. J. Cullinane, Ninth Precinct, said he broke a window of the automobile at 2:45 a. m. because the doors were locked from the inside. He pulled Daniels out and beat out the flames with a raincoat.

At the hospital, Daniels was said to have suffered third-degree burns to his torso and face. The automobile was owned by Maurice Murphy, 208 Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Painter, 33, Ends Life by Poison

A certificates of suicide by poison was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night in the death of Weldon H. Printz, 33-year-old painter, who was found dead in his automobile parked on a vacant lot in the 1400 block of Florida avenue northeast. Two almost illegible notes scrawled on slips of paper were in his pockets.

Neilson's First Case Gets 30 Days

Eugene Rose, 28, was at the District Jail under a 30-day sentence last night, suffering the dubious distinction of having been the first defendant to face George D. Neilson, newly appointed Police Court judge, when the latter took the bench at 9:30 a. m. yesterday.

Arrested Tuesday on B street northeast, Rose pleaded guilty to being intoxicated. Coincidentally, his captor and prosecutor was Policeman A. R. Nielson, Ninth Precinct.

The proposed 398-mile line, linking the National Capital with United's existing trans-continental system, would provide Washington for the first time with direct air serivce to San Francisco, Portland, Oreg. and Seattle, Wash., said W. A. Patterson, president of the airline.

Miss Mount Shares Seafood Luncheon Menu

Dean of Maryland U. Home Economics Proves Appropriate Food, Ingenuity In Table Setting Bring New Laurels

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor

YOU CAN'T go on indefinitely feeding your friends the same old standbys in the same old setting and feel that your parties are a success. A little ingenuity in planning a table setting and food appropriate to the scheme can bring new laurels as a hostess.

Miss Marie Mount is not bound by her past successes in entertaining guests. Although a very busy person as dean of the school of home economics, Maryland University, yet she has time for entertaining guests in her home and always in a distinctive manner. Perhaps it is because of her association with the State of Maryland, famous for its seafood—the epicure's joy, the diamondback terrapin, bay mackerel, the pompano, the shad and delicious soft and hard shelled crabs that Miss Mount was inspired to entertain at a nautical luncheon recently.

Martha Ellyn

Both the setting and the menu Dean Mount used at her luncheon were so appealing that I asked her to share it with The Post readers. Here is her menu and recipes for some of the dishes she served.

Cook over low heat. Add 1 beaten egg yolk and cook 2 minutes more. Remove from heat, add 2 tablespoons Sherry and almost 1 cup soft bread crumbs (reserving some for top of crab), 1 tablespoon minced parsley and 1 teaspoon chopped onion. Mix well with 2 cups crabmeat and place in a greased open baking dish. Sprinkle bread crumbs over top. Temperature of oven, 375 degrees. Baking time, 1 hour.

Tossed Green Salad—Into a salad bowl put shredded chicory and watercress. Add slices of avocados, diced tomatoes, sliced red radishes, sliced ripe olives and chopped chives. Marinate with French dressing and toss.

Sherry Almond Pudding—Soak 1½ tablespoons gelatin in ¼ cup cold water. Cool. Add ½ cup Sherry wine and ¼ teaspoon salt. When mixture begins to thicken, beat until frothy. Beat 6 egg whites until stiff, add 1½ cups sugar and beat until creamy. Fold egg whites and 1 cup whipped cream into beaten gelatin and chill until almost firm. Fill a melon mold, alternating the egg mixture with shredded almonds, and chill. Unmold on serving plate and garnish with almonds and toasted cocoanut. This dessert may be served with a Sherry sauce.

A busy executive at school, managing an apartment in Washington, Miss Mount is also owner of Iron Gate Inn, although she leaves the management of the inn to another. For five years she was chairman, home department, Federation of Women's Clubs, and is now chairman of the education department of the federation and active in the American Association of Univeristy Women. When she left her home in Crawfordsville, Ind., to enter Vassar College, she did not dream that she would later embark on a home economics career. But she returned to Indiana University, where she began her home economics training. After graduation from that university she went to the University of Chicago, then on to Columbia for her master's degree. For some time she was on the staff of Lasell Seminary, Boston, before going to Johns Hopkins Hospital to study dietetics, and then to come on to Maryland University to be the dean of home economics.

"Pigs" in Disguise Make Unique Service

Pork sausages go to make up many individual foods. The two following recipes are as delicious as their names are distinctive.

Pigs Under Wraps

Do you like your "pigs" in blankets or in rolls? Do you prefer the "overcoat" to be of pie crust or biscuit? This refers, of course, to those savory little pork sausage links which are wrapped up in one thing or another to produce a mouth-drooler of a dish! For your "blanket" variety, use biscuit. Cut out your rolled-out biscuit dough into rounds about 3 inches (or squares). Pan-fry pork sausage links for 10 minutes, place a link on each "biscuit blanket" and fold over. Bake 15 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) and serve—with mustard or horseradish or gravy or jam! For the "roll" or "overcoat" variety, use pie crust; roll it thin, cut into squares or rounds and put your pre-cooked sausage link in center, as before. This time, fold over the pie crust and press edges together, brush with milk or beaten egg and bake 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven 375 degrees F.). Good with beverages of all kinds, hot or cold!

Beating Improves Texture

Certain frozen desserts need several beatings during the freezing process. To give them a better texture, pour them into a bowl that has been chilled and beat with a chilled beater.

Miss Perkins Calls For Brotherly Love

Labor Secretary Tells Church Women Christian Principle Must Govern All Modern Public Relationships

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The Christian principle of brotherly love must cover all public relationships—that between employers and workers, workers and the rest of society, black and white—to establish a Christian social order, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins declared yesterday.

Addressing the May luncheon of the Washington Council of Church Women on "The Citizen and His Country," she asserted it should be the purpose of Christian people to demonstrate what a Christianly directed technical society can do for wage-earners. "We should make our wonderful technical society a Christian order by applying the principles of Christianity in daily life," she said.

When an employer is told he must install protective devices on his machinery and provide better ventilation in his factory, it should not be from the materialistic standpoint of increasing the efficiency of his workers but from that of making better conditions under which his brothers and sisters work, she said. The Christian pattern requires the fraternal way of life.

Social legislation, said Secretary Perkins, is the instrument by which this principle reaches out to include groups of people unknown to the individual but for whose welfare every Christian has brotherly concern. "We should think of law in a democratic society as a method of cooperation among free people."

Safe factories, abolition of child labor, and of night work for women in most industrial States; unemployment compensation and widows' pensions represent part of the corporate effort of the American people to put persons they have never seen on a basis of living such as they would desire for their brothers, she said.

Quoting from a pamphlet, "The Church and the Social Order," issued by the National Catholic Welfare Conference, emphasizing the need to "bring Christ back into the social order," she pointed out there were no barriers between Christians of different faiths in practices for establishing the Christian social order.

Points of unity on which all are agreed are the sanctity of human personality, the great love of liberty, inherent in Christian doctrine everywhere, and the importance of the individual. As a corollary to these convictions, there should be an effort to find a brotherly way of living in order to follow the Christian pattern, she said.

Dovetailing with her address was the announcement by Dr. James Myers, of New York, industrial secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, of the Inter-Faith Conference on Unemployment to be held in Washington June 4, 5 and 6, under the sponsorship of the Conference of Protestants, Catholics and Jews. Its purpose is "to demonstrate the concern of religious people for this problem," he said, and "the only way to make people reasonably conservative is to give them something to conserve."

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided at the luncheon. Others who spoke briefly were Miss Maria I. Dayoan, director of literacy for the Philippine Conference of Evangelical Churches; Mrs. Walter Knipp, of Baltimore, a member of the National Board of the Council of Church Women, and Dr. Albert J. McCartney, chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

Completion of Women's Porch This Year Aim of Cathedral Unit

Committee Announces Purpose at Meeting In Girls' School; Miss Johnson, President, of Cincinnati, Presides

Completion of the north porch of the Washington Cathedral, known as the Woman's Porch, will be the chief objective of the women's committee of the National Cathedral Association for the coming year. This was decided yesterday at the annual meeting of the committee, held at the National Cathedral Girls' School, with Miss Mary E. Johnston, of Cincinnati, presiding for the first time since she became president.

The committee was formed nine years ago with the building of the porch its primary function. Later other activities were included in its program such as interpreting the significance of the Cathedral to people throughout the country.

The porch is designed as a gift of American women to serve as a trailmark for those of future generations, indicating faith of the women of this era in things for which the Cathedral stands. It includes memorials to women of various States, outstanding for their lives of compassion and Christian work.

The structure is now half finished and announcement was made yesterday that an anonymous donor would match every gift for the balance of the fund, dollar for dollar. There remains to be raised this year $27,000 in order to complete the porch within the ten-year period.

The committee began its program yesterday with communion at St. Mary's Chapel at 10 o'clock, at which Bishop James E. Freeman was assisted by Canons William Bradner and Theodore Wedel. The business session, at 11, was opened with an invocation by Mrs. William Bullard, of Lenox, Mass., chairman for the Diocese of Western Massachusetts.

Miss Johnston's address concerned the vital part the Washington Cathedral plays as an exponent of church unity, because of its position in the National Capital.

Reports were given, including that of Miss Elizabeth B. Canaday, field secretary, and a talk by Miss Mabel Turner, principal of National Cathedral Girls School.

The women were guests of the school at luncheon. The girls assisted in service and acted as ushers showing the guests through the institution.

The committee members joined in the annual service of the National Cathedral Association in Bethlehem Chapel, marching in the processional behind the flags of their respective States.

Tea in the Bishop's Garden followed with Bishop and Mrs. Freeman and Dean and Mrs. Lowell receiving. Mrs. Albert Lucas, wife of the principal of St. Alban's School and Mrs. Frederic Rhinelander, of New York and Newport, assisted at the refreshment tables. Mrs. Rhinelander is the daughter of the first Bishop of Washington, the late Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee, and is honorary chairman of the New York State and executive chairman of the New York City committee. Mrs. Raymond Wolven, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, was in charge of arrangements for the tea.

Hefty Beauties Glorified in Old Masters' Paintings Lacked Health of Streamlined Girls of the Present

Physicians' Group Diagnoses Over-Plump Women Portrayed by Rubens as Having Glandular Trouble That Is Called Lypodystrophy

By Ida Jean Kain.

EVERY SO often some dissenting gentleman goes on record as declaring that the classic concept of beauty was manifestly anything but streamlined and that what was good enough for the old masters still pleases the American man!

Now it's my turn. The other day a group of representative doctors held a confab and chanced to diagnose beauty as portrayed by Rubens. And to a man they concurred in the opinion that it may have been art, but that it wasn't health! That classic heft, they said, was actually a peculiar disease in which the fatty deposits are massed in the lower part of the body. It's called lypodystrophy.

This may be art but it is not health, according to physicians who recently diagnosed the women of Rubens' paintings as possessing glandular trouble. The painting here portrayed is "Helene Fourment Putting on Her Gloves"

A cursory inspection of the Rubens beauties reveals lovely, serene countenances, and beautiful throats and shoulders—but from the midriff on, just plain embonpoint! That is lypodystrophy for you!

Ann Sheridan, movie star, shown above, would have been considered anemic by the old masters but she has the edge on their models in health

Brain Injury Is Cause

The disease is said to be caused by an injury to the brain which affects glandular functioning and brings about a maldistribution of weight. Fortunately, we are assured by the diagnosticians, it is comparatively rare.

But as far as the outward results go, it would be difficult to distinguish between lypodystrophy and sedentariness, which also gets the blame for excess padding through the midriff and hips. There are several conjectures as to the direct cause of this padding. One is that when we sit a great deal, Ma Nature feels it her duty to upholster the lower part of the figure. Then, too, gravity is considered a force in the downtrend of the weight.

But regardless of the other contributing factors, it always seems to hold true that fat collects wherever it is not disturbed by muscular activity. If you do not want to look as if you had lypodystrophy, you will exercise to offset sedentariness!

15 Minutes a Day

Fifteen minutes of daily exercise is not too high a price to pay for slimness through the waist and hips. The following 'running in place" exercise gives slimmer lines to the entire midriff:

POSITION: Stand erect with hands on hips.

MOVEMENT: Run without going anywhere, lift alternate knees high up toward chest and set them down on floor in about the same spot. Begin slowly and run faster, faster! Run for 50 counts, then gradually increase to 200.

An exercise that stretches out the waist slack and trims the hips is the starting position of the track runner.

POSITION: Down on the floor on all fours, one knee flexed and forward, the other leg straight back, as if you were waiting for the gun in a race.

MOVEMENT: Switch the leg positions and keep it up! Bring one knee forward, straighten other leg out smartly to its full length in back. Continue for 50 counts. This is too strenuous to perform more than that number of times for the first two weeks.

Leather Walls

Leather is getting bolder every day. A just-opened exhibit presents it for interior decoration in suede, glazed and mat surfaces as well as in patent leather finishes. It is being shown for upholstery yes, but also for walls, floors, lamps, draperies.

The Greeks Named Myrtle

Demurely the myrtle in yards bless the difficult places and recalls the legends that cluster about its name. For Myrtle was a favorite priestess of Venus, in Greek mythology, and so when Myrtle was pursued by a too persistant suitor, Venus changed her into a plant that would be evergreen and fragrant the year around. Then there's an old English instruction for planting slips of myrtle. "If you want to be sure of your myrtle taking root," so the legend goes, "then you must spread out your dress grandly and look proud" when setting it out.

A Woman's New York

Salvation's Soldiers Faithfully Carry On In Times Square, Despite Many Changes

NO ONE ever thinks of religion along the screaming and vulgar gulch named Broadway. Every visitor feels that the highway is the home of sin, and pretty purple, too. Yet there is always at last one witness for religion in Times Square at night. At massive bronze figure of Father Duffy, beloved chaplain of the old 69th Regiment of Irish in the first World War. The area is now known as "Duffy Square." He was its pastor.

ALICE HUGHES

Early in my New York days a beautiful blonde girl named Rheba Crawford preached salvation from the side steps of the old Gaiety Theater at Forty-seventh street. She later married, and then went to California, where she became associated with Sister Aimee McPherson. This broke up in a squabble. Today a fine looking couple of Salvation Army captains hold street services at night two blocks farther north. They are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Talmadge, and they give out and lead the old hymns with regular apostolic fervor, night after night.

Mrs. Captain Talmadge is a pretty girl of 25, who came from Oil City, Pa., and she and Charles were married only four months ago. As always, music is the foundation of the Talmadge meetings. Then they play a sort of quiz game about religion, with the 250 passersby taking part.

Seldom, says Mrs. Talmadge, does the collection reach $1.50 an evening, although the army spends a million and a half a year on good works. Big donations from friends must come in.

And its officers will never be rich, either, save in the spirit. She and her husband are paid $10.50 a week apiece, reaching a fine total of $21 every seven days to live on. But they don't mind—they're young, and in love, and they believe. It's a pleasure to go to one of their meetings, and hear the voices and brasses roar out a good gospel hymn like, "I Love to Tell the Story."

Dr. Jacob Greenberg, director of personnel for our town's board of education, says the women teachers here are absent just about twice as often as members of the other sex. One explanation given was that perhaps men needed the pay more, and felt they couldn't afford to miss out. But I can't string along with that, can you? Who needs money more than we'uns?

The lovely Morgan twins are in the news again, what with Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's dress shop going bust, and her sister, Thelma Furness, deciding that she wouldn't marry Capt. Philip Astley, lately the husband of beautiful Madeleine Carroll. Those two women are about the most beautiful in this town, to my way of thinking.

The Simple Soul

I
I am so very different,
I care nothing for style or pelf;
I do not pose as others do,
I'm just my "own plain self."

II
Although the role entails hard work
(I often long to sack it)
Yet now when novelty's the rage
It's a marvelous social racket.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthown Torch)

Mr. and Mrs. Claudius Gilderlyly, 2d, are deserting the social whirl for the simple life. "We have bought a little place down in Maryland and expect to raise cows and chickens," said "Pudgy," as Mr. Gilderlyly is known to his friends, yesterday.

The Gilderlyly "farm" is the old Caleb Barnacle estate of 2,000 acres, near Bayview. Extensive improvements are now underway there, including the restoration of the 150-year-old mansion and its lovely old gardens overlooking the bay. The place is also being stocked with thoroughbred horses and cattle.

"Pudgy" and "Snooksy" (as Mrs. Gilderlyly is known to her intimates) will spend a few weeks at Bermuda before entering upon their farm duties.

Masquerade

Debs, dowagers, bachelors and other socialites will frolic on the green in masquerade costume at the lawn fete to be given tomorrow afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Otis Tinfoil at Rolling Acres.

Although the costumes are mostly being kept secret it has been learned that Mrs. Wilberforce Luker, widow of the noodle tycoon, will go as an "Okie" from "Grapes of Wrath" in a very interesting "poor white" ensemble designed for her by a New York coutourier.

Gloria Bigsbee, subdeb daughter of the Pence Bigsbees, who has been kept in the background by her mother as much as possible pending her formal debut, will go attired as "Kitty Foyle," from the novel of that name.

Mrs. Alexis Montclair, the former Barbara Steppit, a recent bride, will appear as "Rebecca," the beautiful and unconventional subject of the book and film of that name. Mrs. Chauncey Portleigh will represent Belle Watling of "Gone With the Wind," and Mr. Portleigh will go as Rhett Butler, of the same novel.

Mrs. Gilbert Plush is planning to go as a Tyrolean peasant, Miss Jennie Van Stiff as a Swiss peasant, Mrs. Wynkoop Bigger as an Hungarian peasant and Mrs. Maxmillian Schooner as a South Carolina peasant.

Mr. Hollingsworth Ramble, bon vivant and man-about-town, will go as Marc Antony, and a number of men, including Mr. Broadhurst Chubb, Mr. Nathaniel Puny, Mr. Josiah Little and Mr. Marcus Short will go as Napoleon.

Tempest in a Teapot

Truthtown's eccentric dowager, Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, has split society into two hostile camps through another of her social surprises. Present as a guest at the wedding reception given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Beetle for her granddaughter, the former Jacqueline (Jinks) Beetle, and LeRoy Sappington, 3d, was one Belnapp, a former retainer of the Beetle family.

Belnapp, who wore conventional afternoon attire, was introduced widely by Mrs. Beetle to Truthtown's most eminent widows and spinsters and was accepted enthusiastically by them as a new "extra man" until Mrs. Steptoe Snark and Mrs. Parmalee Pigeon, old friends of Mrs. Beetle, recognized him as a one-time servant in the Beetle household.

Mrs. Snark and Mrs. Pigeon immediately left the reception and when the news was noised around others followed their example. Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Sappington, 2d, parents of the bridegroom, left in high dudgeon as did other members of the Sappington clan.

"I am as democratic as anybody," said Mrs. Sappington today over the telephone, "but there are limits to everything. This country is getting more communistic every day."

"I see no reason why so much fuss should have been made about Belnapp's attending my granddaughter's wedding," said Mrs. Beetle. "He was more of a gentleman than most of the other male guests and he certaintly cut a better figure in his tux."

Summer Cabin May Be Planned And Worked Out Inexpensively

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

EVERYBODY dreams of a cabin in the woods, but not so many of us get around to actually having one. A family who really believe what they say (about wanting their children to grow up nearer the earth than was possible in a town lot) have realized their dream in a rustic cabin that they'll spend their first summer in this year.

They, like most people, weren't situated so that they could really go far away for the summer, so they bought an inexpensive little farm a few miles from town, but near enough for the man of the family to go back and forth to his office during the summer. With this they got a shanty of a house which was a nucleus for the cabin they now have. The work of rebuilding they did themselves last summer and fall during weekends, the father as foreman, the two high school sons as helpers.

While the mother and daughter of the family worked on curtains, rugs, bedding. During the winter the whole family lent a hand with the furniture, some of it old things made over, some of it built by the men of the clan. All their labors have borne fruit—for the cabin is now ready, and as soon as school is out they will move to the country, bag and baggage, with as much aplomb as if they were going on a long journey.

The original house, with the partitions knocked out and the ceilings opened up to leave the rafters and roof exposed, served as the living room while a lean-to for kitchen and bath was added at the back, and at the side a wing of small bedrooms with built-in bunks.

A brick-paved terrace at the back made a pleasant outdoor eating place in good weather. A rough hewn trestle table and benches and some outdoor easy chairs have furnished this—with the help of shrubs and a border of annuals that will be there with warm weather.

Old, odd furniture was painted bright blue while slip covers were in a sunny yellow-ground cretonne.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Chronic Fainters

THE CAUSE of a fainting attack is interruption of the blood supply to the brain. This results in a complete, sudden blotting out of consciousness, which returns gradually. The mechanism behind the occasional fainting attack which occurs from fatigue is sudden lowering of the blood pressure. I have several times had the experience of examining life insurance applicants who fainted from nervousness while the blood pressure cup was actually on their arm. The blood pressure went down to practically zero at the moment of loss of consciousness.

The fainting of sudden emotional shock is due to a long period when the heart ceases to contract (asystole).

The treatment of a fainting attack is that supplied by nature. A fainting person keels over or falls on the floor, which allows the blood to run into the head, even if the blood pressure is down to zero and the heart has temporarily stopped beating. So we commonly say for treatment, "Put the head down lower than the feet." The nervous reaction of the blood flowing into the skull starts the mechanism of circulation so the heart begins to beat and raises the blood pressure again.

Recurrent attacks of fainting are classified by causes into the "circulatory" and "cerebral."

The automatic nervous system controls the heart and the blood pressure. An important part of the automatic nervous system is the carotid sinus, located in the neck on the carotid artery, or large artery, of the neck. The carotid sinus normally serves to maintain a constant blood flow into the brain by reflex regulation. When this nerve reflex is hypersensitive, fainting attacks may occur because the regulation of the blood supply to the brain is not maintained. In people with this condition, pressure over the carotid sinus at the side of the neck results in spontaneous fainting attacks.

Certain drugs will prevent recurrent fainting attacks due to stoppage of the heart, and recurrent fainting attacks due to lowering of the blood pressure from interference with the automatic nervous system. But in the cerebral type of recurrent fainting attacks, there is no change in the blood pressure or heart rate and no drug will prevent them. In certain very severe cases, surgical removal of the carotid sinus has resulted in cure.

Chronic fainters are usually very sensitive to changes in posture so that if they stand or sit in one position for a long period they may faint merely from bodily posture. We see such examples in soldiers standing at attention and people watching parades.

Convalescent patients are taught to get up gradually over a period of days ,which is an excellent form of exercise of the blood vessels and is a principle of treatment that can be applied to the chronic postural fainters.

F Street Club Parties Lure Dowagers, Debs

Mrs. Stark, Wife of Governor of Missouri, Here for Democratic Women's Conference, To Entertain at Breakfast Tomorrow

By Hope Ridings Miller

DOWAGERS AND DEBUTANTES filled the dining room at the 1925 F Street Club yesterday when luncheon parties were all over the place. Biggest fete on tap was the one at which the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser were hostesses; but there were several smaller get-togethers noted here and there.

Hope Ridings Miller

Mrs. Lloyd Stark, wife of the Governor of Missouri, who arrived in Washington early yesterday, was at the center table in a party that included Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and Miss Mary Johnson. Coming to Washington to attend the current Democratic women's conclave, Mrs. Stark is staying at the Washington Hotel. She will be hostess at a small breakfast there tomorrow morning, and the following day she will go down to the Virginia hunting country to visit relatives briefly before she returns home.

Gov. Stark had planned to attend the Kentucky Derby this week-end and Mrs. Samuel Conner's breakfast for Jim Farley before it; and then he had hoped to come on up to Washington to join his wife here for a few days. But last-minute work will keep him at his desk.

Living practically next door to the State that is famous for its horse races, Gov. and Mrs. Stark frequently have planned to be on hand for the Derby—but never yet have managed to get there. Yet, one year, they went all the way to Calcutta, India ... to see the races.

GOV. STARK is not the only notable who had to change his plans at the last moment and won't be heading toward Churchill Downs tomorrow. The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring had planned to go, but called off the trip a couple of days ago. The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison were to be in Lawrence Wood Robert's party but have dropped out. The Secretary hasn't yet got his desk cleared after returning from his fleet-reviewing trip.

But back to the 1925 F Street Club and yesterday's luncheon parties. Mrs. Basil Harris was among those entertaining, and I noted among her guests Mme. Loudon, whose tailored brown suit and matching hat were the last word in snappy attire; Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, in a smart navy blue ensemble, and several others.

Across the room I spotted Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould lunching with Mrs. J. Butler Wright, and nearby, a larger group included Mrs. Francis Whitten, whose white straw hat, trimmed in black and tilted forward, was just one more reason Mrs. Whitten is considered one of the town's best dressed. At the same table were Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, who expects to spend several weeks in Washington; Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Mrs. Wallace Merriam, and several others.

WHISPERS AND DRUMBEATS: Capitalites in charge of the Democratic May Fete, to take place tomorrow at the Shoreham Hotel, are having plenty of trouble making their plans come out even. Mrs. Roosevelt's appearance at the event will, of course, be a highlight for the thousands of Democratic women who have come to town. But it seems that 3 p. m., the time the First Lady agreed to be there, didn't quite fit into the program planned. So Mrs. Claude Pepper got word to the White House that "it would be more convenient" if Mrs. Roosevelt arrived around 5 p. m. Well, as everybody knows, the indefatigable First Lady generally has her Washington time full speed ahead and scheduled down to the final fifteen minutes in every day. So-o-o, I understand she will attend the May Fete at 3 p. m., as she planned originally.

And then there's a story going the rounds that one Democratic woman who presumably came to the Capital to attend the Institute of Government is advising her friends to spend their time sight-seeing. At one of the first meetings she was heard to say:

"Well, I'm here because I have a pass on the Pennsylvania Railroad and I've always wanted to see the White House. But what's the use of attending the institute? I'll spend my time sight-seeing . . . and know what it's all about."

Mr. Butler Weds Miss Kaiser At Woodside

Couple Will Make Silver Spring Home After Southern Trip

The wedding of Miss June Kaiser, daughter of Mrs. V. Hope Kaiser, of Washington, to Charles G. Butler, of Silver Spring, son of Mrs. Avis Butler, of Casper, Wyo., took place yesterday at the Woodside Methodist Church. The Rev. Ralph Smith officiated.

The bride wore a costume suit in two shades of gray, with a hat and accessories to match. A corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley completed her costume.

Her only attendant was Miss Kathleen Copp, of Washington, who served as maid of honor. Her suit was of navy blue and she wore a corsage of talisman roses. Paul Kreh was best man.

A reception at the home of the bridegroom's brother, George Butler, and Mrs. Butler followed the ceremony. The couple left for Norfolk and will spend several days in the South before returning to make their home at 908 West Drive, Silver Spring.

Mrs. Dougherty Gives Dinner

The Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza and the Czech Envoy and Mme. Hurban were ranking guests at the dinner given last evening by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.

Also present were Senator Henry Ashurst, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow, and M. and Mme. Otakar Kabelac. M. Kabelac was formerly attached to the Czechoslovak legation. He and his wife were visiting in this country when war broke out and are now making their home at the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Dougherty will leave May 20 for her summer home at Westport, Conn., but before departure plans to entertain her friends at a farewell tea party.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

AT A DINNER given the other evening in honor of the Robert Scottens—he is the U. S. Minister-Designate to the Dominion Republic—I met a very interesting woman who is now visiting Washington. She is Miss Betty Carp, private secretary to the United States Ambassador in Turkey. For more than twenty years she has smoothed the path of American diplomats in Istanbul and is greatly beloved by all who have been on post there. She speaks languages literally by the dozen including Greek, Armenian and Bulgarian, but for the moment she has dropped her role of interpreter for that of shopper extraordinary to the entire staff of the American Embassy in Istanbul. Miss Carp says that she spent five days recently doing errands in one of New York's big department stores and that she has only begun.

MISS CARP was in Constantinople, as it was called then, when the late Admiral Mark Bristol was American High Commissioner there just after the last war, and the popularity of the Bristols was legendary. She is also a great friend of Robert Scotten and of Robert Coe, having "brought them up" as young diplomats, and was having a great reunion with them over the coffee cups.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, she getting news from Miss Carp of her family, the Barkers, who are famous throughout the Levant; Mrs. Mondell Gregg in a smart dinner dress of gray, white and yellow print and looking fresh as a daisy in spite of just having moved into her new house; Ogden Hammond, jr., and Stephanus Morris.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, stunning in midnight-blue lace, said that her duties as a grandmother had kept her pretty busy of late. For the past week she has had her daughter, "Sunny's" child, fascinating little Sandra Forbes, staying with her while "Sunny's" baby boy recuperates from pneumonia at home in New York. Now Sandra has taken her pigtails and her charm out to Warrenton to devastate the household of the George Sloanes.

But Mrs. Robbins is still in a fever of excitement for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward Hutchinson Robbins, has, within the week, presented her with a new grandson. The baby will be named for his father, the popular "Hutch," who is now in Caracas, Venezuela, where he is in charge of some building operations for Nelson Rockefeller. The new baby is of distinguished lineage, being a great-grandson of Col. Edward M. House, famous World War political figure, on his mother's side, and a cousin of the President of the United States on his father's.

THE SENIOR Mrs. Robbins will accompany her daughter-in-law, granddaughter, and new grandson to Venezuela, sailing on June 14. After seeing the family reunited, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins will continue on to South America to inspect some of the United States embassies and legations which she has been furnishing and decorating for the State Department and will end her trip with a visit to her family in Argentina.

MR. AND MRS. George Grant Mason are looking forward to a visit from Mrs. Sloan Colt, of New York and her daughter, Katherine. Colt was in Washington last spring for the dance which the Masons gave at the Sulgrave Club for the two Colt girls and she has many friends here. Jane Mason is planning a dinner party on May 8 for her and her attractive daughter with a larger party to follow after dinner.

MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE entertained some ladies for luncheon at Wolftrap Farm the other day to discuss plans for the second Annual Have Fun Again Carnival which will be held there on June 14. Among the guests, all of whom were full of brilliant suggestions, were Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Nordell Lloyd, recently returned from a cruise, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. George T. Pettengill, and Mme. Procknik, whose feature, "Taxi Dances," as furnished by Washington debutantes under her direction, was such a success last year that it will be repeated.

Outdoor Debut For Miss Fish

Mrs. Hamilton Fish and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Fish, are praying for good weather this week-end. They hope that the guests at Miss Fish's debut tea tomorrow afternoon will be able to sit at small tables on the terrace and admire the wistaria vines and other spring flora. The party is to be held at the Larz Anderson house on Massachusetts avenue, which is now the headquarters of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Among the out of town guests coming on for Miss Fish's debut are Mrs. Marjorie Oelrichs, who is enroute from Palm Beach, and Mrs. Augustus Kountz, of New York.

The attractive debutante is being widely feted over the week-end. Mrs. Charles Lea will entertain for her and the friends who are assisting her at her debut at a large dinner tomorrow night at the Sulgrave Club. Miss Fish's cousin, William Breese, and Mrs. Breese will be hosts at a buffet luncheon in her honor on Sunday at their home on Gates road.

Miss Beth Kean, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert Winthrop Kean, will give a buffet supper for Miss Fish on May 17.

Miss Mary Bell Is Betrothed

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Mary Clarke Bell, daughter of Mrs. James Clarke Bell, of Greensburg, Pa., and the late Mr. Bell, to Joseph Allen Trainor, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allen Trainor, sr., of High Bridge, N. J.

Miss Bell was a member of the Beta Rho Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta, at Duke University, Durham, N. C., where she took the pre-medical course. At present she is doing historical research in Washington.

Mr. Trainor was also graduated from Duke University. He attended schools in High Bridge and was recipient of the American Legion School Award and was valedictorian of his graduating class. The prospective bridegroom is a junior member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, having been chairman of the Duke student branch of that society.

The marriage will take place June 1 in St. John's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, officiating.

Guest Here

Mrs. Phillip Van Horne Lansdale, of San Francisco, has arrived in Washington to be the guest of Mrs. William Holland Wilmer. Mrs. Lansdale will remain here until the Garden Club of America meets in Baltimore.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi are in New York, where they are stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Dow W. Harter, wife of Representative Harter, of Ohio, will entertain a hundred of the Democratic women who are here to attend the Institute of Government at tea in her apartment at the Shoreham tomorrow from 4 to 6. House Hearing On Farm Credit To Be Resumed

Wallace, Black Wait Call to Explain Letter Sent to Borrowers

The House Agriculture Committee will resume consideration of the Jones farm credit bill early next week, Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday.

Jones reported that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Gov. A. G. Black, of the Farm Credit Administration, are awaiting a call from the committee to explain their memorandum of April 10, sent postfree to 630,000 land bank borrowers.

The memorandum, though it did not refer specifically to any pending legislation, advocated several changes in the farm credit system which are embodied in the Jones bill. Minority members of the committee and at least one Democrat denounced the Black-Wallace letter as a violation of statutes forbidding lobbying by Federal officials.

Meanwhile supporters of the Jones bill conceded that the measure is headed for drastic revision if it is to be reported out by the committee at this session.

The original bill would have reduced interest on Federal farm loans, now 3½ and 4 per cent, to 3 per cent; ended the arrangement by which borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in land bank stock; prohibited deficiency judgments against land bank borrowers; provided for Government guarantee of the land bank bonds and required a scale-down wherever the borrower could prove his mortgage exceeded the productive value of his land.

A majority of the committee is understood to have agreed on a flat 3½ per cent rate on farm loans.

Amendments to several other provisions of the bill will be placed before the committee next week, as well as a substitute bill proposed by Representative Richard Kleberg (Democrat), of Texas. One provision of the Kleberg bill would set up a farm credit commission, elminating the present office of Governor of the FCA.

Gannett Urges Kansas to Stop New Dealers

Introduced by Landon, He Asks More Talk Of War on Depression

By International News Service

Lawrence, Kans., May 2.—Restoration of the prosperity and buying power of farmers is the key to economic recovery, Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher and Republican Presidential aspirant, asserted today.

"We need less talk about the war abroad and more attention on the war against depression at home," said Gannett, who was introduced by Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee. Speaking under auspices of the Kansas Republican State Central Committee, the New York publisher declared:

"If New Deal policies continue to keep the American private enterprise system on a dead-center, with the income of the commodity producing half of our people so low that they cannot buy the goods and services of industry, you will see national socialism as complete in America as it is in Germany and Russia. We must save agriculture to save America.

"Unless the New Deal is stopped, it will wrest supervision of life insurance from the States and eventually make insurance a Federal Government monopoly. It will make medicine a government monopoly. It will extend price-fixing from coal to everything you buy. Private enterprise, initiative, self-reliance, thrift, independence, will all go by the board as they have gone in Europe when economic distress is not relieved."

Nebraska's 2 Conventions

Omaha, Nebr., May 2 (AP).—Nebraska's Democrats turned down tonight a platform plank calling for a $30 ceiling on old-age pensions, suggested by the nominee for Governor, Terry Carpenter.

The State's Republicans finished an uneventful convention today with adoption of a platform attacking the New Deal.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, a supporter of Thomas E. Dewey for President, was the Republican keynote speaker, while Democrats heard Social Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, candidate for Democratic nomination if President Roosevelt does not seek a third term.

McNutt, who begins a speech-making tour through the West at Lima, Ohio, Saturday night, told reporters he was "very well satisfied" with his prospects.

In his address he declared the New Deal had brought business to a point where it was "improving every day."

Col. Roosevelt said he did not trust the President because he feared his acts represented "benevolent meddling" that would lead to war.

He asserted America could best serve the world by staying neutral and serving "as a beacon toward which other nations can struggle from the mires of tyranny."

Bishop Walls Gets Confidence Vote

A resolution of confidence in Bishop W. J. Walls, of Chicago, was voted last night by the general conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, meeting here. Bishop Walls will call today on President Roosevelt.

Tokyo Envoy Scouts Taussig Fears of War

Minister-at-Large, Visiting Here, Says Japan Desires Peace

Sotomatsu Kato, Japan's minister-at-large, yesterday contradicted recent predictions of Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig that war between this country and Japan is inevitable.

Interviewed at the Japanese Embassy shortly after his arrival here on a flying diplomatic tour of North and South America, the Nipponese foreign office official declared:

"We are continually trying for better relations with the United States. We are interested only in maintaining the status quo in the Pacific."

[Foreign affairs experts have predicted attempts by Japan at large-scale expansion in the Orient, hinging on a victory by the Germans.]

"We are too busy with our own affairs to mingle in European eventualities," Kato declared. He added, "We want to be neutral . . . fair to everyone."

Within the week, the minister at large will fly to Rio de Janeiro to confer with heads of all Japanese diplomatic missions in South America, the first such meeting of Japan's diplomats in South America. He will return here in June to preside at a similar meeting with Japanese ministers and ambassadors in Central and North America.

Turning to the Sino-Japanese conflict, now in its fourth year, Kato declared the new Japanese-supported regime in China is growing steadily more "stable."

Emerson Made U. S. Director Of Islands

Harvard Professor Gets Interior Post Gruening Vacated

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Rupert Emerson, Harvard professor and writer on colonial affairs, has been named director of Territories and Island Possessions in the Interior Department.

Emerson's appointment, announced yesterday by Secretary Ickes, fills the post vacated last year by Ernest Gruening when he was named Governor of Alaska.

The new director will begin work next month, officials said, and will be responsible for coordinating activities of the Federal Government affecting about 2,000,000 persons.

Author of Note

Besides his duties as associate professor of government, Emerson has recently worked with the Institute of Pacific Relations on studies of American colonial problems.

He is author of "Malaysia, a Study in Direct and Indirect Rule," based on a year of research in colonial administration in British Malaya, and the Netherlands Indies, now a recognized reference work.

A native of Rye, N. Y., Emerson was graduated from Harvard University, and the London School of Economics. He served in the Navy during the World War and later for several years was a reporter for the New York Sun.

Resignation of Joseph C. Beck, senior administrative assistant in the Civil Service Commission, will bring a shift in two key jobs, officials said yesterday.

Stephen P. Ryder, now personnel director for the commission, is expected to take over Beck's work, while James E. Hatcher, oral examiner, is slated for the personnel post.

Beck, it was reported, left office as assistant to the assistant executive director in charge of the field service to give all his time to managing oil property he owns.

A drive to line up thousands of signatures supporting the 5-day 35-hour week bill introduced by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, has been launched by the United Federal Workers.

Petitions, now being circulated among Government employes, urge passage of the bill as "a humane, intelligent and effective measure in accord with the tendencies of the times," and "because the physical and climatic conditions under which we work are such that a five-day week in the summer months will be of tremendous benefit."

Aubrey Bedell Carter, organizer and director of the trust department supervision section in the Treasury Department, has been appointed national bank trust examiner in charge of the Third Federal Reserve District, with headquarters in Philadelphia.

Kelly to Succeed

L. A. Kelly will succeed Carter as national bank examiner in charge of trust department supervision in Washington.

Carter is author of the system now used for reporting annual trust statistics on a national scale, and of a procedure manual for supervising trust departments of national banks. He organized the trust department section in 1931.

Joseph L. Spilman, associate chief of the Civil Service Commission's classification division, has been reappointed chairman of the review board for efficiency ratings of Government employes.

Other commission officials who will serve with the board: William C. Hull, executive assistant; Vivian Carlson, chief of service records; John Q. Cannon, principal examiner, and Maude V. Carter, assistant chief of the retirement division.

Tansey Wants Public to Decide Size of Kennels

The public may have the opportunity soon to decide how many dogs you may keep around the house without having to buy a kennel license.

Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, chairman of the District regulations committee, has before him new regulations which hold that "more than three dogs" constitute a kennel. Maj. Tansey thinks a hearing should be held to find out what the man on the street thinks about such things.

It all started last October 17 when Franklin T. Baldwin, secretary of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, wrote to the Commissioners calling for an ordinance to limit dogs.

It is proposed to charge an annual fee of $5 for keeping from 4 to 6 animals; $8 for 7 to 9 dogs; $15 for 10 to 12, and $25 for more than 12.

Senate Puts Aside Measure to Stop Silver Purchases

By the Associated Press

A sizable wad of paper money and a handful of silver coins were used in the Senate chamber yesterday in an effort to defeat a bill that would end purchases of foreign silver by the United States.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, waved the bills and thumped the coins on his desk in charging that the legislation, sponsored by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats, was an "attempt to kill silver."

Three days of debate, however, failed to produce a decision, because the silver bill was put aside late in the day to allow Senate consideration of an appropriation measure. The measure will become the pending business again when the Senate meets Monday.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We can't vouch for a dream walking, but a foregone conclusion is apt to be running when the Derby field leaves the stall gates at Churchill Downs tomorrow. It's Bimelech, and at this writing a wager on the Bradley colt is more of a solid investment than a risk. He'll go to the post the shortest-priced favorite in Derby history.

POVICH

But if Bimelech is beaten, horsemen will not exactly be perplexed. There have been other "Bimelechs" in Kentucky Derbys and they have been licked. There are, conservatively, 100 different ways to lose a horse race, most of which can be covered under the broad heading of racing luck. In a stake race, in England several years ago, a winter book favorite not only went to the post but was leading by several lengths nearing the finish line and was unchallenged, but he didn't win. A bolt of lightning killed him!

Four years ago, Brevity was as much of a pre-race standout as Bimelech will be tomorrow morning, but he didn't win. A 20-1 shot named Bold Venture beat him by a lip. Equipoise was the hottest thing at the track on the eve of a Derby a dozen years ago, but an hour before post time he was scratched. Top Flight, the greatest 2-year-old winner of all time didn't get to the post in the Derby.

Bimelech could win the Derby, but he would not yet establish his claim to being the greatest 3-year-old of the year. There are races that are better tests than the Derby. The Belmont Stakes, run in June is a quarter mile longer. Johnstown won both the Belmont and the Derby Last year but he wasn't the horse of the year. He couldn't withstand the rigors of training and Challedon licked him repeatedly.

Things can happen in the Derby. The horse that might have won it in 1936 when Bold Venture beat out Brevity was Granville. But he didn't have a chance. He stumbled at the start, lost his rider, and was out of the race. But by the end of the year he was the best horse of the three with the Belmont Stakes to his credit.

Col. Bradley is now proclaiming that "Bimelech is the best horse I ever owned," but in the past he had erred on that same subject. He was painfully wrong in 1921 when he won his first Derby with Behave Yourself.

In that year, Bradley as is his habit named an entry. Running in his colors were Black Servant and Behave Yourself. The former steed was the bright hope of Bradley in the race. He bet thousands of dollars on Black Servant in the winter book and not a sou on Behave Yourself. He declared to win with Black Servant, meaning that Behave Yourself's rider would be permitted to pull his horse up if Black Servant had a good chance to take the lead. But that day Behave Yourself was the best horse and Bradley was done out of his winter book bets.

Bradley is mildly disappointed in the fact that Bimelech is not by Blue Larkspur or Bubbling Over, two of his more famous sires. He always suspected that his "best horse" would be the product of either of that pair, not of Black Toney, a lesser-regarded stallion.

A few years ago Bradley had a Bubbling Over colt which he named Bien Fait and as a yearling the colt promised to fulfill Bradley's hopes of a great horse by Bubbling Over. But Bien Fait was a dismal flop and Bradley got rid of him. He began to wonder about Bubbling Over's productive qualities.

In Bimelech's favor tomorrow is the fact that this year's Derby undoubtedly will be a truly-run race. That is almost guaranteed by the fact that no more than eight horses will go to the post, eliminating in a large measure the possibility of jams and bumping. Bimelech looks all over the speed horse of the field, able to make his own pace or lay off the leaders as his rider wills without fear of trouble.

Jockey Albert Johnson, commenting on this year's Derby the other day, made a point of racing luck. "When I had Morvich in the 1922 Derby," Johnson relates, "it was a pipe. I knew I had the speed horse of the field and that all I needed was a nice get-away. I got it, and with nothing bothering me at the barrier I was home easy with Morvich.

"But with Bubbling Over four years later, it was different. Col. Bradley was eager to win and we knew our competition was tough. We didn't know whether we could beat Pompey or not. It wasn't a question of getting a nice start, it was whether we could find racing room in the big field. Luckily, we did, but we had to have that luck."

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 2.—You're a poor guy, see? You always wanted dough, lots of dough, and suddenly and by accident you are thrust into a position of being able to make a million dollars in the ring. Not only that, but you are incredibly suited for it, physically. You are 25 years old, weigh 245 pounds, stand 6-feet 6½ inches, have a 50-inch chest, huge fists and a reach of more than 7 feet!

CONSIDINE

You own a righthand punch that can spin a 200-pound opponent into a pinwheel, a fair left jab, and improving left hook, a big and durable chin and you are fast on your feet. Would anything stop you from making that million?

Well, this is a picture of Buddy Baer, the big, gentle guy who fights Nathan Mann tomorrow night. Few men were better built to fight. But if he wins tomorrow night it will be mainly because cause Mann has lost what modest skill and courage he owned a few years ago.

Buddy became a fighter because his brother was a fighter. From his brother he picked up all that curious lack of will-to-win that made Max forfeit hundreds of thousands of dollars which would have come to him if he had had an ounce or two more competitive fury in his system.

Buddy was never meant to fight. He was born to be the adoring younger brother of a quick-thinking, successful, bantering elder. Somehow we feel that the happiest moment of his life was the night Max beat Primo Carnera for the heavyweight title. There was a victory party after that fight, at Dempsey's. And Buddy, flushed with the effects of two coca colas and the thrill of seeing his brother hero triumph, stood up at the end of the crowded dining room and sang "Cocktails For Two" in his loud boyish baritone. All he wanted to be was the champ's brother that night.

Buddy then became a fighter, and heaven had lavished such an abundance of physical gifts on him that he was a winning fighter. But as the unpredictable Max began to fritter away one golden opportunity after another, Buddy descended with him. The night Max resigned to Louis, Buddy, minus what precious little stomach he has for the game, was soundly beaten by Ford Smith.

If there were some way in which the heart and gall and rankling ire of Tony Galento could be grafted into the wondrous hide of Buddy Baer, Baer would wade through the heavyweight picture like a tornado and make short work of Joe Louis.

When nature gave Buddy his vast strength and his muscular fluency, it meant him to use it on a farm or in some other placid work. Circumstances forced him to go against nature, to try to improve on his preordained role. But nature, we suspect, will have the last laugh.

Louisville Is One-Horse Town—Bimelech

Kentuckians 'Bet Bradley' In the Derby

Undefeated Colt Heaviest Favorite In Modern History; 100,000 Expected

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—If the date line on this yarn reads "Bimelechville, Bimelechy," don't blame the telegraph operator. He is a Kentuckian and Kentuckians, by this time, believe every word starts with B-I-M. Mention any horse except Bimelech in connection with Saturday's sixty-sixth Kentucky Derby and you are branded as a Yankee spy. Pick another horse and you are liable to burned in oil.

This is a one-horse town if there ever was one. That horse is the undefeated colt of Col. E. R. Bradley. If Bimelech fails to win there will be more tears around here than have been shed in a half century of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and there may be another flood. In fact, Bimelech's victory is on my "must" list, because I know the boss won't go for a yacht on my expense account.

But if it doesn't get warmer around here, I might be able to get home on a pair of ice skates. There isn't a pumpkin in Jefferson County at this time of the year, but the frost is going to be on the Derby if something isn't done about it. I could have sworn I saw snow flakes between here and Cincinnati this morning and mentioned it to the dining car steward. He said it was cotton, and I'm beginning to believe he's on the chamber of commerce's pay roll. This is the first Derby week I've attended when you can carry a frosted mint julep in your hip pocket for hours

100,000 Expected

Regardless of the rumor that Bimelech will be equipped with a gallon of antifreeze, there's no denying Kentuckians have the hottest favorite in modern Derby history to keep them warm. Their confidence in the son of Black Toney is justly placed. If ever there was a standout horse, he is Bimelech

Figure, refigure, add and readd, and the total continues to point to Bimelech. But, despite the fact that "Bimelech can pull a wagon and beat them horses" as one former jockey put it today, a crowd of 100,000 is freely predicted.

In fact, Frank Menke, who beats the publicity drums for Col. Matt Winn here at Churchill Downs, says that every seat from the turn to turn of the stretch has been sold. The lure of the Derby is amazing. Imagine 100,000 persons, coming a collective total of millions of miles and spending millions of dollars, to see the Super-Man fight little Lord Fauntleroy or to watch the Queen Mary race a rowboat.

Bimmie Has to Run

But, regardless of past performances, his undefeated record, his rating as another Man o' War, the fact remains that Bimelech has to run around the oval. He has to spin the wheel and test his racing luck. So far he has been able to overcome every obstacle. It seems to be a foregone conclusion here that he will be on Saturday.

The feeling regarding Bimelech's opposition seems to be "how many horses will he beat," but mighty as the brother of Black Helen is, there are likely to be seven horses sent on the track with a "beat Bimelech" objective.

At the track, 12 hours before the entries will be made, the consensus

Giants Squelch Cards, 7 to 4, With 14 Blows

New Yorkers Take Over Third Place In Hitting Battle

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 2.—The New York Giants gave the St. Louis Cardinals a lesson in slugging today with a 14-hit assault that carried with it a 7-to-4 victory and a boost into exclusive possession of third place in the National League.

The Cards were held to five hits, but the game was a knockdown and dragout battle at the plate until Lefty Cliff Melton took charge of the pitching for New York in the third inning and proceeded to hold the vaunted Redbirds scoreless on two hits for the remainder of the way.

The Giants stabbed first with a run in the first inning when Burgess Whitehead led off with a windblown triple and came home on an infield out.

Giants Tie Count

But successive walks to John Mize and Don Padgett and a homer into the leftfield bleachers by Terry Moore sent St. Louis in front in the second.

The Giants quickly tied it up in the third with Joe Moore's single and Mel Ott's third home run of the season, but the Cards got a run in their half of the inning as Rookie Johnny Rucker proceeded to make two errors in centerfield. He dropped Joe Medwick's liner for a two-base muff and when Mize singled to center, he fumbled the ball long enough for the hulking first baseman to lope to second. This was where Melton relieved Hy Vandenberg and also where the Cards got off the scoring trail.

Keep Rolling Along

The Giants kept right on going, Joe Moore opening the fifth with a double and bringing Clyde Shoun to the rescue of Curt Davis. It was the eleventh straight game a St. Louis pitcher failed to go the route and the eighth relief appearance for Shoun, who was today's loser. He walked Ott with a wild pitch that let Moore reach third and score on a fly.

In the sixth Mickey Witek hit a home run inside the park, Terry Moore falling while chasing the ball, and in the seventh Harry Danning singled, Babe Young doubled and Bill Jurges singled for two more runs. Altogether Danning had four hits, including two doubles, and Witek had two singles besides his homer.

A masterfully pitched ball game by Eastern High's Kenny Curles, wherein he faced only 31 men in a regulation nine-inning game, accounted for the Tide's second interhigh victory of the season yesterday, Anacostia was on the losing end, 2-0, in a pitched battle at the Indian field.

Curles, a youthful southpaw seeing his first year of service for the Tide, allowed three hits, walked just one man and sent eight Anacostians back to the bench after strikeouts. He was in trouble only twice, a single, passed ball and long fly putting a man on third in the second inning, and another single and a stolen base moving a man to second in the fourth.

Faircloth Hit Freely

Against Curles' surprising performance, Anacostia's dependable right-hander, Art Faircloth, was sadly off his stride. Eleven hits were slammed off his slants. That included a pair of resounding doubles by Paul Cohill and Hite. In addition, Faircloth contributed a wild pitch to the Tide's cause as his mates were kicking in with five errors.

Two double plays were credited to the Anacostians, both stopping what might have been costly Tide rallies. In the fourth, with players on first and third, Second Baseman Nolte took Hoffman's line drive and pegged it to first, to retire the side. The other twin killing came in the eighth, following Cohill's two-base hit. Joe Soresi raced to his left for Walsh's drive, snared it, and ended the threat with a throw to Nolte.

Of his five strikeouts, Faircloth managed to place two at the most profitable points. He whiffed the final batter in the sixth and seventh innings, each time with two Tidemen on base.

Besides his mound effort, Curles

Mioland's New Plates May Aid Colt in Derby

Strange Slippers Expected to Make Coast Racer Run Faster in Derby, Claim The Manufacturers; Bimelech Guarded

By Jack Guenther.

United Press Racing Editor.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Hoofbeats from your old Kentucky home: Now that we're told Seabiscuit won the Santa Anita Handicap with a mysterious salve on his knees, the hard boots are listening with more than usual interest to tales of Mioland's new non-skid, cork-tipped racing plates . . . The C. S. Howard Derby hope has been equipped with the strange slippers in all his works all the week. The shoes are built along the principle of basketball shoes, with vacuum cup devices that grip the ground . . . Although the better informed railbirds can't quite believe that a new pair of shoes can make a horse run faster, the manufacturers of the booties claim they can clip a second off the wearer's time for a mile.

No prima donna, no favorite son, and no Indian prince ever was guarded more carefully than Bimelech . . . The Bradley horse has a special bodyguard at all hours and four men walk with him every time he leaves his barn . . . The watchmen don't talk much. They leave all the oral emphasis to a coach dog who is bigger than the average Shetland pony . . .

More newspapermen will cover this sixty-sixth Derby than any other sporting event in the Nation . . . The weather may hold down the crowd, but the concessionaires don't believe it . . . They have ordered 100,000 hot dogs, and an equal number of all the other standard race track delicacies . . . Dit has replaced Mioland as the new tip-off horse. The Arnold Hanger humming bird, winner of the Wood Memorial, is generally expected to give Bimelech his hardest run . . . The Louisville merchants, in another display of fine Southern hospitality, are jacking up their prices . . . Food, drink, hotel rooms, taxi fares, and —yes—even shoe shines and haircuts, are getting more expensive by the hour . . . The real sufferers are the visitors and traveling men, who don't care about the Derby at all, but just happen to be in town.

All the Derby aspirants have finished their serious workouts and will be held down to blowouts and gallops . . . The best proof of just how great a gamble racing is may be found in the Derby. A total of 127 horses—the best of the Nation's 3,000 3-year-olds—were nominated originally. Only nine will run and only one, Bimelech, is given any chance of winning . . .

The houses which fringe the track are opening for business. Signs went up today: "Standing rom on the roof—$1 per position."

8 or 9 Horses Will Go Postward In Kentucky Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 2 (AP).—The field for the Kentucky Derby Saturday shaped up tonight as an eight or nine horse affair. Entries open at 7 a. m. and close at 10:30 a. m. or shortly thereafter tomorrow.

Eight were definite starters, and the ninth may be one of Harry M. Warner's California steeds, Sky Dog or Gallant Dream—both rank outsiders. Warner's trainer here said he would reach a decision after seeing the condition of the track tomorrow.

Horse	Owner	Jockey	Odds
Bimelech	Col. Bradley	Smith	2-5
Dit	Hanger	Haas	8-1
Mioland	S. Howard	Balaski	10-1
Pictor	W. L. Brann	Woolf	10-1
Gallahadion	Mrs. V. Mars	Bierman	15-1
Roman	Jos. Widener	Wright	15-1
Royal Man	S. Clark	Gilbert	25-1
Sirocco	Chas. Fisher	Bodiou	30-1

Trosky to Join Team Saturday

Cleveland, May 2 (AP).—Hal Trosky, Cleveland Indians' slugging first baseman, said tonight he would board a plane for Washington Saturday to join the Tribe in the second game of their series with the Washington Senators.

Trosky flew here from Philadelphia yesterday to go to the bedside of his 14-month-old son, James, in a hospital following removal of a piece of crisp bacon from his lung. The Tribesman reported his son's condition "as well as can be expected."

Newhouser Outpitches Hudson

Southpaw Streak Of 15 Defeats Ends; York Hits Homer With Man on Base

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

A 19-year-old rookie pitcher of the Tigers took a 15-game losing streak to the mound yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The Nats put an end to it.

Feebly mustering only six hits the Washington athletes lost a 5-to-3 decision to Detroit and young Harold Newhouser tasted the sweets of victory for the first time since last June. With Alexandria in the Evangeline League, with Beaumont in the Texas League, and with the Tigers since September, he had lost 15 consecutive starts, but yesterday he had the good fortune to be pitching against the Nats.

Despite the presence of seven right-handed hitters in their line-up, the Nats were a puerile gang against the southpaw offerings of the former Detroit sandlotter. Their only hit after the third inning was a Texas League double by George Case, with two out in the ninth.

Early Nat Uprising

At the outset it was all very misleading. The Nats assaulted Newhouser for five hits and two runs in the first three innings and the 3,500 in the stands looked on approvingly. But their enthusiasm faded with the passing innings. From the third until the ninth, the only Washington athlete to reach base was Bloodworth, who walked in the sixth. The Nats didn't hit a pitch out of the infield, moreover.

Sidney Hudson was the victim of his mates' futility against Newhouser. He pitched a tolerable eight-hit game, but lapsed to the extent of pitching a home run to Rudy York with a man on base in the third inning. York also contributed a triple to the Tigers' attack.

Gerald Walker was no drawback to the Tigers yesterday. He scuttled the Nats' chances for a big third inning by committing the high crime of getting picked off second base with two on and none out, after making his only hit of the game.

Small Rally in Ninth

The Nats stirred up a faint sort of last-ditch rally in the ninth inning, which fell two runs shy of tying the score. With one out, Ferrell drew a walk, but Frank Higgins came to Newhouser's rescue with a clever stop of Pinch Hitter Welaj's fierce smash and threw to second for a force play. Case then produced Washington's first hit since the third, a double to short center that McCoskev dropped after a long run. Walaj scored on the hit, but Lewis delivered the victory to Newhouser with a fly to center.

Walker Takes a Lead

In the third the Nats tied the score at 2-2. Walker singled to short left and galloped to second when Greenberg threw the ball wide to first. Bonura walked and the stage appeared set for some productive measures by the Nats, but the frisky Walker attempted too large a lead off second and Tebbetts promptly picked him off. Travis and Pofahl delivered singles later in the inning to get a run home.

Barney McCosky tripled off the wall in left center in the fifth and Gehringer moved him home with a fly to Case, setting the Tigers up in a 3-2 lead. They made it 4-2 in the seventh when another base on balls, a sacrifice, a single and a fly by McCosky got a run home. In the eighth, Newhouser singled to left to score Campbell who had doubled to left.

But with Newhouser laughing at the Nats, that last Detroit run was as superfluous as this last line.

Adjourn for Game

Kansas City, May 2 (AP).—Even the county grand jury went to the ball game.

After hearing five witnesses in a murder case, the jury adjourned for the Kansas City Blues' American Association opener today against Columbus.

Maryland Beats Washington and Lee, 13-8, for 2d Straight

Generals Get 11 Hits Off 2 Pitchers

Errors, 12 Walks Give Terps Victory; Mondorff Retires After Six Innings

University of Maryland ran its "winning streak" to two straight as the Terrapins won a 13-8 battle from the Generals of Washington and Lee at College Park yesterday.

Pershing Mondorff scattered six hits over a period of six innings as the Old Liners hopped off to a 13-4 lead. Charlie Woodward took up the hurling duties in the seventh, and the Generals punched out five hits good for four runs against the Terp righthander. Boy Greyerson, of Washington and Lee, was nicked for ten hits and gave up a total of 12 walks. The Generals contributed five errors that kept the Southern twirler on the short end.

Three Runs in First

The Old Liners picked up three runs in the first session on one hit, three Washington and Lee errors, one walk, and a fly into deep left-field. In the second frame the Terps added four more tallies on four singles off Maisel, McDonald and Keller mixed with a mighty triple into leftfield by Adam Bengoeches, Terp third sacker.

In the third frame the Old Liner crew pushed over a marker on two walks, a stolen base and a high fly into center field. They added two more in the fourth and three more in the sixth to end the Maryland scoring. In the fourth Dwyer and Wharton banged out bingles and scored when Thompson, General shortstop, missed two easy chances on grounders by Keller and Culver. Three more scores came in the first on three free passes and two hits by Wharton and Culver.

Klein, Gary Star

Washington and Lee chalked up a run in the second and two more in the fourth when Keim blasted a double into right field with runners on second and third. After adding one in the fifth the Generals went scoreless until the seventh, when the Washington and Lee batters touched Woodward for two singles, by Thompson and Gary, and another double by Keim that was good for two runs. Keim scored on Brown's long fly to Culver for the third tally.

Colonial Nine Meets W. & L.

With the Hoya nine seeking a road victory, George Washington University's game with Washington and Lee today at 2:30 p. m. on the Ellipse is the highlight of the day's collegiate baseball activity in Washington.

The Colonials will be seeking their second victory over the Generals, with Toby Bright probably getting the starting call on the mound. Coach Ed Morris is planning to shift his starting batting order. The Georgetown nine, rained out of a shot at New York University yesterday, will try to get off to avenge a loss to Fordham's Rams today. The Colonial freshmen also play here today, meeting Central High at Central.

Blue Ridge Meets Gallaudet on Track

Gallaudet trackmen will be after their first victory of the current season tomorrow at 4 p. m. when they play host to the Blue Ridge College squad on Hotchkiss Field.

The Blues' hopes will be centered around Maxie Brown, Red Mullins and Johnny Galvin in the dashes, Earl Stevens in the high jump, Ollie Berg, Washington "giant," in the javelin throw, Dick Phillips and "Bum" Schowe, in the hurdles, and Latz and Dickson in the distance runs.

Bruns Kicks Zbyszko Into Submission

Bobby Bruns, wrestling's No. 1 "glamor boy," dispatcher Karol Zbyszko, of the Polish Zbyszkos, into the happy hunting grounds with a neat dropkick last night at Turner's area to win the feature bout on Promoter Joe Turner's freak-studded card before a near-capacity house of 1,500 fans.

Bobby had been tossed out to the customers in Row A three times before he settled down to booting Karol into a state of semi-consciousness as the fans cheered. The usual display of Bronx cheering followed the luckless Karol to the doors of his dressing room as the local "rassle" followers hurled peanuts and assorted epithets. The end came after 38½ minutes of huffing and puffing.

Nanjo Singh, the old cobra deathlock artist, clamped his clutch on Maurice Boyer to triumph over the Frenchman in 18½ minutes of the semifinal. Nanjo created a near riot with his pet invention, the majority of the fans appearing to think that Boyer was being choked to death—despite the latter's remarkable "recovery."

A typographical error identified as Wladyslaw Talun defeated Vanka Zeleszniak in 4 minutes of the special number of the preliminary card; Zim Zam Zum drew with Dropkick Murphy, the Irish Angel defeated Young Mephisto in 21 minutes, and last but not least, Ginger the bear pinned Wildcat Bashara in just 7 minutes.

Loyola Golfers Beat Catholic U.

Rice and Farrell had low scores of 72 for Loyola, while Legino was C. U.'s individual leader with a 75.

Youth Who Had Leg Amputated Has Even Chance to Recover

Special Dispatch to The Post

Carlisle, Pa., May 2.—Thomas R. Hunt, 21-year-old Dickson College sophomore golfer, swimmer and track star, who is unaware that a tumble in an interfraternity track meet has cost him his right leg, tonight apparently was winning his desperate and dramatic fight between life and death.

Hunt, whose leg was amputated above the knee yesterday at Carlisle Hospital to check a blood infection, was reported by one of the attending physicians as "better" and added that the Bethlehem youth, who was participating in the high jump last Friday when he suffered a compound fracture of the leg has better than a "50-50" chance of pulling through. The crisis is expected within 24 hours, the physician said.

Meanwhile, his father, A. T. Hunt, a Bethlehem Steel Co. sales manager, said "we all hope he will be able to play golf again, swim again and lead a normal life."

While he lay in an unconscious condition in the hospital, Hunt today was honored by the Dickinson College Skull and Key organization, a junior class society which annually selects outstanding sophomores for its group. Hunt was one of the nine sophomores tapped by the Skull and Key organization.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Cecil Travis increases his early lead in the Man of the Month contest for May following his performance in yesterday's losing game against the Tigers. We are distributing points as follows:

To Travis, four points, because his first-inning double drove in a run and because his third-inning single, figured in another.

To Jimmy Pofahl, three points, because his hit in the third drove home a run and because he played a clever game in the field.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, despite the fact he went hitless, because he made a half-dozen brilliant plays in the field.

To George Case, two points, because he stole a base that netted a run, and drove in another run with a two-bagger.

To Sid Hudson, two points, because he allowed only eight hits in going the route, scattering them in seven innings.

The totals:

Cecil Travis	9	Sid Hudson	2
Jimmy Bloodworth	3	Zeke Bonura	2
Jimmy Pofahl	3	Rick Ferrell	2
George Case	2

Miss Spilman Wins Feature At Warrenton

Captures Hunter Title On Light Magee; Christmas Gets Ribbon

By Anne Hagner

Warrenton, Va., May 2.—A well-mannered little bay mare named Light Magee took the hunter championship of the Warrenton Country School Horse Show, held near here today, for 15-year-old Sally Spilman, student at the school.

The reserve award went to Patsy Ann Benoit's Sport Marvel, who performed well throughout the day to win consistently.

Although major ribbons went to the host school, Arlington Hall Junior College's good string of jumpers took the lion's share of the applause as Ellie Leh's King Rock took the class for open jumpers, placed second in the open touch-and-out event, and was a member of the Arlington trio that triumphed in the student team jumping. Comanche, ridden by Jean Holden; Colonel, alternately ridden by Barbara Young and Susan Rinehart, and Cagliari, with Sally Seward up, also scored frequently for the Virginia school.

Frank (Happy) Christmas, good young District rider, did well in the hunter classes with U. S. Randle's extensive string to win the touch-and-out with Randle's Way and take several minor ribbons with some of the younger horses in the stable.

Tiny Eve Prime's Little Miss also had a good day, as the beautifully mannered mare carried her short-legged owner to victory in the children's horsemanship event and placed second and third in several other classes.

W.-L. Beats Gonzaga, 6-1

Rube McNab, pitching one-run ball for the second time in four days, led Washington-Lee to a 6-1 victory over Gonzaga yesterday on the Virginia diamond. McNab beat Mount Rainier, 4-1, on Monday.

The teams were deadlocked 1-1 at the end of the fifth, but the Little Generals scored one run in the sixth and added four more in the eighth off Garland.

Each pitcher allowed nine hits but Garland was betrayed by five errors while Tabb's error was the lone miscue behind McNab.

McPherson's double in the second that led to the winners' first run was the only extra base hit of the game, while the shortstop also made an unassisted double play.

On Fishing

With a continuance of reasonably good weather, anglers fishing Benedict and the Honga River have more than a fair chance of connecting with the first run of the hardheads over this weekend.

ACKERMAN.

Stragglers were taken in both streams last Sunday, but not to the extent the "grapevine" reported them. Through the week catches of one and two were made by several anglers, and one was lucky enough to get three.

The white perch are being lifted in great numbers at Benedict, but they aren't interested in baited hooks. However, it's only reasonable to expect that they might be more avid now that the waters are warming. It is worth a dozen or two bloodworms not to be fooled, for this bait is seldom to be had in Southern Maryland fishing villages.

The Potomac is clearing slowly, and it is also likely that perch fishing will take the spotlight "up the river" tomorrow and Sunday.

In spite of the warm sunshine in Frederick County, trout fishing hasn't been at all what anglers have every right to expect at this time of the year.

Waters are nearly normal and hatches are coming off with greater regularity, yet trout fisherman are not raising the fish. Big Hunting Creek is no exception, running just about the same as other public waters in spite of the fact that there are plenty trout in the stream which haven't been taken out. Bill Dear fished Big Hunting the best part of a day and for his trouble got one 7-inch brookie. His creel was on a par with those of most of the other anglers.

There is no fishing yet along the Maryland and Virginia coasts, as so many optimists have been hoping. It will take another couple of weeks before a trip to the Capes or Wachaprague will be worthwhile.

The North Carolina coast—Oregon Inlet, Hatteras, Morehead City and Southport—however is the best bet we know of for a couple of real days fishing.

The big spot-tails still haven't come in to the surf, for that matter they hardly ever do until mid-May, but they are laying off and in the outer edge of the break until their great numbers give the waters the appearance of burnished bronze. Some blues have been caught, but no more than a couple at a time, stragglers and small.

Keep in mind May and June are the big months at Oregon inlet and that boats, as well as accommodations, are often impossible to get without making reservations in advance.

Cameo Nine Defeats Russell Motors in Post League, 1 to 0

Cy Cydell Loses 2-Hit Game in 9th

McQuinn Scores Run After Walk, Error, Single; Tom Hahn Allows Losers 4 Hits

One of those pitching duels you read about in fiction magazines took place yesterday on the Ellipse with Cameo virtually stealing a 1-0 victory from Russell Motors in the last half of the ninth inning of a Washington Post-Industrial League game.

The loss was a heartbreaker for Pitcher Cy Cydell, of Russell, who until that fatal finale had allowed the Cameo club but one hit—a puny single—and who saw a two-hit game lost in the ninth.

Although he was in trouble as early as the third inning, Cameo's big, right-hander, Tommy Hahn, pulled out nicely and held the Motors batsmen to four hits as he shut them out.

Bootsy McQuinn, second baseman, reached first on a walk and what proved to be the winning run, for Third Baseman Jacobs chose the next opportunity to commit an error. In his anxiety, he scooped up Frank Deavers' easy bunt and threw wild to first, allowing McQuinn to reach third and Deavers to take second.

Then Bill Harris, who had popped up three times, came through with a single over second base to score McQuinn with the winning run.

Russell's big bid for runs was stifled in the third inning by Hahn after men were on second and third with none out. Tommy struck out the next two batters, and the third flied out to Harris in leftfield to end the threat. Hahn struck out seven men, while Cydell fanned but one batter.

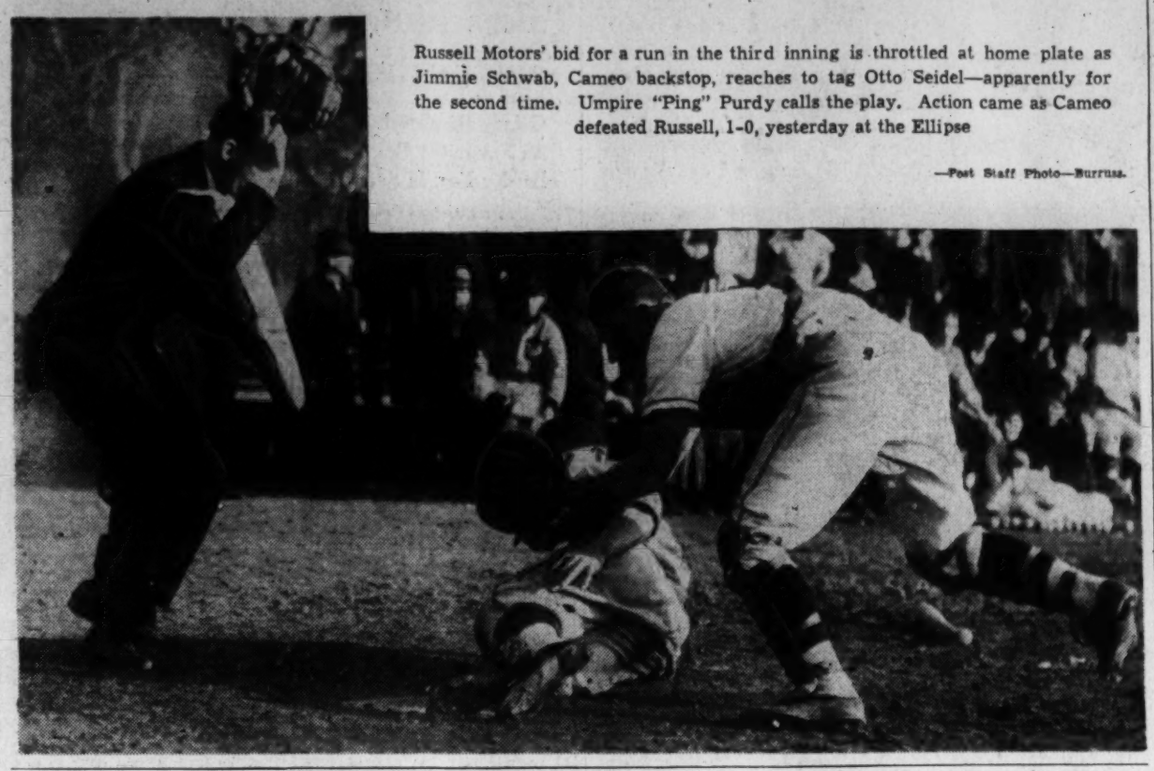
WEST HIGHLAND WHITE TERRIER

Originating in Poltallock, Scotland, probably about the time of King James I, today's West Highland is all terrier with a generous amount of Scotch spunk, independence and devotion in his small body. Unusually adaptable, he makes a fine city dog, companion in any outdoor sport and a good hunter of small game

Cameo Catcher Heads Off Russell Run at Home Plate



Russell Motors' bid for a run in the third inning is throttled at home plate as Jimmie Schwab, Cameo backstop, reaches to tag Otto Seidel—apparently for the second time. Umpire "Ping" Purdy calls the play. Action came as Cameo defeated Russell, 1-0, yesterday at the Ellipse

'Roosevelt' Runs May 11—but It's in Press Club Hee-Haw 'Cap

Chalk up an assist for some 2,000 members of the National Press Club—they're going to try to solve the 1940 Presidential muddle with mules May 11 in their annual outdoor frolic at Charles Town, W. Va.

There have been whispers that there won't be a Roosevelt running in 1940, but there will be next Saturday—right out on the 6-furlong track of the Charles Town Jockey Club. Furthermore there'll be a Farley, a Dewey, a Vandenberg, a Taft, and a Hull.

They'll all be together in the Hee Haw Handicap—a jaunt over the 6 furlongs which will see members of the Press Club astride 13 long-eared mules in a mad race for victory.

Named for Candidates

Each of the mules has been named for a leading Presidential candidate, and the club "jockeys" will be using every form of persuasion but electricity to bring home the winner.

Roosevelt is the favored one, although late reports last night put him in the "doubtful starter-no boy" division.

If Roosevelt isn't at the gate at the start, the race will settle down to a battle between Dewey, ridden by Oscar Hume, of Kentucky, and Garner, with Amory Lawrence, of the Boston Transcript, up. Lawrence won last year's handicap.

Kellogg "On Farley"

Ted Kellogg, of the American Automobile Association, will try to bring Farley home, and other contestants include Vandenburg, with Steve Walter, power publicist, up; Wheeler, ridden by Bill Gilliam, of the Institute of American Meat Packers; Taft, piloted by Ted Wilcox, of the Philadelphia Bulletin; Jackson, who'll be urged on by Fred Morhart, of the Washington Star; and Gannett, steered by George Manning, of the Newark Star-Ledger.

There'll be mutuel betting on the race under West Virginia Racing Commission supervision.

Horse and Jockey	Prob. Odds
Dewey (Hume)	3-2
Garner (Lawrence)	4-1
Farley (Kellogg)	8-1
Vandenburg (Walter)	7-2
Taft (Wilcox)	6-1
Wheeler (Gilliam)	10-1
Jackson (Morhart)	12-1
Gannett (Manning)	30-1
Also eligible—
Thomas (Remfrow)	50-1
Bridges (Jones)	20-1
Hull (Lyman)	8-1
Bricker (O'Neal)	15-1
Doubtful starter—
Roosevelt (no boy)	1-1

The Comptroller of Currency team had 1,688 in Class C team competition, good for eleventh place, while Duds, representing the Dynamite League, also moved into eleventh place in D with 1,619.

Women's U.S.G.A. Official Visits Mrs. Lacey Here

Mrs. James Hjul, president of the women's committee of the United States Golf Association, will visit Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the District golf body, and other officials today.

Mrs. Hjul attended an executive committee meeting of the association in New York and is en route to her home in California, via Washington. She will meet with Mrs. Lacey and Mrs. W. L. Weible, chairman of the handicap committee, in regard to the local body joining the U. S. Association, but it is not known whether her visit would be in the form of a "feeler" for the national women's championship or other important business.

Mrs. Lacey and Mrs. Hjul will visit Chevy Chase, where the first team matches will be played today, and if time permits a golf game will be arranged for the visitor.

Blensign Takes Ral Parr Handicap at Pimlico Race Track

Bedwell Colt Scores Over Nannykins

Montpelier's Matey Is Destroyed After Falling in Billy Barton 'Chase

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, Md., May 2.—In the featured Ral Parr Handicap it was the familiar combination of Owner-Trainer H. Guy Bedwell and Alfred Shelhamer which produced the winner in Blensign, a first time starter. Nannykins, from the stable of E. K. Bryson, was second, a neck off the winner and five lengths in front of Double Call.

Blensign broke in front but was quickly superseded by the fleet-footed Nannykins, which stole a three-length lead. Shelhamer rated the winner along in second place and when the Bryson color bearer went wide in the stretch, moved up on the inside and went to the van in the last 70 yards. Nannykins showed an aptitude for the buddy going and might have been closer if Workman had not taken her off the rail. Double Call was always in a contending position and had no excuse.

The winner was facing the barrier for the first time in his career but was so highly regarded that the good week-day crowd of 9,000 fans made him favorite. His victory netted owner Bedwell $3,300 and established a top line juvenile. Unfortunately Blensign was not nominated for the Pimlico Nursery to be run next week.

Blensign paid $10 and his time for the 4½ furlongs was 0.54 3-5, comparing favorably with the times of previous runnings.

The Billy Barton Steeplechase ended in a tragic note when Matey, racing in the colors of the Montpelier Farm, fell while in a contending position at the fifteenth fence. It was disclosed that the son of Man o' War had broken his back and shoulder and he had to be destroyed. Matey was awarded first place in the 1936 running of the Pimlico Futurity when Privileged was disqualified. Other achievements as a 3-year-old included seconds in the Saratoga Cup and the Whitney Stakes, and third place in the Travers.

Horses to Watch

CHAINWICK—Has been scratched several time at the meeting to await a spot later in week. Should be a good price.

BROWN LIGHT—Has been training well in preparation for a distance race. Should show to advantage at first asking.

CACODEMON—Was poorly ridden in debut at this course. Will beat a good field in next appearance.

Tide Water Oil Settles Fight With Getty

Humphrey Announces Operating Agreement With Western Financier

By the Associated Press

New York, May 2.—William F. Humphrey, president of Tide Water Associated Oil Co., announced today that the long battle between his company and J. Paul Getty, West Coast financier, had at last been amicably settled.

He informed stockholders at their annual meeting that Tide Water had executed agreements with Pacific Western Oil Corporation and George F. Getty, Inc., both Getty companies, effective yesterday.

The agreements provide that Tide Water will operate all the oil and gas producing properties of the Pacific Western and Getty companies in the State of California under a fixed fee and direct operating cost agreement.

Join With Tide Water

Under separate agreements Pacific Western and Getty, Inc., will join with Tide Water in a program for acquiring and developing prospective oil lands in California.

Tide Water, said Humphrey, will have a 75 per cent interest, and each of the other two companies named will have a 12½ per cent interest in all properties acquired in the latter project. The operations and acquisitions of such properties will be managed by Tide Water.

For many years Getty has attempted to obtain representation in the management of Tide Water, asserting that his admittedly heavy common stock holdings entitled him to a voice in the management.

He claimed at one time to control 45 per cent of the common stock of Mission Corporation, a holding company which, in turn, owns about 1,000,000 shares of Tide Water. His Pacific Western Oil Corporation, a holding and operating oil company, and George F. Getty, Inc., an investigating firm, also owned large lots of Tide Water.

Refused to Concede

Nevertheless, the management of Tide Water steadfastly refused to make either Getty or a direct representative of Getty a director.

Under the new agreement Getty still will have no direct representative on the Tide Water board. Eight of the former directors were re-elected today and two new ones, J. P. Edwards and George J. Hanks, were elected to fill vacancies.

A representative of the company, commenting on the new turn of affairs, said laughingly: "Peace! It's wonderful."

The management said more than 88 per cent of the 6,871,311 voting shares of the company's stock were represented at the meeting and that all these were voted in favor of the management and board of directors. It was estimated that the total preferred and common stock is held by about 31,000,000 individuals.

Shares Rise Slightly on Better Business News, With Strength in the War Issues; Norwegian Situation Helps Paper, Shipping

New York, May 2.—A modest improvement in the stock market today accompanied better business news and a clarification of the situation in Norway. The war news was far from being pleasant reading, but there was satisfaction expressed in financial circles over the statement of a determination of the Allies not to let down their guard in other sections, as expressed by Prime Minister Chamberlain. In other words, the war news, as somber at is was, did nothing to unsettle domestic security markets, and the aid of slightly better business information helped to promote a slight recovery.

The market advanced an average of 0.20 point with the best strength displayed in the war issues which have recently been subjected to heavy pressure, notably the aviations.

War shares other than the aviations that participated in the recovery included paper and shipping stocks. For the former there was the assurance that they will not have to worry about Scandinavian competition for many months to come. The British premier's acknowledgement of what had happened in Norway, while not a surprise to any one, confirmed the asumption that pulp and paper exports from Norway and the other countries in that area will not be competing with American and Canadian concerns for a long time.

Aviation Group Does Best

Aviations turned in the best group performance, the most active stock of the day being Curtiss Wright. There was renewed speculation in the oils, Standard of New Jersey gaining a half.

Motors were featured by Chrysler, in expectation of good news at the meeting of directors held after the close. The stock jumped 2¼, closing strong. The board declared a dividend of $1.25, but what is more important is the fact that the company in the first quarter made new highs in unit and dollar sales.

The non-ferrous metal shares were soft. The two International Nickel issues made new lows for the year, as did United States Smelting.

Montgomery Ward continued under unusual pressure. The stock has been weak ever since the recent announcement of new stock financing and it lost another 1⅜ today.

Favorable business news included the car loading report, covering the week ended last Saturday. There was a gain of 2.6 per cent over the previous week and of 10.1 per cent over a year ago.

Rail shares paid little attention to the rise in car loadings, which was contra-seasonal. Seaboard Airline broke into the active list, but the amount of money involved in its turnover was negligible. Great Northern preferred was active and edged higher.

Among commodities there was irregularity, strength in feeding grains and rye was not communicated to wheat, which closed unchanged to ⅜ cent a bushel higher. Corn was up ⅝ to 1 cent. Cotton was hurt by better weather reports and closed off 3 to 14 points.

Italian Bonds Up

Listed bond trading was a dull affair save for a few bright spots in the foreign section. The undertone was firm in almost all groups, but the gains in domestic issues rarely exceeded a point. High grade investment bonds were dull throughout. In the foreign department, Japanese and Italian bonds moved sharply higher, owing to diplomatic rumors that these countries will endeavor to remain aloof from the European war. Turnover was $5,780,000.

Italian 7s jumped 4 points, as word reached the market that Premier Mussolini does not now intend to change the Italian viewpoint. Other Italian bonds also were marked upward. Japanese bonds were 2 to 3 points higher. Norwegian and Danish bonds continued to drift lower. German, Australian and Canadian bonds held around former levels.

Speculative domestic rails showed many small advances, and a few of the moves amounted to a point. Both interest-payers and default rails were in demand. Postal Telegraph 5s continued their advance, but a set-back occurred in international telephone issues. Some inquiry developed for share privilege and holding company bonds.

United States Treasury securities were steady to firm, both in formal trading and over the counter. Highest grade corporate bonds were quiet and steady.

Keystone Auto Expansion

Expecting sustained advance in volume of domestic travel, and expressing the organization's confidence in fundamental economic strength of the Greater Washington area, Keystone Automobile Club has announced a broad expansion program covering virtually every phase of its activity.

This program, already under way, calls for an increase in personnel, expansion in touring, information, and service facilities; initiation of a number of important engineering surveys designed to improve local motor transport; and intensified traffic safety efforts.

The club, it is announced, is convinced that travel volume in this area will reach new and permanently higher levels as a result of conditions both here and abroad, and its program is being designed so that successively heavier demands may be met with ease. The entire plan, Keystone officials state, is the result of careful studies and detailed advance planning.

The club's headquarters here are at 1643 Connecticut avenue. Announcement of the large-scale expansion program was made jointly by J. Borton Weeks, president; J. Maxwell Smith, general manager; George E. Keneipp, southern division manager; and Luther C. Steward, chairman of the Washington advisory board.

Cotton Slumps 3 to 14 Points Under Pressure

New York, May 2 (AP).—Cotton prices were forced down today under pressure of foreign selling, commission house liquidation and hedging. Motivating factors in the movement were improved weather in the South, forecasts of continued good crop conditions and a declining market abroad. Final prices were 3 to 14 points lower. Offerings were plentiful, especially during morning trading, when Bombay, Wall Street and the South had cotton for sale.

Car Loadings Up 2.6% in Week, 10.1% From 1939

This was an increase of 16,178 cars, or 2.6 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 59,330, or 10.1 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 101,431, or 18.7 per cent, compared with 1938.

Increased shipments of all classes of freight contributed to the gain in total loadings which was of greater than seasonal proportions.

Wool Piece Goods Market More Active

New York, May 2.—The men's wear sections of the wool piece goods market turned more active this week as clothing manufacturers began to anticipate part of their requirements for the fall season, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. While individual orders were small, there were enough of them to prompt mills into increasing operations. Some of the large chains bought one-third to one-half of their normal fall needs. Independent cutters and tailors-to-the-trade bought fairly liberally.

Clearings Dip Below 1939 On N. Y. Drop

Decrease Reverses 5-Week Uptrend; Total $5,373,704,000

By the Associated Press

New York, May 2.—A sharp drop at New York, together with smaller declines at some other centers, brought this week's bank clearings below the total for the corresponding 1939 period. This marked the first such decrease in five weeks. A factor in the poor showing was the inclusion in last year's figure of heavy first-of-the-month settlements.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended May 1, amounted to $5,373,704,000, according to Dun & Bradstreet. This was a decrease of 11.6 per cent under the $6,077,022,000 for the same 1939 week.

New York exchanges totaled $3,166,283,000, against $3,963,115,000 last year, a decline of 20.1 per cent. For the 21 cities outside of New York clearings were $2,207,421,000, a gain of 4.4 per cent over the $2,113,907,000 recorded a year ago.

British Give U. S. 50,000-Bale Quota

London, May 2 (AP).—Freight space for 50,000 bales a month is expected to be allocated to American cotton in June, July and August, the cotton control said today in Manchester.

Of this amount, 20,000 bales a month will be reserved for barter cotton, leaving 30,000 available for commercial shipments.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 2 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Buyers who had recently been taking small to moderate quantities of greasy shorn domestic wools in the Boston market were showing some reluctance today to make further commitments.

Caution was stimulated by the recently weakness in wool top futures prices and by a moderate increase in the number of offerings of new wools. In some cases country accumulators of bright fleece wools accepted bids that they previously had refused.

Ralph Quinn Dies; Press Executive

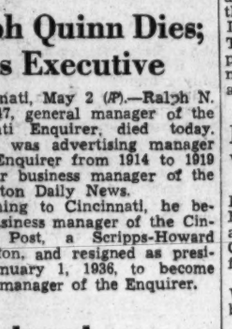
Contract Bridge

Uncle Bing is chief motivator for the Niagara festivities and there is always excitement, as well as fun, when his rotund presence graces a championship. Here is one hand from a recent tournament in which Uncle Bing played, described in his own highly colorful manner:

"Board 22 in the first session of the western New York open-pair championship at Jamestown, with Edward W. "Slats" Claus, Buffalo, North, and Uncle Bing South. The cards, with East-West vulnerable and East dealer.



"The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 NT. (1)	Pass	2 ♡ (2)
Pass	3 NT. (3)	Pass	Pass
Dbl. (4)	Redbl. (5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

"(1) Four Aces count of 13, but only six honor cards. Deducting one-half for one honor less than seven gives adequate point count of 12½ for an opening bid of one no trump. Distributional requirements of 4-3-3-3, 4-4-3-2 or 5-3-3-2 is correct. No doubletons. Bid indicates that any doubleton held contains an ace or a king.

"(2) This response of two hearts invites a pass only if South has an absolute minimum or a shaded opening bid. Actually this call put a lot of water on East's wheel, eh?

"(3) Cast off!

"(4) Whack! Probably conventional for a heart opening.

"(5) Iey, what es en? A heart opening will be perfect. (I hope.) I have my bid. The chips are down. Let 'er flicker.

"The play by South at three no trump redoubled: West opened the spade king. North spread the dummy with the singleton heart. East gasped a couple of times, finally got her breath nd inquired of North: 'I thought you had hearts?'

"West held the first trick when all hands ducked. West then continued the spade suit with the eight and East was stuck with the lead with the jack when South ducked.

"East returned the two of hearts to the queen in the South hand. The board was entered by overtaking the diamond queen with the king, and the return of a small club was won by clattering up with the king when East ducked.

"The three aces in the South hand were then splashed down and the diamond suit rattled off, putting nine tricks in the rack like wheat in the bin. O sole mio"

Dr. Gewehr Hits Export to Japan Of War Materials

The United States' toleration of exports of war materials to Japan was challenged last night by Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, professor of history at American University, at his lecture on "The Historical Background of the Far East," at George Washington University.

"It is hard to understand why the United States, which is in vanguard of the democracies, makes it possible for a nation with a militaristic tradition to advance its conquest of free China," he said. "We are supplying Japan with more than 50 per cent of her imported war materials."

His lecture was the second in a series of seven by various authorities on the Far East, sponsored by George Washington University, in cooperation with the Washington group of the American Council, Institute of Pacific Relations.

Listen! with Slocum

Hard by the overgrown clothes closet they call my office at WJSV lives Arthur Morton Godfrey in sumptuous splendor, working his fingers to the bone for the largest collection of satisfied sponsors in radio.

Because of the close proximity of the squalor of my place and the splendor of Arthur's I often drop in on him just to see how the other half lives. I must say that the other half, as personified by Arthur, works awfully hard. Radio trade papers are constantly carrying popeyed stories about Arthur's amazing activities on WJSV and on networks and through records.

From these dispatches in the paper a man would imagine Godfrey made vast sums of money, and I daresay I'm disclosing no confidences when I mention he eats three times a day with a minimum of worry, but the gentleman earns that hay—and it ain't hay.

In the first place he has to get up at dawn, an hour normally reserved for going to bed by many very bright people. He works in front of the WJSV mikes for a couple of hours, taking time out to broadcast two network shows daily three times a week.

These broadcast shows and the recordings require about a couple of hours rehearsal per program, plus extra voice rehearsals for the singing he does on these shows. Then he has interviews with sponsors, he must make records for prospective sponsors, and he has innumerable magazines and newspapers that he must devour every day. There are a couple of very good reasons for the avid reading. In the first place he does a good deal of political joshing on his network shows and in the second place the need for food at an early age cut into the Godfrey education and he feels that reading will make up for any deficiency caused by the curtailed formal schooling.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

Insult was added to injury when Smoky's father-in-law wanted to know her price for annulling her marriage to Tex. Her husband had failed to recognize his father just as he did not recognize Smoky, after his accident, and the Governor was claiming the same amnesia was in effect when Tex married Smoky. Tex and Smoky had met when she joined a musical show in which he was a cowboy singer, ostensibly from Texas. It was a surprise to learn that her husband was the son of the wealthy Governor and the former fiance of Socialite Alicia Lowery. The two visitors were not very kind about Smoky's little home, where she had always lived happily up to the time her father, Clancy O'Toole, lost his life saving the wife of Karl Hetrick, who had jilted Smoky for another. And Alicia wanted to marry Tex or Bill, as she called him, herself.

Chapter 24

"How much?" Gov. Stacy took out his check book. "Is a hundred and fifty thousand dollars enough?"

He snapped: "Stop acting, Miss O'Toole! I'm in a hurry to get this thing over with. I might even make it $250,000 if you signed an agreement to destroy all trace of your whereabouts and meet certain other requirements."

Shamrock looked at Tex's father a few seconds without speaking. Then she said very low: "Suppose I love Tex. Suppose I refuse to give him up."

Alicia jumped to her feet. "Oh, so you're going to be difficult, are you?"

Tex's father's brows darkened and he looked very important and forbidding. "Young lady," he snapped then, "I've made you a reasonable offer. If you won't listen to reason I'll find another way to deal with you. Why should you want to try to hold a man who will despise you when he recovers his memory and finds he has married you while he was unbalanced."

Smoky was trembling. She said angrily: "Anything I would do, Mr. Stacy, I would do because I thought it was the right thing to do for Tex. I wouldn't do it for money. My father didn't bring me up that way."

The Governor looked surprised.

"Maybe you're right." Smoky's tongue had loosened with anger. "Tex might have married me when he had amnesia. Maybe he won't remember me. If I let him go free it won't be for money. It'll be because it's what Pop would want me to do."

Her voice caught and Tex's father watched her closely, not convinced that she wasn't just a clever actress.

Alicia said impatiently: "Oh, rot! Will you stop emoting and get this thing over with. This place stifles me."

Smoky raised her chin. "There's plenty of room outside," she flushed angrily.

The Governor looked down at the hat in his hand. Then he walked toward the door. "I'll send an attorney to talk this over with you. If you're wise you'll listen to reason and settle out of court. Otherwise, I'll have to take drastic measures."

"Tell your attorney," Smoky threw back her head proudly, "not to come around here trying to buy me, or I'll slam the door in his face."

Alicia said threateningly: "You'll listen to reason and be smart before we're through with you."

Smoky said to Tex's father, wearily: "Please—give me a little time to think. But don't worry, I won't give you any trouble."

He grunted, coldly resisting the plea in her eyes. "I'd like to believe it. Good day!"

When the door closed upon Governor Stacy and Alicia Lowery, Smoky sank into Clancy's old chair, faint and ill. She had a feeling of unreality. Surely all these things couldn't be happening to Shamrock O'Toole.

She realized if she were going to get to the theater on time she would have to pull herself together, and so she got up and went to the bathroom and bathed her face with cold water. Then she went into the kitchen and drank a cup of coffee, but could not bear the sight of the sandwich she had made.

Courageously, Smoky took off her apron and, still in the simple little navy blue dress, put on her silver fox jacket and a navy blue turban and started for the theater.

In the subway she went over the scene with Tex's father and the girl he had been engaged to marry, and her head ached with confusion until she thought she would have to go back home immediately.

She could see Alicia's haughty, snobbish face and hear her saying: "Tex loves me. He'll be embarrassed to death when he recovers his memory and finds he married a chorus girl when he didn't know what he was doing.

Smoky Thinks of Future

Shamrock could not imagine Tex loving a girl like Alicia Lowery. Rude, spoiled, artificial Alicia. Not Tex, with his wide smile and his kind, democratic ways. He had seemed perfectly happy in the little house in Astoria, eating the meals she had cooked and talking with Clancy. Man-talk about all the things going on in the world, when they sat over a bottle o beer and smoked their pipes.

And now they wanted to bribe her to annul her marriage and send Tex back to his people and his friends. Back in the atmosphere of culture and wealth where he had been born and where he belonged.

Even in Smoky's tortured heart, she tried not to blame Tex's father too much for the way he felt about what had happened. In all fairness to him, he was right about the marriage being ridiculous. Even about her having some kind of an ulterior motive.

She was shamed and humiliated that the Governor had been so sure he could buy his son's freedom from her. Maybe she was stupid and unmodern to feel that way, though. What was a quarter of a million dollars to the wealthiest man in his State? And it would give her security and all the best things of life as long as she lived.

There was nothing but Clancy's insurance and a part of that was gone for Tex's hospital expenses. His father would, no doubt, insist upon paying all the bills from then on, and she would at least be spared that burden. But earning your own living was a terrific struggle, and tired and sore-hearted as she was, it seemed like a too weary road ahead. She was so very young, and had so long to live in this crazy, heartbreaking world.

Then she thought of Karl and remembered that she could always marry him. They could start all over and try to forget there had ever been a Dagne. The house that held so many memories was burned to the ground. They could build another, somewhere where nobody knew them—and start all over with the money Karl had inherited from Uncle Augie in Milwaikee. Perhaps, Smoky told herself, that was the way out. If she could only bring herself to forgive Karl for what he had done.

Smoky met Torchy walking up the street to the theater and Torchy looked at her closely. "Hey!" she stopped aghast. "You forgot to put any make-up on. For goodness sake, Smoke, you look as if you just got up in the morning."

"Oh," Smoky sighed heavily, "I don't care, Torchy. I'm too tired to bother."

Torchy said sympathetically, taking her arm. "You poor darlin'! I bet you haven't slept a wink worrying about your husband. How is Tex?"

"Very ill. He has amnesia."

Smoky shook her head sadly. "He doesn't even know his own father. But don't say anything."

Tears came to Torchy's eyes. "Oh, Smoke! And are you all alone in that house?"

Smoky admitted that she was.

"Wouldn't you like to have me come over and stay with you, darling?" Torchy hesitated at the stage door. "I can't bear your being all alone. It kills me. I don't want to butt in, Smoky. But you'll just have a nervous breakdown if you don't have somebody to take care of you. All alone nights, and everything."

Smoky said gratefully, "Oh, Torchy, I'd love to have you! Can you come over tonight?"

"I have a date," Torchy shrugged. "But what's a date? You can always get one of those."

Jerry, the old stage-door man at the Larimer, got up excitedly when he saw Shamrock. "Miss O'Toole," he said, "Chance's office upstairs is full of reporters and photographers waiting for you."

Smoky's face blanched. Could it be possible that the story of Tex's true identity had leaked out to the newspapers? She grabbed Torchy's arm. "Oh, Torchy! This is terrible! What'll I do?"

Torchy had been brought up to believe that publicity was the most important thing in a chorus girl's life. Almost any kind of publicity. She laughed: "A little publicity won't hurt you, Smoke! What's so awful about your husband falling off a horse and getting amnesia?"

Shamrock hoped desperately that that was all they knew.

At that moment Jim Chance appeared at the door. "Mrs. Stacy!" His grin was almost as wide as his face. "Come right up to my office. Every paper in town is here."

"You come with me, Torchy," she said tremblingly.

Chance raved going up the stairs. "This is the biggest story that's broke in a million years! And if you're as smart a girl as I think you are you'll cash in on it. Anything is possible now! After this break you can write your own ticket in Hollywood. And, believe me, if I'm any judge, you'll screentest like nobody's business."

Smoky asked faintly: "What are you talking about, Mr. Chance?"

He stopped, grinning: "Hey, you little fox! Don't try to kid me any longer. Taking in a Governor's son for a wedding ring! Actually gettin' the guy to marry you! It's sensational. And I guess you'll hook the old man for plenty if he has the marriage annulled like he says he will. And that cowboy stunt he pulled! Boy, is that a clever publicity gag? Sensational! And we thought he was a cowpuncher!"

To Be Continued.
